British Guns For Portugal Will Combat Grip of Reich

England Vies for Favor of Oldest Ally to Defend Gibraltar.

London Reviews Peril to Life-Line

Modernization of Rock to Guard Interests in War Expected.

By Joseph Driscoll.
Special Cable to The Post.

London, July 14.—Alarmed by the apparent determination of Germany and Italy to retain a stranglehold on Spain and to dominate Portugal as well, thereby menacing Gibraltar and British imperial communications in the Mediterranean and North Atlantic, the British government is reviewing the whole position with a view to protecting its vital interests in the event of another world war.

It has just been decided to supply heavy artillery and other guns to Portugal which has been courted by both the Berlin-Rome axis and the London-Paris alliance. Substantial loans or credits probably will be extended to Portugal, which is Britain's oldest ally.

A Modern Gibraltar.

Doubtless the Rock of Gibraltar, once considered impregnable, also will be modernized with some latest artillery and anti-aircraft batteries for defense against reported Italo-German guns at Algeciras and Ceuta, not to mention bombing planes from Spain, Spanish Morocco and the Balearic Islands. However, the official secrets act should serve to suppress details of the improvements to be made at Gibraltar.

A bare hint of what is going on behind the scenes was dropped by Sir John Simon, Chancellor of the Exchequer, in the House of Commons this afternoon. On behalf of the Prime Minister, Sir John said the committee of imperial defense (which comprises leading cabinet members and experts of the admiralty, army and air force) has under review the whole question of the strategic events in Spain and the Strait of Gibraltar.

Reich, Britain Vie.

When asked if the imperial defense committee was considering the allegation that German guns had been placed at the North African frontiers and opposite Gibraltar, Sir John said:

"I think we may all safely assume that the committee of imperial defense not only acts without any partisan feeling, but takes into account all relative considerations."

The British have had a military mission in Portugal since February. British and German warships have alternated in paying goodwill visits to Portuguese ports. German staff officers have offered to give Portugal immediate delivery of all the arms she requires and to assist in training the army.

The British likewise offered to furnish guns, but were unable to promise quick delivery. This difficulty has now been overcome.

Roosevelt Says U. S. Would Like to Disarm

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Although President Roosevelt knew most of the answers himself, Admiral Claude C. Bloch pointed out a few things of interest to the President when he reviewed the fleet in San Francisco Bay yesterday. They are shown aboard the reviewing ship, the U. S. S. Houston.

Hints Another Nation Should Call Peace Parley; 500,000 Line Streets to Greet Him in San Francisco.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, July 14.—President Roosevelt told a crowd at the San Francisco Exposition grounds today that the United States stands ready and willing to join with other nations in effecting "a definite reduction in world armament."

The President, speaking in the bunting-draped Administration Building of the 1939 exposition, gave a plain indication that this country looks to other powers to initiate disarmament efforts.

But he added: "We fervently hope for the day when other leading nations of the world will realize that their present course must inevitably lead them to disaster.

"We stand ready to meet them and encourage them in any efforts they may make toward a definite reduction in world armament."

The speech preluded a Presi-

Civil Service Likely to Skip 400 in Reserve

Employes of the Board of Governors May Be Spared by Law.

The 400 employes of the board of governors of the Federal Reserve System, widely thought to have been covered by the Executive orders of June 24, will probably remain outside the civil service, it was reported yesterday.

The board is the first of the "doubtful Federal agencies whose fate under the recent civil service extension has been indicated. Until the discovery of a curious legal snag, many experts have considered that the employes of the board would be blanketed into the merit system when the Executive orders take effect February 1.

It is understood that the Civil Service Commission itself held this view until attorneys for the Federal Reserve pointed to a provision of the Glass-Steagall act of 1933 which will apparently prove at least a temporary barrier to the merit system. The act expressly holds that money used by the board of governors of the Federal Reserve

Lewis Assails Martin Purge In Auto Union

C. I. O. Leader Is Studying Intervention Request to End Strife.

By the United Press.

Chairman John L. Lewis, of the Committee for Industrial Organization, made it plain last night that he does not like President Homer Martin's "purge" of officials of the United Automobile Workers' Union and said he had taken under advisement a formal request for intervention by the C. I. O.

In clipped sentences, Lewis reviewed conditions in the U. A. W., as described to him by a committee of 13 local union presidents claiming to represent more than 175,000 workers at Detroit, Toledo, Cleveland, Saginaw, Mich., and Bay City, Mich., and declared:

"These men state that the members of the U. A. W. will be inclined to follow any course that might be suggested by the C. I. O."

Lewis turned to the committee and asked, "Am I right, gentlemen?"

"Yes," they chorused.

Through conferences and letters, Lewis said they had been "in touch

Italians Aryans, Jews Alien, Duce's Investigators Declare

By James M. Minifie.
Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, July 14.—The Italian people inherit a "thousand-year-old Aryan civilization," a group of Fascist professors declared today after a government-sponsored study. Marriages between Jews and Italians are inadmissible, their report continues, because Jews are "absolutely foreign to the elements which gave rise to the Italians."

Although officials denied that any renewal of the anti-Semitic campaign was envisaged, many believed the announcement a prelude to revival of the drive which died out earlier this year.

The professors, whose names are not more public, stressed that racialism in Italy should be treated purely from a biological standpoint, without philosophical or religious aspects. From this viewpoint they emphasized that since invasion of Lombards, more than a thousand years ago, the Italian strain has suffered no extraneous mixtures.

"The conception of racialism in Italy ought to be essentially Italian and Aryan—Nordic in orientation," say the professors. This would seem to be closely following the Nazi conception of the race, but the professors immediately qualify it by saying: "This does not mean that there should be introduced into Italy German theories of racialism or to affirm that

Job Picture Looks Rosy To Hopkins

He's Optimistic Despite Rise of WPA Rolls to Peak for Year.

Announces Boost in Pay of 82,000 Technical Workers in South.

By Robert C. Albright.

Despite an increase in WPA relief rolls to a year's peak of 2,853,354, Works Progress Administrator Hopkins yesterday took an optimistic view of the business-employment outlook and told of favorable "signs" in the job trend.

"I don't want to be Pollyannaish," he said, "but the situation looks a lot better. There are signs that the relief rolls might come down. It is just a tendency, and I wouldn't like to be too specific."

The Works Progress administrator said there is "every indication there is going to be an increase in employment."

Production Rising.

"Production is on its way up—it has started," he said at his first press conference in weeks. "I am convinced there is going to be a substantial increase, but whether it will come this month or next month no one can say."

Meanwhile, Hopkins announced another Southern WPA wage increase for "workers above the unskilled class," disclosed WPA purchase of $3,000,000 worth of women's coats for direct relief next winter, and again warned supervisory and administrative WPA employes "against political activity in connection with their jobs."

His forecast of improvement in the job situation coincided with a total increase on July 9 of 1,404,943 over the relief roll low point last October. The 2,853,354 present WPA total reflected an increase every week since October. At the same time a gradual decline was reported in local relief rolls.

82,000 Get Rises.

Further WPA wage increases in eight Southern States, averaging $3.90 a month for about 82,000 professional and technical, skilled and intermediate workers, was announced by Hopkins. He said the order "has the effect of raising the entire level of monthly earnings for WPA workers in the South to a basis more nearly commensurate with that found in private employment."

Yesterday's raises covered Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Mississippi, South Carolina, Tennessee and Texas. Only unskilled workers in these same States (and in Louisiana) were affected by a wage raise announced two weeks ago. Four additional Southern States—Virginia, North Carolina, Kentucky and Oklahoma—previously were granted increases in all categories of workers.

Hopkins said no more WPA wage increases "are being considered at the moment." He said those already ordered have no relation to wage-hour bill minimums. In response to a question, he agreed with the President that "there is no question

Mother Appeals For Early Arrest Of 'Rose Burglar'

A mother last night asked friends to deliver her son to police before "he shot someone or was shot himself."

The woman was the mother of Washington's "rose burglar," who has terrorized Northwest Washington and whose name is known to officials.

Hearing that her 19-year-old son was wanted for the bizarre series of burglaries that have swept the northwest section of the city, she went about among his friends to ask them to deliver him to police when they saw him.

The boy, whose romantic nature has caused him to leave a rose at the scene of his burglaries, has been almost in police nets several times. With him, according to officials, is a 16-year-old girl, a childhood sweetheart.

Hughes Calls N. Y. Take-off 'Only Real Danger' of Record 91¼-Hour Dash 'Round World

Fliers Maintain Average of 161 M. P. H. for 14,824 Miles.

25,000 Welcome Tired Men Home

'Never Again,' Declares Leader; City Plans Big Celebration.

By the Associated Press.

Floyd Bennett Airport, N. Y., July 14.—Howard Hughes, quiet, multi-millionaire sportsman, and his four adventurous companions cut the 'round-the-world record in half today, flying a 14,824-mile circuit in three days, 19 hours, 14 minutes and 10 seconds.

Stubble-bearded and groggy with exhaustion, the five airmen climbed stiffly from their great silver ship to face a wildly cheering throng estimated by field officials at 25,000 persons. Their faces were grimy and lined with fatigue.

But they had clipped almost four days from the historic time made by the late Wiley Post in his solo dash from the same field in 1933. Post flew over virtually the same route in seven days, 18 hours and 49 minutes. He averaged 83 miles per hour on elapsed time, while Hughes and his companions sensationally stepped it up to approximately 161.

Hepburn Absent.

Many in the excited throng expected Katharine Hepburn, the actress, with whom Hughes has been linked romantically, would be at the field. If she was, no one saw her, but it was reported he would visit her somewhere in New York later in the day.

New York planned one of its spectacular adulatory ticker-tape and shredded telephone book receptions for the fliers tomorrow noon, when they are scheduled to parade from the Battery up Broadway—just as a slim, tousle-headed young hero did 11 years ago. That was Col. Charles A. Lindbergh.

Tonight a lone, disheveled figure carrying two sweaters over his shoulder threaded his way along Park avenue and turned in at the Drake Hotel.

Goes Straight to Bed.

Smartly dressed promenaders, staring at his tired, unshaven face and baggy clothing, minced out of his way.

They did not know he was Howard Hughes and that all he wanted was a quiet place to sleep. He turned in at the hotel and went straight up to bed.

"I'm awfully tired," he told the clerk. "Good night."

To avoid a crowd of several hundred who had gathered before Grover Whalen's home, Hughes had left through a back door while his

Driver Is Missing, Hijacked Truck Loot Is Recovered

Two men were under arrest last night, but whereabouts of the driver of a truck hijacked of its $30,000 cigarette cargo still was a mystery as F. B. I. agents pushed their investigation.

F. B. I. headquarters in Washington withheld comment, except to announce that the cigarette consignment had been recovered in Newark, N. J., and two suspects are in custody.

Agents declined, however, to speculate as to whether Patrick Kirkpatrick, the driver, had been kidnaped or met with foul play.

Names of the two men held for questioning were not divulged, the Associated Press said.

Operated by the Roadway Express Co., of Akron, Ohio, the truck started out from Winston-Salem, N. C., and stopped over in Alexandria and Washington Saturday.

Rangers to Save Man on Olympus

Salt Lake City, July 14 (U.P.).—Deputy sheriffs and forest rangers tonight started a perilous ascent of Mount Olympus, 12 miles south of here in the Wasatch range, to rescue 24-year-old Roger Carney, Salt Lake City, who lies helpless with a broken leg near the summit of the 7,000-foot peak.

The rescue party expected to reach the young man by midnight.

Flight Indicates Supremacy Of U. S. in Air, Officials Hold

Success of Planes, Instruments and Fliers as Demonstrated by Hughes Gives This Country Edge in Race to Start Atlantic Service.

By Edward T. Folliard

Howard Hughes, as official Washington saw it, has again emphasized America's leadership in the air. He also has inspired confidence in regular airplane service to Europe. Envisioned since Lindbergh's New York-to-Paris flight 11 years ago, this service now is almost here.

Four nations—the United States, Great Britain, Germany and France—are in a race for the Atlantic trade, but everything indicates that this country's Pan-American Airways will be the pioneer.

In the capitals of the three European powers, plans are complete for 50 "survey" flights across the Atlantic this summer. Pan-American, however, has completed its survey work; it started it away back in 1931. Now, with 60,000,000 miles of overseas flying experience behind it—3,000,000 of it across the much wider Pacific—the American entry awaits only the commissioning of its huge 41-ton Atlantic clippers.

Six Clippers Ordered.

Six of these huge flying ships have been ordered. The first is now undergoing test flights on the West Coast. Built by the Boeing Co., it has a wingspread of 152 feet, more than half the length of a football field. It will carry a crew of 8 and 72 passengers, although probably not more than 40 will be carried on the transatlantic flights. Equipped with four motors, it has a speed of 200 miles an hour.

Any day now, the British are expected to start survey flights with their composite or pick-a-back planes. The composite consists of the mother plane, the Maia, and the baby plane, the Mercury, which is carried aloft by the mothership, and, at the proper altitude and speed, is released. Thus it gets under way

20 Die as Plane Falls Into Sea In Italy's Worst Air Disaster

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 14.—Twenty persons perished today in the greatest disaster of Italy's civil aviation when the Ala Littoria airliner I-Volo plunged into the Tyrrhenian Sea 70 miles off the Sardinian coast.

The accident occurred while the big tri-motored plane was flying its regular route to Rome from Cagliari, on the southern tip of the Island of Sardinia.

Among the victims were six women, including two sisters and a niece of Gen. Giuseppe Valle, undersecretary of aviation. The others were 10 men passengers and four crewmen. All those on board were believed to be Italians.

The plane was piloted by Comdr. Braccini, who was ranked as one of the best pilots of Ala Littoria Lines. The craft was last heard from two hours after taking off early this morning. At that time radio contact was normal. The belief was expressed in air circles the plane must have crashed in flames.

Search parties picked up six bodies and the plane's pontoons off Porto Tortoli, west central Sardinian seaport. They were not identified immediately.

The worst previous accident in the history of Italian civilian aviation occurred on April 30 when 19 persons were killed in the crash of an Ala Littoria liner flying from Tirana, Albania, to Rome.

Millionaire Aviator Tells of Fighting to Lift Heavy Fuel Load.

Discovers Errors In Siberian Maps

Paris-to-Moscow Hop Presented Worst Weather Peril.

Pictures on Pages 6, 7 and 10.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 14.—Howard Hughes, exhausted but happy, confided in his quiet voice today that the only really dangerous part of his 'round-the-world flight was the take-off from Floyd Bennett Field for Paris.

"We had to take up too much gas for the size of the ship" he explained, and told of smashing part of the plane's rear wheel a moment before the ship went rolling off to fame and an amazing new globe-girdling record.

Wearing spotted gray trousers, but refreshed with a shower and a clean, white shirt, Hughes lolled back in an overstuffed chair in the home of Grover Whalen, New York World's Fair president, and devoted nearly an hour to answering questions about the fastest 'round-the-world journey man has ever made.

Eyes Clear, Hands Steady.

Hughes was tired, but it showed only in the fact that his characteristic nervousness was absent. His eyes were clean and his hands were steady.

"I've only had three or four hours sleep since a couple of days before we took off," Hughes explained. "I grabbed that much in flight, none at all on land."

Like his companions, Hughes had one Scotch-and-soda in Whalen's home following the 30-minute automobile ride, with motorcycle police escort, from Floyd Bennett Field.

The millionaire sportsman said the start of the journey was the most dangerous part.

Full Power Not Used.

"I was mainly concerned about getting to Paris after the takeoff," he said, "since we burned more fuel than I had expected. I was mainly concerned about the fuel and I didn't dare use all the power available for I had to conserve gasoline.

"The plane was too small for the purpose. We had a wing-loading of 47 pounds per square foot, the greatest wing-loading I have ever heard of. It was greater even than they have had in the Schneider Cup races. (Wing-loading is the weight of a ship compared with its wing area.)

"Our total weight was 25,600 pounds. When we took off I had to go 125 miles an hour in order to leave the field. When we got off, I had to get the ship up to 175 miles an hour to keep it from 'mushing' (flying tail-heavy) and I realized that it would be a close proposition, with the range of the ship. There was barely enough gasoline to get to Paris."

Reduced Horsepower.

Then Hughes, who often has been described by other pilots as "flying with a slide rule in his hand," said he had "plotted a curve" to indicate what power he could use to get to Paris as his fuel load grew increasingly lighter.

"When we started out," he said, "we were using 45 gallons of fuel per hour per engine. At the end of the trip to Paris, I managed to get down to 32½ gallons per hour per engine. That's the whole story. It is the only way that plane could be stretched that far.

"There was only one way to extend that range, and so I dropped.

Steel Strike Inquiry Begins Again Monday

LaFollette Committee to Study Events Leading to Chicago Killings.

Resumption Monday of Senate hearings on events leading up to "the Little Steel strike of 1937" was ordered yesterday by the La Follette civil liberties committee of the Senate.

For two weeks or longer the committee will continue hearings on the investigation started last spring into activities of employers' associations and citizens' committees in the general field of labor relations.

R. J. Wyser, president of the Republic Steel Corporation, and C. M. White, vice president in charge of operations, headed a long list of witnesses called to testify.

Republic Is Eyed.

"This study will be related to an inquiry into certain events of the Little Steel strike of 1937, one of which—the Chicago Memorial Day incident—has already been explored by the committee, a statement by the Senate group said.

"The labor policies and activities of Republic Steel Corporation and the Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. during the past few years will also be covered in the scope of the committee's inquiry."

Senator La Follette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, is chairman of the two-man committee. Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, second member, will not attend opening sessions.

Besides Wysor and White, witnesses subpenaed from Republic Steel include Joseph A. Voss, director of industrial relations; J. L. Williams, chief of police of the corporation; Joseph Gilroy, captain of Republic Co. police at Canton, Ohio, and G. E. Todd, captain of Republic Co. police at Buffalo.

Appearing for Youngstown Sheet & Tube Co. will be J. C. Argetsinger, vice president and secretary, and W. D. Gillies, vice president in charge of operations.

Other witnesses will include Kenneth L. Lloyd, of the Mahoning Valley Industrial Council; Carl B. Dodge, secretary of the Trumbull County Manufacturers Association; T. K. Harris, chairman of the Citizens Committee of Canton and chairman of the Canton Law and Order League; Ray G. Hagstrom, chairman of the Youngstown Citizens Civic Affairs Committee; John W. Hill and Don Knowlton, of the public relations firm of Hill & Knowlton, Cleveland; Clinton S. Golden, of the Steel Workers Organizing Committee, Pittsburgh; Sheriff Joseph T. Nist, of Stark County, and W. B. Rodgers, city solicitor of Canton, Ohio.

Byron Opens Campaign Tonight in Home Town

Williamsport, Md., July 14 (AP).—William D. Byron, former State senator, will open tomorrow night here—his home town—his formal campaign for the Democratic nomination for Congress from the Sixth District.

A citizens' committee arranged for a parade to lead the way to Community Park, where the rally will be held. In the event of rain, the rally will be held Saturday afternoon.

Public Hearing Is Set On Proposed Va. Span

Williamsburg, Va., July 14 (AP).—A public hearing will be held at the James City County Courthouse here at 10:30 a. m. Wednesday, July 20 on the application of the State Highway Department to the War Department for construction of a bridge 1 5-10 miles above the mouth of the Chickahominy River.

The bridge, estimated to cost about $225,000, would replace Barrett's Ferry, now operated by the highway department.

Mrs. Willson Turns Attention To Social Work in Medicine

MRS. PRENTISS WILLSON.

Mother's Health Association Foresees Great Future in This Field; Also Devotes Much Time to Other Civic Activities.

By Christine Sadler

Medical social work is the main civic interest of Mrs. Prentiss Willson, who is particularly interested at this time in the program of the Mother's Health Association of the District of Columbia, of which she is president.

Starting out 18 months ago as the Family Betterment Committee, formed to promote the Mother's Health Center of George Washington University Hospital, the organization was incorporated under its present name last July when it moved into new and donated headquarters at 715 E street southwest.

Eventually, Mrs. Willson and the other members hope, its family planning program will be accepted as an official part of public health work and its "lay" status ended.

The clinic operated by the association holds four sesions a week, with a full-time nurse and a physician in attendance at each session. No charge is made for its services, but if the applicant for aid is able to pay, a clinical rate is charged for medical supplies.

"I can think of nothing of more importance to the women who are physically and socially ill than that they be given the opportunity to plan their families under proper medical supervision," Mrs. Willson says.

Mrs. Willson is past president of the Woman's Auxiliary of the District of Columbia Medical Society and just recently completed her third consecutive year as a vice president in the auxiliary of the American Medical Society. In the latter position her work was organization on a Nation-wide front, with more than 20,000 women members to work with.

She is on the advisory committee to the social service department at Gallinger Hospital, the committee on service to the blind of the Council of Social Agencies, and the health committee of the council.

She is also treasurer of the citizens committee of the housekeeping aid project of the WPA, a project which is sponsored jointly by the citizens committee and the District Health Department. As a result of the project, needy families visited by sickness can have the housekeeping services of a WPA client who has been trained at project headquarters. The aid is a supplement to the nurse assigned to the case. She takes care of children, cleans the home, does the laundry and teaches the family how to prepare balanced meals from the surplus commodity supplies which the Government furnishes relief clients.

A native of the District of Columbia, Mrs. Willson taught in District schools for four years before marrying Dr. Willson 30 years ago. Vivacious and friendly, she is much in demand as a committee leader. Through choice, she limits her activities to those with a medical-social angle. Her voice is unusually nice and is a definite asset in her speech-making.

She and Dr. Willson have three children, all married, and three grandchildren. Mrs. Willson classifies herself as a person, who, in her spare time, loves to look after grandchildren, play a game of bridge, and garden.

"To tell the truh," she says, "I like to do almost everything. I have found it interesting to be the wife of a doctor, as well as a privilege."

On Monday—H. M. Brundage, jr., president of the Washington Lions Club, will be next in the "Working for Washington" series.

Douglas Talks Today on Place Of Bank Group

He Will Meet Frothingham With Regard to Status of Investment Body.

Francis E. Frothingham, president of the Investment Bankers Association, and other officials of that organization will confer this afternoon with William O. Douglas, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission. The conferees are expected to discuss status of the I. B. A. under the Maloney act, regulating over-the-counter securities trading.

Last week Douglas, in a telegram to Frothingham, disclosed that the I. B. A. had decided not to register under the Maloney act but to recommend to its members that they join associations to be organized to undertake regulation of the business within the framework outlined in new provisions of the securities exchange act of 1934, as amended by the Maloney act.

Many members of the I. B. A. are associated with the Investment Bankers Conference, an offshoot of the I. B. A. The I. B. C. has already appointed committees to study the question of registering an association under the Maloney act.

Although the I. B. A. will not register, it still is subject to section 15C of the amended securities act. This section provides rules and regulations regarding fraud, fictitious quotations and financial responsibility of brokers and dealers.

The conference today is expected to deal with the question of the status of the I. B. A. and its members who do not join the national association or any of the regional groups which are expected to be organized.

The I. B. A. is the oldest investment bankers' group in this country and its membership consists of the largest firms in the investment banking field. The conferees also are expected to discuss what the association's field of activities will be under the bill.

Wheat Surplus Crisis Impends, World Committee Is Warned

By the United Press.

London, July 1.—A grave world wheat overproduction crisis was indicated today by a report to the World Wheat Committee that production was soaring and reserve stocks mounting too fast for consumption to catch up.

Thirteen nations were represented at the conference, presided over by United States Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy. The report placed before the delegates today was a bulky statistical document prepared by the secretariat of the committee.

Indicating a greatly aggravated world wheat crisis, the report estimated the 1938 crop at 4,206,000,000 bushels, excluding Russia, China and Manchukuo. That is 216,000,000 bushels over the record 1928 crop, and the picture for 1939 still was darker.

Including Russia, the report forecast a total world wheat crop in 1939 of 5,049,000,000 bushels.

The report estimated 1939 production in the United States as 923,200,000 bushels; Argentina, 242,000,000; Australia, 164,000,000; Canada, 366,700,000; Russia, 1,046,000,000; Poland and Lithuania, 81,800,000, and the Danube basin 336,300,000 bushels.

If these estimates are realized this might mean 180,000,000 bushels of exportable wheat will be left on the hands of the United States this year, after other exporting countries' probable figures are considered.

Secretary Wallace Wednesday estimated the United States' exportable wheat surplus at 250,000,000 bushels, against 100,000,000 bushels actually exported in the last fiscal year. He proposed an "international ever-normal granary" to promote orderly marketing of the world wheat glut, and suggested the United States might resort to subsidized exports if denied a "fair share" of the world wheat market.

[As the London conference opened, the Associated Press reported that Wallace's granary plan would be studied, but that delegates could be expected to wish to discuss it with their governments before any action could be taken and that the conference itself was expected to last only two days.

[In Washington, Secretary Wallace yesterday issued his delayed announcement of the wheat loan program under which growers will be allowed loans ranging from 40 to 80 cents a bushel and averaging between 50 and 60 cents. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation had made $100,000,000 available for such loans and they were expected to reach a possible maximum of $130,000,000.]

Walling Asks Public Support For Wages Law

Va. Institute Speaker Calls on Employers for Fair Play.

By the Associated Press.

Charlottesville, Va., July 14.—L. Metcalfe Walling, administrator of the wages and hours act for the Department of Labor, tonight told the University of Virginia Institute of Public Affairs, that public opinion demanded the passage of the Walsh-Healey act and public opinion must support its impartial administration.

Walling said America has been so far behind "the rest of the civilized world in its program of social legislation that we have been going through 'growing pains' in trying to catch up in a few years with what the rest of the world took 40 or 50 years to accomplish."

Replying to what he described as "talk about the inability of the country to stand the wage increases that will come from the operation of the fair labor standards act," the speaker said, "The country cannot afford to stand the wastage of human life which comes from malnutrition and inadequate standards of living.

Act Explained.

"This Nation," he continued, "can no longer afford the luxury of sweatshops. The local communities, the States and the Federal Government no longer can continue to subsidize employers who are unwilling to assume their fair share of the tax burden of the country, by supplementing with relief the pittance which some workers are paid."

Walling explained that the fair labor standards act says in effect "that persons engaged in interstate commerce who wish to avail themselves of the privilege of using interstate commerce for the transportation of their goods may not do so unless they are willing to refrain from doing things repugnant to the social conscience of the country.

These employers must not pay their labor less than 25 cents an hour for the first year of operation of the act. They must not work their employes more than 44 hours a week unless they compensate them on an overtime basis, and they must not employ children in violation of the statute. Surely these requirements are reasonable and ought not to be burdensome to any efficient, fair minded employer."

Held Benefit to Nation.

In conclusion, Walling said, "I am confident that the statute is workable, and that it can redound to the lasting benefit of all the people of the United States of America."

Dr. Herman Feldman, former chairman of the New Hampshire Commission on Unemployment Reserves, now a teacher in Dartmouth College, told the institute that unless some uniformity is applied through national pressure the administration of unemployment compensation never will become an orderly system, but will remain full of inconsistencies, glaring inequalities and contrasting efficiencies depending upon the backwardness or enlightment of the States.

The American plan of unemployment compensation is in some respects the most advanced system of social insurance in the world and in other respects the most complicated and disjointed, said Dr. Feldman.

Fault Is Stressed.

"The chief fault of the present system is that although unemployment must be dealt with on a national basis, unemployment compensation is parcelled out among 49 jurisdictions without adequate control or unification through a national source," he said.

Dr. William W. Peele, Bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, of Greensboro, N. C., declared that the churches are the freest institutions of America and called for a continuation of that freedom, not only from State domination from without, but also from ecclesiastical domination from within.

"Our menace today is the totalitarian state," he said. "It crushes free expression of opinion; it produces servile leaders and an ignorant, unthinking, subservient population. The dictator overthrows democratic government and absorbs in himself complete control over government, business, industry, religion, education, and the press. In America today the state is doing more and more for the citizens. It is slowly robbing the people of independence, self-reliance and individual initiative, and is substituting therefor reliance upon the Government for guidance and support. It tends to control everything that it supervises."

Constantine A. Oumansky, charge d'affaires of the Russian Embassy, said the Eastern Hemisphere contains no country "so thoroughly able to take care of itself" as the Soviet Union.

Farley Recalls Garner '32 Aid to Roosevelt

Says Texan Would Have Preferred Not to Run for Vice Presidency.

By the United Press.

The inside story of how Vice President Garner, spearhead of a current struggle by conservative Democrats to wrest control of the party from New Dealers, broke the deadlock at the 1932 national convention at Chicago and assured victory for Franklin D. Roosevelt, was told today by Postmaster General Farley.

In the first of a series of stories in the American Magazine, Farley, who, as chairman of the Democratic National Committee, directed both of Mr. Roosevelt's presidential campaigns, disclosed that Garner was not aware of plans to give him the vice presidential nomination at the time he released the Texas delegation from pledges to support him for the White House.

Garner acted solely in the interest of party harmony, Farley said, adding that the Texan would have preferred to remain as speaker of the House rather than become Mr. Roosevelt's running mate. He consented to the latter course, Farley revealed, at insistence of friends who felt that a Roosevelt-Garner combination had an excellent chance of victory.

Farley's first article is filled with little known facts about Democratic big-wigs and the part they played in the high-tension campaign that landed Mr. Roosevelt in the White House and gave the country the "New Deal." Confessing that he was an amateur at national politics, Farley explained how one false step by him could have changed the whole political and economic course of the Nation.

He goes at length into the break between the Chief Executive and former Gov. Alfred E. Smith, but insists that it did not stem from disagreement over one incident. Farley recalled that the President twice put Smith's name in nomination for the Presidency before national conventions and once dubbed him "The Happy Warrior."

In 1931, Farley wrote, relations between the pair were strained over a proposal for reforestation work in the Adirondacks. Mr. Roosevelt, as Governor of New York, favored the plan. Smith pleaded with voters to reject it. He lost, and the President's victory was hailed as a test of his vote-getting ability even when opposed by strong elements within the party.

Calls Smith Unappreciative.

Smith never "properly appreciated the loyalty and support which had been given him by F. D. R. throughout the decade from 1918 to 1928," Farley contended. ". . . for some reason, known only to himself, Smith always had a tendency to underrate the ability of his successor (as New York Governor) even when they were working side by side.

"Roosevelt's genuine confidence in The Happy Warrior was not returned and they were never so close as the public imagined. In the salty language which he used in private conversation, Al had been known to refer to F. D. R. as a visionary and to speak lightly regarding Roosevelt's knowledge of public questions. On the other hand, even though Roosevelt was deeply hurt at the misunderstanding between them, I have never heard him utter an unkind or uncharitable remark about his former colleague."

Explaining that there was no break between Smith and the President over one incident, Farley said that it was "just a case of two extremely able and popular public men, each of whom cherished an ambition for the same thing—to be President of the United States." He said that "naturally, my sympathies were on the side of Gov. Roosevelt in that estrangement, and they still are."

Garner "Stubborn, Great."

Other disclosures by Farley included:

That Garner is as "stubborn as a mustang," but will go down in history as one "of the truly great men of this generation."

That the late Col. E. M. House, adviser to President Wilson, once proposed that the Presidential nomination go to Secretary of State Hull. Farley describes Hull as the "most unselfish man I ever met in politics."

That House resented the fact that he was not in the "inner circle" of Democrats working for the nomination of Mr. Roosevelt at Chicago.

That Bernard Baruch, international financier, recommended that the Vice Presidential nomination go to the late Albert C. Ritchie, former Governor of Maryland, after Mr. Roosevelt had been nominated and that Farley refused. Ritchie was a "favorite son" opponent of Mr. Roosevelt in Chicago.

That John J. Raskob, financier and former "angel" of the Democratic Party, formed a "deep distaste for the views of Gov. Roosevelt, who made no secret of his belief that a few curbs on unbridled financial speculation and some other industrial practices might be helpful."

JAMES A. FARLEY.

That the greatest mistake made by the "stop Roosevelt" forces in Chicago was their failure to accept literally Smith's statement on arriving at the convention that he was there to make himself the nominee. Farley said they believed that the "happy warrior" was there only to block the nomination of "Roosevelt, whom he felt unfitted for the Presidency."

That the Roosevelt pre-convention forces were stampeded by the late Senator Huey P. Long into adopting a resolution favoring abolition of the party's rule that a nomination must be approved by two-thirds vote of the delegates. This stand later was withdrawn and the deed was done in 1936.

That the "before Chicago" Roosevelt campaign was financed on a shoestring. Farley said that more than once we "didn't have enough money in the till to buy postage stamps or to pay off our staff of clerks and stenographers."

Howe Was "Brains."

The tall, ruddy Democratic chairman recounts details of his campaign through 18 States while en route to and returning from the Seattle convention of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks in 1931, in the interest of lining up delegates for the Chicago convention. The "brains" of this drive, he said, was the late Louis Howe, whom he described as the "original Roosevelt man."

"If Roosevelt and Smith were noteworthy for their personalities, Louis Howe was not," Farley wrote. "He was just about the opposite in every respect and was about the oddest little duck I have ever known."

Farley depict the hectic behind-the-scenes maneuvers in Chicago, when he worked virtually without sleep for three days to win the Texas, Oklahoma, Illinois and Indiana delegations to the Roosevelt camp. Finally, he said, he convinced Representative Sam Rayburn (Democrat), of Texas, who was acting as Garner's campaign manager, that the situation was desperate. Rayburn telephoned Garner at his Washington Hotel and asked him if he would release the Texas delegation.

Garner gave him a one-word answer—"Yes." Rayburn hurried to inform Senator McAdoo, in charge of the California delegation, which also was pledged to Garner. The bandwagon rush began, and ended with Mr. Roosevelt's nomination.

Isolated Incidents Mark 'Armistice' For Arabs, Jews

Jerusalem, July 14 (AP).—Terror-ridden Palestine entered an uneasy, unofficial "armistice" tonight, checking 10 days of bloodshed between Jews and Arabs except for isolated outbreaks.

More than 17,000 British soldiers, marines and sailors, reinforced by policemen, threw guards around the most troubled spots.

Arab strikes continued in the northern area. Violence was renewed at Haifa. After an Arab worker was wounded near the law courts, a Jewish bus was fired on while descending Mount Carmel.

A Jewish physician in the bus was wounded. Police arrested an Arab and the driver, who returned the fire.

Authorities said eight Jewish shops were robbed and burned.

Arthur Mullen Dies; Roosevelt Leader in 1932

Forced to Quit Committee in 1934 Because of Law Practice Here.

Omaha, Nebr., July 14.—Arthur F. Mullen, 65, floor leader for President Roosevelt at the 1932 Democratis national convention, died at his home here today. Physicians said death was due to gastric ulcers.

Mullen, who entered Nebraska politics when 17 years old, served as vice chairman of the National Democratic Campaign Committee following the convention, and, after President Roosevelt's election, began practice of law at Washington.

Later President Roosevelt asked Mullen, because of his Washington law practice, to resign as Nebraska national committeeman, a post Mullen held from 1916 to 1920 and regained in 1924. Mullen first declined to resign, but later gave up his committee post.

Born in Canada.

Canadian-born descendant of Irish grandparents, Mullen at an early age moved to Nebraska with his family. He studied at the Nebraska Normal School and then took his bachelor of laws degree from the University of Michigan in 1900.

Returning to Nebraska after graduation, the young lawyer became Holt County attorney at 28. As attorney general of the State in 1910-1911 he rose to power in the Nebraska Democratic organization and served in the Nebraska delegation at the historic Baltimore convention of 1912.

A fervent supporter of Speaker Champ Clark's bid for the Presidential nomination, Mullen never forgave William Jennings Bryan for his speech which started the stampede to Woodrow Wilson. Mullen's feud with the Great Commoner and his brother, Charles Bryan, was a changeless feature of the Nebraska political scenery for more than two decades after the Baltimore convention.

Forced to Resign.

Mullen became a member of the Democratic National Committee in 1916 and, except for the period from 1920 to 1924, held the post until his forced resignation four years ago.

His political career reached its climax at the Chicago convention in 1932 when, as floor manager, he utilized his power over the seating of delegates to give maximum effectiveness to the Roosevelt bloc. Supporters of the New York Governor were assigned to the most conspicuous positions in the hall, the two Garner delegations from Texas and California were placed at opposite sides of the vast floor, and Al Smith men were screened by placard-wavers pledged to Roosevelt.

Mullen's bulky figure, topped with shaggy hair, became increasingly familiar through the Chicago convention as he rose to make all the motions for the Roosevelt contingent, and once, by refusing to allow an adjournment, kept delegates up all night. After Roosevelt's nomination, the Nebraska lawyer was named vice chairman of the Democratic National Committee.

Got Even With Bryan.

In 1934 Mullen won his long-sought revenge for the defeat of Champ Clark in 1912, when he successfully backed Edward R. Burke, then a Nebraska Representative, for the Democratic senatorial nomination against Charles Bryan. In the same year President Roosevelt requested Mullen's resignation from the Democratic National Committee, because of his Washington law practice, and the Nebraskan reluctantly acceded, after hanging onto his post for several months after the ban.

Mullen's last public intervention in Nebraska politics came two years ago, when he urged voters to return George W. Norris, running as an independent candidate, to the Senate. Mullen and Norris previously had been known as political foes.

He was a member of the American Bar Association and the Nebraska and New York City associations. He belonged to the National Press Club in Washington.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Mary Dolan Mullen, and a son, Arthur J. Mullen.

New Civil Aeronautics Authority Meets

Grant Mason, manager of Pan-American Airways; Thomas J. Hardin, pilot, American Airlines; Oswald Ryan and Sumter Smith, chief of the WPA airport section.

C.I.O. Asks Ickes To Control Jobs

The police-labor conflict in New Orleans yesterday was injected into the non-Federal PWA program by the C. I. O., which called upon PWA Administrator Ickes, in granting funds to projects in Louisiana, to keep them wholly under control of his Federal staff.

In a wire to Ickes, Lee Pressman, C. I. O. general counsel, noting the presence of Gov. Richard W. Leche of Louisiana in Washington seeking PWA funds, asked for strict Federal control of all Louisiana projects "so that workers on them will not be subjected to the barbaric and un-American treatment which continues to be accorded to workers in New Orleans who attempt to pursue their organizing activities in accord with their constitutional guarantees."

He said that "because we want no possible jobs for unemployed workers sacrificed we do not ask you to deny such funds."

9-Hour Day to Apply To Va. Beauty Shops

Richmond, Va., July 14 (AP).—Beauty shops are work shops, Attorney General A. P. Staples ruled today, and therefore the nine-hour day, 48-hour week law is applicable to women who work in them.

Contest Threatens In Oklahoma Race

Oklahoma City, July 14 (AP).—Leon C. Phillips, New Deal advocate, won the Democratic nomination for Governor of Oklahoma by 2,921 votes, complete unofficial returns from Tuesday's primary indicated today as one opponent raised the cry of "irregularities." W. S. Key, who finished second, declared there were "reports of irregularities" and a campaign aid said a Federal inquiry might be asked.

William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, outspoken critic of the New Deal, finished in third place. Returns gave Phillips 178,673 votes, Key 175,752, and Murray 147,771.

Fight for Lottery In U. S. Renewed By Mrs. Harriman

Baltimore, July 14 (AP).—Mrs. Oliver Harriman, wealthy New York matron whose fight for legalization of lotteries for charity brought her counter to the Federal Government last year, launched a new national campaign today for domestic sweepstakes and lotteries."

Mrs. Harriman and two Park avenue friends, Mrs. Mary Derieux and Mrs. Charles Hopper, filed incorporation papers with the Maryland tax commission for the "National Council for Legal American Sweepstakes."

Funds derived from the United States sweepstake, the incorporation papers said, would "be expended in the United States for worthy objects."

Ickes Defends PWA Policy on Power Grants

Says He'll Decide on 'Fair and Reasonable Offers' After Hearings.

Harold L. Ickes, Secretary of the Interior and Public Works administrator, yesterday defended the procedure he has laid down for approving "conditional" allotments to municipalities for public power projects in communities already served by privately owned utilities.

Ickes stood pat on allotments already announced, totaling $9,527,995 for 21 competitive projects, when he said:

"I have never urged anyone, anywhere, any time to file an application for a power project, but I have always held that a municipality has the right to decide what it wants in the way of a utility development. After all, 55 per cent of the amount is their money."

In acknowledging that he, as Public Works administrator, would be final judge on the subject involving the power policy of the revived PWA, Ickes said his procedure was no more than designed to carry out the purpose and intent of Congress.

$43,000,000 a Day.

By the Associated Press.

Secretary Ickes reported yesterday PWA was "driving swiftly forward" in its lending-spending attack on the depression, approving construction projects at the average rate of $43,000,000 a day.

At the same time the PWA announced approval of allotments of $8,710,100 for Federal projects and grants and loans totaling $3,869,534 for 28 new non-Federal projects.

Yesterday's non-Federal allotments raised the total in that category to $312,398,942, including both loans and grants. Total estimated cost of all PWA projects under the new program is slightly more than $750,000,000.

Local Allotments.

Allotments to the Navy Department's Bureau of Yards and Docks included:

Maryland—Naval Academy, Annapolis, extension of roads and services, $100,000.

Maryland—Naval radio station, Annapolis, quarters for operators, $30,000.

Virginia—Training station, Norfolk, messhall and galley building, $100,000, and trade school building and barracks, $350,000.

Virginia—Naval air station, Norfolk, extension of barracks and mess hall buildings, $200,000; replacement of barracks buildings, $600,000, and gasoline storage, $45,000; naval ammunition depot, St. Juliens Creek, rehabilitation of buildings, $150,000.

To the Agriculture Department Ickes gave:

Bureau of Plant Industry, near Beltsville, Md., construction of new greenhouses, $300,000, and central heating plant for horticultural field station, $130,000; Arlington Farm, Va., machinery storage buildings and repair to laboratory building, $14,000.

Bureau of Animal Industry—Beltsville, Md., construction of cattle barn, sheep barn and hog barn, $56,000.

Bureau of Chemistry and Soils—Beltsville, Md., construction of laboratory building and installation of equipment for fertilizer investigations at Beltsville research center, $650,000.

Civil Service May Skip 400 in Reserve

is not to be regarded as Government funds.

On the strength of this provision, it is claimed that the President has no power by Executive order to place the board's employes under civil service. It is held by those fighting extension of civil service to the Federal Reserve—and their view is now likely to be accepted by the commission—that the Glass-Steagall act in this respect overrules the original Federal Reserve act of 1913, under which the President would have the right to blanket Federal Reserve employes.

Data will be submitted to the legal adviser of the commission today, but informed quarters said the outcome was fairly certain.

Meanwhile, public discussion of the Executive order extending the civil service continued yesterday, with two meetings sponsored by locals of the United Federal Workers of America.

"Federal employes, as a whole, are a race of calamity howlers," said Robert Sherman, president of Commerce Local 23, U. F. W. A., at a joint meeting with Treasury Local 11.

Declaring that Government workers frequently give voice to complaints, "but not to people able to do something about it," Sherman urged his hearers to join the union.

President Harry B. Mitchell of the Civil Service Commission, Jacob Baker, president of U. F. W. A., and Edward J. Gardner, chief of the division of personnel of the Department of Commerce, discussed the Executive orders.

Mitchell stressed the importance of efficiency in the public service, adding that there is a "growing impression that democratic governments can't be as efficient as dictatorships or private industry." The Italians, he said, are sacrificing liberty, individuality, everything—for social security." He declared that, by proving their efficiency, Government employes "can do more to perpetuate the democratic ideal than any other group in the United States." He urged passage of legislation placing all Government agencies under the merit system. The probation period referred to in the order may be as much as a year for the higher positions, he predicted.

A democratic government ought to be a model employer to set an example for the country as a whole, said Baker. He urged his union to participate actively in the working out of the Executive orders.

Baker told his audience that "you must expect grievances to arise in any active governmental agency." He approved the establishment of committees for the settlement of grievances.

Ismar Baruch, chief of personnel classification division of the Civil Service Commission; John B. Switzer, chief clerk and personnel officer of the I. C. C. and Leo Hochstetter, of the U. F. W. A., spoke at a meeting of I. C. C. Local 7.

about the South being the Nation's No 1 economic problem."

"Recent studies have shown us that WPA workers, on the whole, earn only about 57 per cent as much as workers in private employment," he said. "In the South, WPA workers have been receiving but 48 per cent of the national average. With this increase in force, their earnings now are raised to approximately 53 per cent of the norm."

Greatest benefits from the raise (totaling about $320,000 a month), will be felt in Arkansas, where the increase will mean an additional $4.55 a month to 9,700 workers in the three classifications above the unskilled class. Increases in other States will average $4 a month per worker in Alabama; $4.35 in Florida; $3.70 in Georgia; $4.15 in Texas; $4.25 in Mississippi; $1.69 in Tennessee and $3.30 in South Carolina.

Increases brought the highest wage paid for this class of work in these States to $79 a month, against $75 previously.

Louisiana was not included because "equivalent" adjustment had been authorized previously.

Hopkins' announcement of a $3,000,000 purchase of women's coats, he said, served the dual purpose of taking "a serious oversupply" off manufacturers' shelves, and providing winter wear for needy women "who would not otherwise buy them."

The purchase raised expenditures from the $25,000,000 direct relief appropriation in the 1938 relief act to $15,000,000, some $10,000,000 having previously been spent for men's wear.

Talks With Dubinsky.

Hopkins said his step followed conversations with David Dubinsky, of the Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. He said the coats were purchased at wholesale and below cost prices of $5 or $6 apiece, and would retail otherwise at $18 to $20.

Although he said the WPA purchase would have the effect of reducing inventories, and "might" raise the price of other coats in this class, Hopkins said he did not regard it as a "subsidy" to the industry. He said there was no "new stuff" in the lot, but he "wasn't worried" about the styles.

Hopkins' "additional warning" against political activity by WPA administrative employes, followed charges and denials of political maneuvering by WPA workers in Kentucky, and Senate Campaign Investigating Committee disapproval of a speech by Deputy WPA Administrator Williams advising organized relief workers to "keep our friends in power."

He wrote a letter to supervisory workers advising them that the relief act prohibited them from running for local elective office "in any primary or general election" and from serving as campaign managers or assistants for other candidates. He declared the order was "simply to give legal status to a practice which has been observed in the WPA from the beginning, but which previously had been covered only under general regulations."

WPA extended the relief bill ban to apply likewise to candidates and campaign managers for Federal offices. Hopkins also served notice that no person holding an elective office requiring time off from WPA and paying more than $200 a year should be employed.

Hopkins WPA employment figures showed that relief rolls in the District had increased 3,322 since last October to 8,844 on July 9. Virginia rolls in the same period rose 8,085 to a 24,379 total, while Maryland rolls advanced from 8,633 last October to 14,543 July 9.

M. E. Zepp, 55, Dies; Circulation Chief

Maynard E. Zepp, 55, one-time circulation manager of The Washington Post and founder of the Newspaper Boys of America, died at his home in Indianapolis after an extended illness, the Associated Press reported yesterday.

One of the best-known executives in his field, Mr. Zepp served as assistant circulation director of the Chicago Daily News and held other executive positions with the Hearst and Scripps-Howard organizations. He was general business manager of the Washington Daily News in the early 1920s, leaving that position in 1923.

Surviving are his widow, his mother and a son, all of Indianapolis. Funeral services will be held tonight in Indianapolis, and his body will be cremated.

Deposed TVA Chief Arrives for Inquiry

Knoxville, Tenn., July 14 (AP).—Dr. Arthur E. Morgan, deposed chairman of the Tennessee Valley Authority, arrived unexpectedly here today to confer with attorneys of the Congressional TVA investigating committee.

He came at call of committee counsel, and a reliable source indicated he would be among first witnesses to testify at hearings which will probably begin next week.

500,000 Line San Francisco Streets to See Roosevelt

Roosevelt

dential review of the United States fleet, more than threescore warships anchored in San Francisco Bay. The Chief Executive also gave other nations a pointed reminder that this Nation's warships are something more than a symbol.

He described them as a "potent, ever-ready fact in the national defense of the United States."

For nearly an hour, the President stood at a vantage point on the cruiser Houston to review the fleet. The Houston swept up and down a triple line of fighting ships. Thirty-two of the assembled 66 ships each fired a Presidential salute of 21 guns as the Houston drew near—a total of 672 blank shots, all from 3-inch guns.

Coast Guard patrols cleared the middle harbor of all traffic for the review period. Thousands of persons stood along the piers and climbed to the roofs of waterfront buildings to watch.

Ferryboats were stopped near the Bay Bridge, a short distance north of the review area, and spectators crowded the rails to get a view of the ceremony.

An inspection of Mare Island Navy Yard, a short pause for a Presidential salute at Fort Mason on San Francisco's north beach and a ride through miles of humanity-lined streets comprised Mr. Roosevelt's schedule in the morning.

He was hailed and cheered all along the route. The office of Chief of Police William J. Quinn estimated 500,000 persons saw the Chief Executive between the time he entered the city by way of the Golden Gate Bridge and the time he left over the big San Francisco-Oakland Bridge to reach Treasure Island, the man-made exposition ground in midbay.

Mr. Roosevelt was introduced to the 1,000 luncheon guests by Leland Cutler, president of the exposition. The crowd, jammed into the long, semicircular room, shrieked, whistled and applauded as the President stood before a battery of microphones. The President's statements about disarmament, however, passed without a single handclap.

Discussing armament spending, the President said that "every right-thinking man and woman in the United States wishes that it were safe for the Nation to spend less of our national budget on armed forces."

"All know," he continued, "that we are faced with a condition and not a theory—and that the condition is not of our own choosing.

"Money spent on armaments does not create permanent income-producing wealth, and about the only satisfaction we can take out of the present world situation is that the proportion of our national income that we spend on armaments is only a quarter or a third of the proportion that most of the other great nations of the world are spending at this time."

The flag bedecked room was hushed suddenly when the President began speaking and persons in the gallery—where several score visitors mingled with reporters and cameramen—edged toward the rail in such numbers that Secret Service men warned them back.

Mr. Roosevelt made no mention of Senator William G. McAdoo, his staunch supporter who is seeking renomination in the California Democratic primary August 30.

Besides Senator McAdoo, Gov. Merriam and Senator Hiram Johnson those at the speakers' table included Navy admirals and Mr. and Mrs. John Boettiger. Mrs. Boettiger is the President's daughter.

The President deviated from his prepared address slightly to say:

"Rarely in my life have I been thrilled as I am today—meeting old friends of nearly a quarter of a century ago at Mare Island Navy Yard—then that trip to the two new bridges, which I had never seen before, and by that wonderful reception that we received all along the line of march."

"I think you people, when you start to do something, do it better than anywhere else in the world.

"Then coming down, past what used to be called Goat Island in the old days (now Yerba Buena Island) to this man-made island that already proves what the exposition will look like, I await the passage of months before I come back here to see it all."

Johnson Holds His Hand.

The latter remark apparently was his response to an invitation for the President and Mrs. Roosevelt to visit the exposition in 1939.

The President's long ride through lines of spectators was without incident. On his way into San Francisco from Crockett, Calif., however, a group appeared carrying signs reading "Lift the Embargo on Loyalist Spain," and "Quarantine the Aggressor."

At the luncheon hall Senator Johnson, who bolted the Republican Party to support Roosevelt in 1932 but who subsequently broke with the President, spoke with the Chief Executive for several minutes and held his hand meanwhile.

with 75 to 80 per cent of the membership of the union" concerning the latest dispute and that "without exception, all deplore the controversy and hope for the return of peace."

At his first attempt to restore harmony, Lewis said he had made an unsuccessful attempt to reach Martin by telephone to ask him to come here today for a joint conference with the 13 union presidents. He was told Martin was traveling by automobile in Illinois and could not be reached. When Martin had not called by 7 p. m., Lewis advised the union presidents to return to their homes.

Lewis himself called a press conference in the presence of the visiting U. A. W. members to make his first public comment on the fight.

He said the committee represented "about 200,000 members" of the union and that members had told him "it is the overwhelming sentiment of the people they represent that the continued unrest in the union represents a quarrel among the paid officers of the union rather than differences among the half million members of that organization."

"They suggest that it is a rather astounding situation," Lewis continued. "The members live in amity and harmony while the officers put in their time in cavilling and bickering."

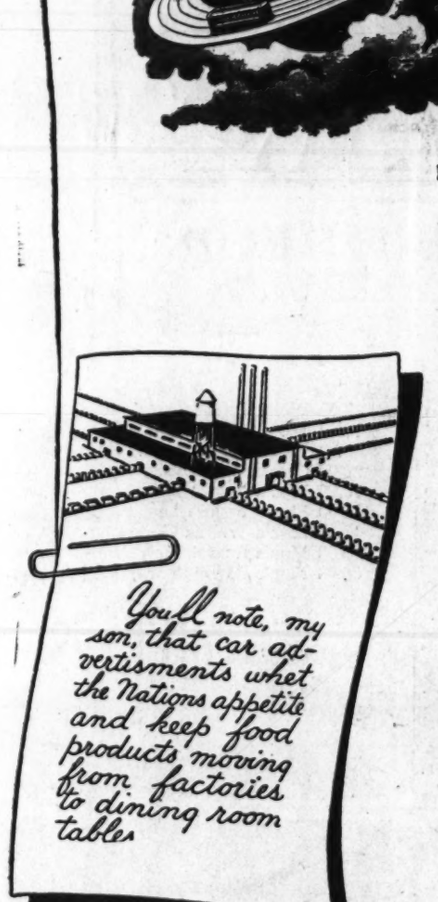
Street Railways Advertising Co.
CAR ADVERTISING IN THE UNITED STATES, CANADA AND CUBA.
Portland, Oregon.



You'll note, my son, that car advertisments whet the Nations appetite and keep food products moving from factories to dining room tables
The trolley buses that I travel on are 200 horse power which is almost the ratio of modern car advertising effectiveness over ye ordinary media. 265½ million passengers in 1937!

Dear Son,

I've been traveling about with much the same agility I once used in moving my kings about the checker board at home whenever you concentrated long enough to furnish the opposition. A letter from your brother Bob caught up with me here. He tells me that he's been so busy in the New England territory plugging his company's line of canned goods that he hasn't been home in three weeks. He's kind enough to contribute a good deal of the credit for increased sales of his line to the advertising campaign which his company has recently inaugurated in many units of New England's transportation systems.

As a budding agency man, you'll be interested in knowing the premises upon which Bob's bosses based their decision to devote a substantial percentage of their appropriation to car advertising.

Bob's company is one of many in different lines of business which realize only a fraction of a penny's profit on each item they sell. It follows, naturally enough, that they must promote volume sales of their product if they are to stay in business and prosper. You've probably learned this much already in the agency business.

The last time I was home I noticed that your ever thoughtful Mother had just replenished the pantry shelves with several dozen assorted cans, all bearing the label of Bob's products. Bob had done a good job of missionary work, all right, as I was the recipient of a modest bill to that effect.

As a result of this little buying spree of Mother's, Bob's company profited to the extent of about 12¢, or at the rate of ½¢ per can after all operating costs, taxes, advertising and attendant expenses were deducted. When the profit on an item is reckoned in terms of a fraction of a cent, it behooves Bob's company to measure production and selling costs with a double barreled slide-rule.

Advertising costs are accorded an especially close scrutiny, because the amount of advertising which a manufacturer does practically determines the volume of business which he may expect. Bob's bosses chose to devote a considerable part of their appropriation to the medium which I represent because they found that public carrier advertising appears before more than 3¼ million New Englanders every day at an average cost of about 5¢ per thousand. That's 5/1000 of a cent per individual appetite. Bob's bosses found that for the modest price of the postage stamp on this letter they could appeal to 600 men, women and children continuously for one solid month. Like many other shrewd Advertisers and their Advertising Agencies they discovered that they could get 2000 mental impressions out of a thin dime when they applied it to the purchase of publicity space in the ever active transportation units. Worked out by calculus, geometry, or just plain 'rithmetic, the answer is still the same...car advertising bears the lowest fractional sales cost known to us advertising men.

So arm yourself with a good supply of nice, fresh decimal points, son, and be ready to use them at a moment's notice. Your report cards never indicated that you were especially adept as a mathematician, but when it finally becomes your turn to talk media costs to a prospective advertiser you'll be needing those little black dots, and more than just a nodding acquaintance with fractions. Go to it and good luck.

Affectionately,
Your Dad

Arrests Urged In Major Auto Collision Cases

Highway Safety Session Is Told Plan Would Curb Accident Rate.

By Howard F. Wentworth.

Motorists involved in accidents resulting in substantial property damage, injuries or deaths would no longer be permitted to settle their differences out of court under proposals submitted at yesterday's session of the National Conference on Street and Highway Safety.

An amendment to the uniform vehicle code, offered by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, director of the Northwestern University Traffic Safety Institute, would allow a police officer—even though he was not a witness to the mishap—to obtain an arrest warrant if investigation disclosed evidence of a violation.

Suggestions Tabled.

Aimed at the reckless driver who escapes punishment for his offense by offering cash settlements to accident victims, the proposed amendment, said Lieut. Kreml, would increase law enforcement efficiency and aid materially in curbing the Nation's accident rate.

In mounting numbers, the conference was told, negligent drivers are evading prosecution in cases where accidents are not witnessed by policemen.

Lieut. Kreml's suggested warrant law, however, was temporarily tabled following lengthy discussions. A special committee was appointed to study the proposal and submit recommendations to the conference.

Pedestrians Criticized.

Criticizing pedestrians who risk their lives and impede traffic by crossing against signal lights and standing in the street, C. W. Stark, of the United States Chamber of Commerce, proposed to make these dangerous practices unlawful.

The conference adopted his plans and voted to make it a misdemeanor for any pedestrian to ignore signal lights or interfere with traffic movement by standing in the roadways.

An additional safeguard to pedestrian also was provided when the conference adopted proposals to install "wait" lights at all intersections where "walk" lights are in use. The "wait" signal would flash when the "walk" light is out.

Burton W. Marsh, safety and traffic engineering director of the American Automobile Association, obtained approval of a "provisional licensing" plan for novice drivers under 21.

Proposal Defeated.

His suggestion provided for the issuance of drivers' permits to minors for one year, with re-examination at the end of that period unless the learner established a satisfactory record.

A plan to change the term "reckless driving" to "dangerous driving" was defeated by an overwhelming vote. Members of the conference contended that reckless driving in many instances could not be termed "dangerous."

Final details of the conference—most of them minor revisions of the uniform code—are expected to be completed in time for adjournment today. The conference's recommendations are established as a pattern for State motor vehicle commissioners to follow.

Miller Seeks Fellowship.

Application for one of the recently announced fellowships to the Kemper Institute of Traffic Safety, Northwestern University, was filed yesterday by Capt. Arthur Miller, commander of the Third Police Precinct, it was reported last night.

Chosen by Maj. Earnest W. Brown to compete for the free training in modern methods of traffic control, Capt Miller will leave for Northwestern University September 15, if his application is approved. The $1,200 fellowship is offered to 35 qualifying police officers in any section of the country.

Miller's knowledge of traffic problems and his record while a lieutenant at the Traffic Division prompted Maj. Brown to select him as a candidate for the 8-months course.

Examinations for the fellowships will be held about the first of September, according to announcements from Northwestern University.

The successful applicants will be instructed in traffic control methods by Lieut. Franklin M. Kreml, youthful director of the university's institute, who gained Nation-wide recognition as a traffic authority by his work in Evanston, Ill.

Girl Murdered at Wimbledon; Crowbar, Blood on Auto Clews

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, July 14.—Scotland Yard groped tonight through stories of midnight whispers in a darkened lane and of a terrified man in a Trilby hat in an effort to solve the mystery of the slaying of a chic young woman almost at the edge of Wimbledon's tennis court.

Two puzzling leads came from workers in the exclusive green-hedged residence district fringing the All England Tennis Club, where the brunette woman in black was found clubbed and slashed to death.

They were:

A watchman's tale of a running man in a brown hat whose "eyes seemed to be popping out of his head."

The story of a cook in a nearby home who saw two cars pull up side by side in the lane where the body was found and heard one driver whisper, "Are you all right?"

Both incidents occurred about midnight last night, an hour after the established time of death.

The fact that the killer slashed the victim's features beyond recognition hampered identification, but Wimbledon residents thought the girl—slender, with tinted fingernails and stenciled eyebrows—might have been the one they had seen frequently waiting for a motorist at the edge of Wimbledon Common.

Squads hunted for her missing hat and handbag. They found a short crowbar on the common and a brown glove near the body. Also sought was a blood-stained motor car, tire marks of which were found on the girl's clothing.

The body was found by a motorist in a private lane called Somerset road, directly opposite Wimbledon center court, where an international throng saw Mrs. Helen Wills Moody and Helen Jacobs battle in the tennis finals not two weeks ago.

Two Are Designated To Yale Alumni Board

Charles Carroll Glover, jr., of Washington, class of 1910, has been elected first vice chairman of the Alumni Board of Yale University, it was announced yesterday. One hundred and four Yale alumni associations are represented on the board, which co-ordinates work of the class secretaries and other alumni interests.

Oliver McKee, jr., 1915, was named representative of the Yale Club of Washington, of which Eugene Meyer, '95, is president.

Peacemaker Held In Brother's Death

Williamson, W. Va., July 14 (AP).—Lee Carter, who answered his mother's plea to settle a quarrel, was arrested today as the holiday-slayer of his brother, Leonard, whom he had gone to aid.

Leonard Carter's body was found July 4, concealed in some brush on the Kentucky side of Tug River.

Miss Malvinia Prater, in custody at Pikeville, Ky., related Lee Carter and another member of a pre-holiday drinking party quarreled July 3.

Mrs. Tennessee Carter, mother of the two men involved in the tragedy, sent word for Lee to come and act as peacemaker, Miss Prather told the officers.

Subquently, when Lee tried to quell the fight, Leonard objected and the brothers fought. Lee choked Leonard and then hid his body in the brush, she told the deputies.

Suit Asks $20,000 In Honeymooner's Fall on D. C. Ship

Mrs. Doris L. Day, typist at the Capital Transit Co., filed suit for $20,000 yesterday in District Court for injuries received from a fall while she was on a honeymoon trip in June, 1937, on the steamer District of Columbia.

Naming as defendant the Norfolk & Washington Steamboat Co., Inc., owner of the vessel, Mrs. Day charged that she fell down an unlighted stairway.

She claims that she has lost salary, spent large sums on hospital and mdeical bills and "has and will in the future be deprived of her ability to perform the duties of a wife." Mrs. Day, a resident of Baltimore, is represented by the law firm of Newmyer & Bress.

Around-World Record Is Set at 3 Days 19 Hrs.

Hughes

crew, their wives, and several World's Fair officials left by the front door. Hughes lingered in the crowd and cheered with them as the crew and their company entered four automobiles. Then he entered a taxi and drove almost to the hotel before alighting and making an inconspicuous entrance.

Later Hughes was reported to have left the hotel and to have driven to Miss Hepburn's town house in a taxicab, but apparently changing his mind, returned to the Drake without stopping. Miss Hepburn had driven to New York earlier in the day from Old Saybrook, Conn. Floyd Bennett Field employes said she left a note to be delivered to Hughes personally, but other watchers at the field asserted the actress had not come there.

Hughes' first words as he left the plane, wearing the same battered brown hat, baggy gray slacks and soiled white shirt in which he left New York at 6:20 p. m. (Eastern standard time) Sunday, were:

"Never again!"

He had been asked whether he would attempt such a flight again.

Hughes' big, twin-motored monoplane was greeted by a tumultuous roar as it twice circled the field at 1:34 p. m. (Eastern standard time), losing altitude, and then taxied to the Administration Building at 1:37 p. m.

Officials of the American Aeronautical Union later announced the official Hughes' 'round-the-world record would be computed on the "arrival" time of 1:34:10 p. m. (Eastern standard time), and not on the landing time of 1:37 p. m. This makes Hughes' official record three days, 19 hours, 14 minutes, 10 seconds.

Although he had flown 772 miles less than Wiley Post, he had set a mark amazing for its speed, and one acclaimed by airmen throughout the world.

Despite the elaborate police precautions, with more than 1,100 uniformed officers cordoning the field, the milling throngs surged through and prevented Hughes from getting within 100 feet of the Wiley Post memorial, on which he had been expected to lay a wreath. Police officials had to place the weath there later.

First welcomed by Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia and Whalen, president of the New York World's Fair, 1939, Hughes' four dog-tired companions — Lieut. Harry P. Connor, navigator; Lieut. Thomas Thurlow, navigator; Edward Lund, flight engineer, and Richard Stoddart, radio engineer—left the field with a police escort and a parade of official cars for Manhattan. They went first to Whalen's home in Washington Mews, just off lower Fifth avenue, above Washington Square.

Surprised at Welcome.

Before leaving the field, Lieut. Thurlow rubbed his bearded chin in wonder at he watched the great crowd pressing forward.

"What a reception!" he exclaimed. "I hadn't dreamed of anything like this."

His wife, clinging to his shoulder to prevent their separation in the crush, smiled happily.

"Honey, I knew you could do it," she said.

Thurlow said the hardest stretch of the aerial argosy was roaring over the bleak steppes of Siberia.

"That was certainly wild and desolate—br-r-r-r," he said, with a grimace. "But we never had any real discomfort. And although we flew at extreme heights, up over 14,000 feet, it was never cold at any time inside the ship."

"What are you going to do now—rest?" he was asked.

"No," he replied quickly, "get a shave."

Hughes, smiling and evidently very happy, flanked by policemen, held a short press conference after he left the plane.

"Are you very hungry?" he was asked.

"Not very," he answered.

Because of the number of questions asked Hughes, and the inevitable confusion, the conference broke up almost immediately, and further questioning of Hughes was postponed until the party arrived at Whalen's home.

Lund's Fiancee Faints.

The wives of three of Hughes' comrades were dancing with excitement as the big ship circled overhead, but the fiancee of Ed Lund, Miss Eleanor Hoagland, was not present. She had collapsed earlier at the airport from the nervous strain of the four-day ordeal and had to be taken to her home in Manhattan to recover.

When at last the wives got through the dense crowd to greet their husbands, this was what they said:

Mrs. Stoddart (with a kiss): "Thank God you're back!"

Mrs. Connor (too excited for more): "Oh, hello!"

Mrs. Thurlow (kiss and hug): "Tommy!"

As Hughes descended wearily from the plane, his white shirt soiled and deep lines of exhaustion on his face, photographers shouted for him to remove his hat, but he left it perched on his head, just as it was when he started.

Flight Cost $300,000.

Flight officials estimated the globe-girdling junket cost $300,000, with a fuel consumption averaging 72 gallons per hour to hurl the 23,000-pound ship, with its 65-foot wing span, around the "great circle"—a little less than one-fourth as fast as sunlight circles the world.

Siberia yesterday—New York today. Even that contrast pales against the Jules Verne fantasy, "Around the World in Eighty Days," first published in 1872, and Hughes' feat of making the circuit in 91 hours—just under four days.

He had roared across the gray tumbled wastes of the Atlantic Ocean, on the 3,641-mile hop from New York to Paris, in 16 hours 35 minutes, better than twice as fast as Lindbergh made it in his "Lone Eagle" venture more than a decade ago.

Then on to Moscow, a 1,675-mile stretch, across 1,380 miles of Soviet Steppes to Omsk, another 2,177-mile hop to Yakutsk, Siberia, and finally across the Bering Straits to American soil once more—a grueling 2,456-mile flight to Fairbanks, Alaska, and the end, was still across another long continent.

From Fairbanks, Hughes forged through lightning and rain over the lofty Canadian Rockies, fighting his ship through the storm at terrific speed on the semifinal leg to Minneapolis, covering the 2,441 miles in 12 hours and 2 minutes. They had jettisoned sleeping bags, heavy clothing and a rubber boat at Fairbanks to make the plane lighter for the take-off.

Near the breaking point, but glad to get cigarettes which they dared not smoke in the ship, the five aerial musketeers made the last 1,054 miles on sheer nerve. But all they would admit, as Ed Lund expressed it, was:

"We were a little tired."

Since last Sunday, Hughes said, they had caught barely "40 winks" on the whole nerve-frazzling flight, with the din of the two big 1,100-horsepower motors drumming in their ears.

"I slept about four hours," Hughes said.

The others slept little more, taking catnaps on a piece of canvas stretched on the cabin floor.

Nor had they exactly dined like epicures. On the hop from Fairbanks to Minneapolis, they subsisted on cold canned fruit, although the ship's larder was bountifully stocked—just in case of the crisis which never came close.

"We had no trouble at all except the failure of the radio transmitter after we left Fairbanks," Stoddart said.

In Fairbanks, Hughes had chatted briefly with Mrs. Wiley Post, widow of the famed aviator who held the previous 'round-the-world record, and who crashed to his death with Will Rogers at Barrow, Alaska, on August 15, 1935. Mrs. Post was en route to Barrow to dedicate a memorial to her husband and Rogers.

As news of Hughes' successful landing in New York flashed out across the world, Post's co-flier on a globe-circling flight in 1931, Harold Gatty, in Auckland, New Zealand, hailed his feat as "a brilliant exhibition of modern flying."

In New York, Leighton W. Rogers, president of the Aeronautical Chamber of Commerce of America, called it "a true scientific triumph."

The tumultuously cheering crowd at Floyd Bennett Airport made no lucid comment, but they gave the five heroes the greatest ovation since Lindbergh's return and husky police struggled perspiringly to keep them from mobbing the 33-year-old sportsman-millionaire.

Field officials said it was the biggest jam they ever had seen, exceeding even the huge turnout that welcomed Post back to the airport after his solo flight around the world in the "Winnie Mae."

Two of the fliers' wives, Mrs. Stoddart and Mrs. Connor, remembered even in the midst of all their excitement to bring along clean shirts for their husbands, but Mrs. Thurlow forgot; and Hughes had to wait until the official motorcade bearing him and his companions reached Whalen's home. There a Chinese house servant hurried out to a nearby store and returned with fresh linen for the weary and grimy flight leader.

The lean, dark-haired Texan, who inherited a $17,000,000 fortune from his father at the age of 18, wearily grinned his thanks.

"That's what I need—plus a shave."

After their baths at the Whalen home the fliers sat down for a quiet round of drinks to celebrate their safe return.

Mayor LaGuardia said Hughes told him on the ride over from the airport he was "not very tired."

"He was very cheery about the trip," the Mayor said, explaining he felt it had demonstrated definite progress in aerial navigation.

The Army and Navy Union decided last night to award its medal for the year's outstanding aviation achievement to Hughes.

Announcement of the award was made by C. John Russell, commander in chief of the service men's organization.

The union's first award, last year, went to Dick Merrill for his round-trip flight to London.

with a load which it could not carry if required to take off from the ground.

The planes, in the flights that are about to begin, will travel piggy-back from Southampton to Foynes, Ireland, where the "baby" will be cut loose to fly the 2,885 miles to Montreal and thence to New York.

Germans Plan Surveys.

Germany has even more ambitious plans, having scheduled 28 survey flights for this summer. The route for her planes is Berlin to Frankfort, 268 miles; Frankfort-Marseilles, 504; Marseilles-Lisbon, 891; Lisbon-Azores, 1,050; Azores-New York, 2,397 miles.

Some of the Nazi planes will be launched by catapults, located aboard two motherships, the S. S. Schwaabenland and the S. S. Friesenland. The former will be based off Horta in the Azores and the latter at Port Washington, N. Y. Friesenland already is at New York. The first Nazi plane is scheduled to take off Sunday.

France, somewhat behind her rivals, is expected to start survey flights about August 1. Air France Transatlantique is making ready for the venture now with its huge plane, Lt. de Vaisseau Paris, which will follow the same route as the Germans from Marseilles. A weather and radio ship, the S. S. Carimare, will take its post midway between the Azores and Port Washington.

Though the competition is keen, there has been considerable co-operation among the four countries in the matter of sharing facilities and terminals.

Pacific Bases Planned.

Development of Pacific air bases which will be extremely useful in peacetime and of vital importance in war will be started shortly by Army and Navy engineers.

At Midway Island, 1,145 miles west of Hawaii, and at Palmyra Island, a thousand miles south of Honolulu.

Officials emphasized yesterday the improvements will not be of a military nature, but both Midway and Palmyra fit neatly into the Navy's aerial "line of observation" which Admiral Leahy believes necessary in the interests of national defense.

Congress has authorized $1,000,000 seaplane bases at Midway and at Wake Island, 1,090 miles farther west, and $137,000 has been made available for construction of a seaplane harbor at San Francisco.

About a thousand miles southwest of Palmyra are Canton, Enderbury, Howland, Baker and Jarvis islands. All important if air routes develop between the United States and Australia and New Zealand. The only improvements undertaken are a landing field and a navigation light on Howland.

Crowd Mobs Hughes' Plane at End of World Flight

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Howard Hughes (circle) is shown emerging from his plane as a mob surged forward after the ship had taxied to the official finish line at Floyd Bennett Field.

One Extra Sunrise Seen by Hughes in Race Around Earth

"The fastest circuit of the earth by man and machinery just completed by Howard Hughes and his flying companions in a few hours less than four days, dramatizes the tricks that speed can play with man's accepted system of time," points out a bulletin from the National Geographic Society.

"In his four days of flight Hughes and his companions saw the sun rise five times while all the other inhabitants of the earth outside the Arctic and Antarctic, could see it rise only four times. This was because Hughes, flying in the same direction that the earth was turning on its axis, actually outdistanced it one complete lap. His experience can be compared to that of a man running forward on a speeding train: he moves over the ground more rapidly than the train does. With the combined speed of the earth and the atmosphere, and the speed of his airplane, Hughes took five whirls through space around the earth's axis while the rest of us made only four trips.

"Hughes' five meetings with the rising sun were over the Atlantic Ocean on Sunday, between Paris and Moscow on Tuesday, between Omsk and Yakutsk on Wednesday, between Yakutsk and Fairbanks on Thursday, and between Fairbanks and Minneapolis on Thursday again. (Thursday repeated because the International Date Line had been crossed.)" toward the end of the trip, to 375 horsepower per motor."

Hughes Reveals Narrow Escape On Paris Hop

Story

The two Curtiss-Wright cyclones on his ship are rated at 1,100 horsepower.

The dangers he encountered?

"The most dangerous part of the whole flight was the takeoff from Floyd Bennett with that heavy load," he answered.

Fifteen minutes afterward he revealed that the danger of that takeoff was far greater than he or any of his companions realized until 16 hours, 35 minutes later when their wheels touched the ground of Le Bourget Airport at Paris. It was a funny story, as Hughes told it, but it made the danger no less real.

Trail Wheel Damaged.

"It started at the take-off from Floyd Bennett. When I'd taxied to the end of the runway, I thought the runway was too short for a take-off with that load, so I taxied out beyond the end of the runway (concrete) on the grass.

"The tail wheel hit a hole in the grass. I felt the jar. What had happened—although we didn't know it then—was that the bump had ruptured the fitting of the tail wheel to the bulkhead of the ship.

"A French mechanic nosing around under the ship found the trouble right away. The biggest danger was that the break was right up close to the elevator controls and interfered with them.

"We and the French, who were grand to us, took a look. They threw up their hands and said: 'C'est fini'—it's the end. But not Ed Lund.

"He found a United States Army mechanic named Cook—I don't know what he was doing around Paris—and he and Cook fixed things up with a log of angle irons. I'd thought maybe we could do it with a 2 by 4, or something, but their job was swell."

Four Types of Navigation.

Hughes gave a detailed account of the navigation which permitted him to reach every objective on the journey on straight lines.

"We correlated celestial and radio navigation," he explained. "Neither is sufficient to itself. There are some cases in which the radio is perfect and other times when it isn't worth a damn.

"We used four methods of navigation: First, contact, which is dead reckoning and drift sight; it depends mainly on visual sights of the ground. Second, when were above the clouds, we could navigate by shots of the stars and sun. The third and fourth methods were direction finding by the plane's and by land radio stations, and those are all right if there's not too much static.

"I had two of the best aerial navigators who ever lived. Lieut. Thomas Thurlow studied astronomy in college and is tremendously enterprising. He invented the best type of sextant, which we used, and perfected our drift indicator.

Navigators Alternated.

"Harry Connor is a fine celestial navigator, who learned his business in the merchant marine. He and Thurlow spelled each other. One would navigate at the takeoff and the other would guide us into a landing, and then they'd change off midway of the next leg.

"Ed Lund is a man who has had a lot of experience with engines, and who kept us going after we hit Paris. Also, when I was resting once in a while, Ed watched the engine temperatures and the fuel consumption.

"Dick Stoddart is a radio engineer, and he did a really wonderful job. He designed and built the transmitter we used and it worked without and trouble except toward the end of the flight, when the antenna got tangled up and we couldn't send. But that wasn't the fault of the transmitter. He didn't have any trouble working the World's Fair station direct from over Russia."

The fliers encountered a few surprises in Russia, mainly through the usual language difficulties in a strange land.

"We had arranged for interpreters to meet us at Omsk and Yakutsk," he said, "but the interpreters didn't show up. Women came to our rescue in both cases. They were both school teachers who spoke English.

"I made a new map of northern Siberia as we flew over. We found the United States Hydrographic Survey maps were wrong on some of the region—you know, a coast looks different from a boat and from an airplane.

"When we left Yakutsk, the map showed we wouldn't find any mountains higher than 6,500 feet. Well, the maps were wrong. We spotted some 9,700 feet high and there was ice on the wings at the time."

Hughes disclosed he had been planning this flight for three years, adding: "But, then, I've been thinking about flying ever since I was 14 years old."

Hughes said it was really his Sperry gyro pilot which did the flying, except for take-offs and landings. "It worked perfectly all the way around," he asserted.

There was plenty of bad weather along the way, throughout the four days.

"We never saw a wave all the way across the Atlantic," he said, "except for a glimpse of Boston Harbor. We sighted Ireland through a hole in the clouds.

"When we took off from Paris, we went on to the instruments almost as soon as the wheels came up. That was really dirty weather, that Paris-to-Moscow hop. It was so black and the rain piled up so on the windshield that I turned off all the lights except the instrument board.

"We had a lot of ice at high altitudes and no de-icers, because they would have added 150 pounds to our weight. Our carburetors never caught a bit of ice, though. (The engines were equipped with a new type of anti-ice carburetors.)

"The ship iced up pretty badly four or five times, but the worst was between Paris and Moscow."

The pilot said he and his companions "used up a lot of oxygen" from the ship's tanks while they were flying at high altitudes.

"Sometimes," he said, "we went as high as 16,000 feet, and a lot of the time we traveled along at 12,000."

Hughes compiled a complete set of notes as he flew. He said this log ran 30 or 40 pages.

Post's Flight Still Top Air Feat, Hughes Says

New York, July 14 (AP).—Howard Hughes, just back from his flight around the world, declined today to put his achievement in the same class with that of the late Wiley Post, who circled the world solo in 1933, and said Post's was "the most remarkable job of flying ever done."

"I believe," said Hughes, "Wiley Post's achievement of flying solo around the world was the most remarkable job of flying ever done and, probably, that ever will be done.

"I can't imagine how he did it. It is tough enough with modern instruments and alone appears almost impossible. What Post did was something like sawing a woman in half or pulling a rabbit out of a hat. Some people believe that there have been other flights which were more important, but air pilots know that Wiley Post's feat was the greatest."

Two Women, Man Ordered to Face Lottery Hearing

U. S. Commissioner Needham C. Turnage yesterday ordered Don C. Shrier, 38, his wife, Mary E. Shrier, 32, 443 Tennessee avenue northeast, and Katherine L. Donaldson, 32, 735 New Jersey avenue southeast, to appear for a hearing July 21 on charges of operating a lottery and possessing numbers slips.

They were arrested Wednesday following complaints that the Donaldson woman was writing numbers in a restaurant in the 100 block of H street northwest.

Police said Shrier and his wife picked up the slips shortly before they were seized.

Bob Burns Seeks Aid Here to Find 'King of Hoboes'

Bob Burns, movie comedian and contributor to The Washington Post, last night asked Washington police to help him locate Jeff Davis, described as king of American hoboes.

In a telegram from Hollywood, Burns told police he needed Davis to "make authentic hoboes out of me and other actors" for parts in "The Arkansas Traveler."

Burns said he understood Davis was near Washington, en route from New York.

On Studying District Taxes.

The care with which the District Commissioners have selected their advisory committee on District taxes indicates the importance which they attach to the forthcoming study, under direction of the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation. Daniel J. Donovan, auditor and budget officer, heads the official list. He probably knows more about Washington's financial problems and revenue needs than any other single individual. But other members chosen to speak for the District and for numerous civic groups are also admirably qualified to reflect the community viewpoint.

Because of the limited funds available to the Joint Committee the work of this advisory group will be especially valuable. A study confined to the hands of an expert with only $10,000 to cover all expenses could not extend very far. With such a capable and representative advisory group to aid him, however, the unnamed investigator should be able to bring in a comprehensive report that will serve as the basis of a new tax system.

The primary objective of the study is to find a substitute for the unsatisfactory business privilege tax. But its task is much broader than that. It is hoped that the survey will result in a thorough overhauling of local revenue laws, with emphasis upon relieving the heavy burden on home owners. Inequitable levies now in effect will doubtless be scrutinized along with more scientific revenue measures by which they can be replaced.

If a thorough job is to be done, moreover, the investigators will have to consider the fiscal relations between the Federal Government and the District. Until the responsibility of Congress for paying a reasonable share of the Capital City's annual expenses is in some way definitely fixed there will be no way to determine accurately the District's revenue needs.

In this difficult task Chairman King of the Senate District Committee and his colleagues on the Joint Committee may be expected to take a prominent part. With the aid of the advisory group selected by the Commissioners the Joint Committee should be able, despite past failures, to devise some means of eliminating the perennial controversy over a Federal "contribution."

Group Health Finances.

The Group Health Association appears to be bowling along at a good rate. Since last fall its membership is reported to have increased from 850 to 2,600, which means it is now serving some 6,000 persons in and around Washington. As a result, four doctors have been added to the health cooperative's staff, raising the total to 11, and a business administrator has recently been named to manage its nonmedical affairs.

Another indication of G. H. A.'s progress is to be found in the news that its officers are casting about for a site on which to build a hospital. Only in part, however, is this a sign of strength. The association is impelled toward this move by the virtual boycott of its members by the local hospitals. But whatever the reasons, it appears that G. H. A. will need to expand before it can hope to support a hospital of its own. Accordingly, if the plan is to materialize, a drive for more G. H. A. members can be expected.

Meantime, to judge from latest reports, the majority of Washington doctors are still steadfastly opposed to the sort of reorganization of medicine represented by G. H. A. Particularly in view of that agency's inclination to seek wider community support, this is unfortunate. The public is confused; the co-operative experiment is impeded; and the medical profession generally is laid open to an unbecoming charge of selfishness. The local health picture, at best none too bright, is in no wise improved.

Plainly, the antagonisms must ultimately be reconciled. To hasten this end, G. H. A. might well consider one move which fear of misinterpretation seems to have inhibited to date. That is more frequent and detailed reports of its financial condition. At bottom, the principal doubt concerning G. H. A. is whether it can avoid the subsidy pitfall into which earlier group health movements in other countries have invariably fallen to the detriment of physicians and public alike. If, as appears to be the case, G. H. A. has found a way around this hazard, publication of the information should go a long way toward dissolving much of the opposition now confronting it.

The World Wheat Problem.

On the eve of the opening of the international wheat conference in London Secretary Wallace warned that subsidization of wheat exporting might be necessary if the United States were denied a "fair share" of world market outlets. His statement emphasizes the gravity of the problem resulting from an anticipated wheat export surplus of 250,000,000 bushels—the result of a bumper crop in this country.

It seems highly improbable, however, that the Department of Agriculture has seriously considered resort to export subsidies as a means of disposing of surplus wheat. Mr. Wallace himself admits that other producing countries would regard such dumping as an unfair practice. And it is a foregone conclusion that it would lead to retaliatory action by importing countries in the form of countervailing tariff increases or restrictive quotas. It would, moreover, seriously interfere with the plans of the Department of State to lower trade barriers by reciprocal agreements.

Even if we succeeded for a limited time in forcing more wheat upon world markets by means of subsidies, it would simply lead to new maladjustments. No permanent solution of world wheat marketing problems is possible unless something can be done to bring supply into a more satisfactory relation to demand. The basic cause of trouble is that the wheat importing countries of Europe have been steadily increasing their domestic production in recent years, thereby cutting down export outlets of countries with a surplus. During the five years 1933-37 Europe (exclusive of Russia) produced on an average over 400,000,000 bushels more wheat than during the years from 1921 to 1924 inclusive.

During recent drought years, the problem of disposing of wheat was academic so far as the United States was concerned. Today it is very concrete and immediately pressing. Our difficulty is enhanced by the prospect of an increase in world output coincident with declining world consumption of wheat. Exporting may also be hindered by the Government's loan policy, which prevents wheat prices from falling below certain minimum levels regardless of the state of world demand and supply. Fortunately, however, the loan rates announced yesterday are set at the lowest average permissible under the law, and it is stated that they are not intended to encourage withholding of wheat, except for limited periods to aid orderly marketing.

Secretary Wallace suggests that other countries ought to follow our example by establishing an "ever-normal granary" program, designed to set aside awkward surpluses for later use and stabilize world supplies of wheat. The practical difficulties in the way of carrying out such a proposal seem insurmountable, as it would necessitate control over world production. Otherwise removal of surpluses might result in a steady accretion of unmarketable supplies.

The growing desire of many wheat importing countries to emancipate themselves from dependence upon foreign food supplies has aggravated the problem. In spite of the cost of agricultural protection, many nations are today willing for political reasons to deny themselves the benefits of access to abundant and cheap outside sources of bread. There is no question that planning for the future necessitates taking account of this attitude. But just how much allowance to make for loss of markets growing out of the urge of nations to attain self-sufficiency, is a real puzzle.

A world in which economic advantages are constantly sacrificed to political necessities, real or fancied, and where import buying is restricted and directed by elaborate systems of exchange control, does not provide assured export outlets for wheat or any other commodity. To say, as does Secretary Wallace, that the United States should seek its fair share of the world wheat market is to assume the existence of standards of normality that have long since been swept away.

For Public Information.

It is not merely the newspaper fraternity which will be assisted by the decision of the Department of State to publish its press releases in printed pamphlet form instead of in the individual mimeographed sheets heretofore available. This new development also makes important current information much more readily available to libraries, organizations and individuals professionally or personally interested.

The successful conduct of foreign policy in a democracy depends primarily on an intelligent public understanding of the motivation of that policy. By including in the pamphlet press releases the texts of all public addresses made by the Department of State officials the Administration is doing much to encourage intelligent understanding of the factors underlying the conduct of our foreign relations. Many popular misunderstandings should be eliminated, and much that is sometimes obscure will be clarified, by a wide distribution of this departmental organ.

The press releases of the Department of State are purely informative. They treat merely the current developments in the various phases of this country's foreign relations and naturally illuminate only indirectly the forces which determine policy. But by bringing the activities of the Department of State closer to the general public a better understanding of these forces is materially assisted. The foreign policy of the Government is a matter of vital concern to all its citizens, and the Department freely recognizes that fact in inaugurating this new official publication.

Rewarding Sharp Practice.

Secretary Ickes is dangling $9,527,995 for the construction of municipal power projects before the noses of 21 cities. If the local governments are ingenious enough in following the Ickes formula, each will obtain a gift from the Federal Government amounting to 45 per cent of whatever its project costs. Some will obtain loans as well. But there are also penalties in the game.

These allotments were made conditional, according to the PWA announcement, because the projects thus approved "will be in competition with existing facilities." "To receive the allotment money," the announcement continues, "it will be necessary for the applicants to make 'reasonable efforts in good faith' to purchase the facilities with which the applicants would be in competition if the project were erected and not be able to consummate such acquisition." In other words, the cities must achieve what would seem to be an impossible task before the funds conditionally allotted to them become actually available.

In each of these 21 cities private power companies are put on notice that they will be forced out of business by subsidized competition unless they sell their plants and equipment to the municipality on "reasonable terms." Under these circumstances the companies would be foolish not to sell at any price that could be considered fair. The prospects are, then, that reasonable offers will result in the purchase of existing plants instead of the construction of new ones.

But the PWA offers cities no help in the financing of such purchases. Its 45 per cent grants can be used only for the construction of projects that create employment. If cities buy power generating and distributing facilities from private owners they will have to finance the transactions from their own resources. By making fair offers to private utilities, therefore, they are likely to deprive themselves of grants covering 45 per cent of the cost of their proposed ventures.

It is evident that the Administration has placed municipalities seeking power plants of their own in a position where they cannot be expected to make reasonable offers for existing facilities. Enormous rewards, already approved, await the cities which can convince Administrator Ickes that fair offers have been made and rejected. If that is not an indirect suggestion that cities resort to duplicity, it would be difficult to conceive one.

With a thoroughly impartial test of the reasonableness of municipal offers to private companies, the PWA's power program might be reduced to very small proportions. But there is no reason to believe that these tests will be any fairer than other judgments rendered by one party to the dispute. Administrator Ickes is clearly an interested party. He serves an Administration which has engaged in a long-standing feud with the utilities. Even more important, the success of his job-creating program depends in some degree upon the building of power projects already approved by the PWA.

City officials know Mr. Ickes' eagerness to get the spending program under way. That fact becomes an additional incentive for them to make unfair purchase offers in the hope of obtaining PWA funds. With this premium upon unreasonable offers to be considered by a partial judge, what is left of the Administration policy of fair dealing with the utilities?

Triumph Of Competence.

From New York to New York, by way of Paris, Moscow, Omsk, Yakutsk, Fairbanks and Minneapolis, the distance is approximately 14,800 miles. That distance Howard Hughes and his crew of four traversed by air in 91 hours and 16 minutes. This is considerably less time than it takes even the fastest liner to cross the Atlantic. It is less than half the time it took the late Wiley Post to fly around the globe in 1933.

However, the real importance of the Hughes flight is not to be found in its record-smashing aspects. These happen to be impressive enough. They may not quickly or easily be surpassed. But what was outstanding in the flight, and what made it a truly significant contribution to the science of aviation, was the competence that lay behind it.

Every aspect of the projected trip around the world, now brought to a triumphant conclusion, was prepared in advance with the utmost care and the most painstaking attention to detail. Nothing was left to chance. For months every available bit of data having to do with the conditions likely to be encountered was gone over. Similar care was exercised in the selection of the plane, in testing its capacity and equipment and in providing, so far as was humanly possible, for all contingencies.

No wonder, then, that the flight came off with such breath-taking precision. The remarkable hop from New York to Paris, made previously only by Col. Charles A. Lindbergh 11 years before, had its counterpart in every other stage of the flight. Mr. Hughes' achievement, therefore, was not only a triumph of science; it was also a triumph of organization and planning.

For this he and his companions deserve all the fervent encomiums that will be heaped upon them. They have demonstrated that aviation has gone beyond the stage of adventure for adventure's sake. It has become a science.

Begging In Washington.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I have been in Washington a few weeks on leave and have been surprised at the number of times I have been solicited by beggars on the streets. Considering the millions of dollars that have been appropriated by Congress for relief, it seems incredible that there should be so many cases of need. One is led to the conclusion that there must be a large number of "panhandlers" and professional beggars.

In keeping with many persons of a sympathetic nature, I hate to refuse a meal to a man who is genuinely hungry, but I do not like to be "gypped."

Undoubtedly there must be some organized charitable body designed to care for the needy in Washington. May I suggest that if you and other daily papers displayed regularly in the papers the name and address of such organization, it would be possible to say to these mendicants, "Go to such address, and if your need is genuine, you will be cared for." And if that became the practice of the citizens of Washington, and of casual visitors as well, these solicitations would become fewer and fewer, and might even cease.

Washington, July 13.

Welfare officials are of the belief that the vast majority of Washington's beggars are professionals. The more deserving cases can be readily identified by their reaction to the suggestion that they apply at the Community Chest, 1101 M street northwest, for assistance. Arrangements can generally be made there to tide them over their emergency.—Editor.

Political "Men Of Month."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Allow me to take over for Arch McDonald for the moment and name the "man of the month" for you. In fact I would like to name two or three of them. On the 10-point basis they follow:

Five points to Bruce Barton, the man hardly anybody knows, who made this prize crack within the month. I quote the Associated Press at Indianapolis:

No man can possibly overestimate what it will mean to America to have the country administered again by a Republican party cleansed, chastened and rededicated to service.

Mr. Barton is right. It cannot be overestimated because the American people are not going to take the trouble. We bet on the horses judging by past performances. Why pay any attention to Mr. Barton? Twenty minutes later the Indiana Republicans didn't. They nominated a standpat candidate for the Senate who says he is agin' everything. And speaking of past performances as the way to judge a man, Mr. Barton is the man who was going to repeal one law a day when he got to Washington.

Three points to Bert Snell. He steps out. He doesn't see any cleansing and rededication in the offing. He sees what in freshman high school Latin we knew as the scribo manus am wallum.

Two points to Senator Tydings for thinking he has a chance against Davy Lewis.

That uses up my 10 points for the day and may I have the privilege of making a suggestion that some of the political news is so funny I do not see for the life of me why you do not quit paying heavy dough for alleged comics and run some real funny stuff over on those pages.

Rastus' Question.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Rastus, my garden man, is asking some questions. I am referring them to you:

"Mist' McDare," asks Rastus, "what's all dis talk 'bout de Senate man an' de head of de Gov'ment? I jes' cant git de matter plumb right.

"Dey tells me de head of de Gov'ment sez to de Senate man, 'My fren, sign on de dotted line, sir,' and de Senate man sez, 'No, indeedy, not on yo' tintype, an' de head of de Gov'ment sez 'I can't fire yo' 'cause I'se de head of de Gov'ment, but when I'se not de head of de party, an' bein' head of de party I kin see to it dat yo' don't ride my coat tails.'

"An' den de Senate man gits mad an' sez, 'I ain't a-goin' to ride no coat talls—I'se a-goin' to ride on my own mule.'

"An' den de man what's a-goin' to be de head of de Gov'ment, next time, sends a special 'livery letter all de way from de Phillypines and sez he ain't a-goin' to stand for de Senate man ridin' no mule, all by hisself. Den de head of de Gov'ment don't do nothin', an' de head of de party don't do nothin', an' de Senate man don't do nothin', 'cept laf out loud.

"What I wants to know is, who's de boss man in dis yere country?"

Christian Unity.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Two recent deliverances from two bishops of the Methodist Church, one at Charlottesville, Va., and one in Washington, proclaim in the same note a belief in the union of Christendom not many days hence.

Differences in belief in religion, like differences in the political world, need not mean that the objectives are not the same; but the ways and means to obtain the objectives are different. Different interpretations of the Bible are inevitable where people think or are allowed to think. Divergence as to nonessentials in religion should be welcomed rather than suppressed, since in this sphere of human thinking, encouragement should be given to independent investigation.

The breaking up of Protestantism into what is often called "warring sects," is but the breaking loose of the human mind from spiritual thralldom, to find ultimately a synthesis in acceptance of the essentials of religion. Where any body of people, or where any individual, can say in sincerity that "to love the Lord, our God, with all the heart, soul, mind and strength" is the greatest of all commandments and that it carries with it "loving thy neighbor as thyself," that organization or individual has no occasion for a quarrel with anybody of whatever name or church affiliation who believes the same thing.

Christians believe that only by the help of the Christ of the New Testament they can have such love as the commandment demands. If there is some "other way," and the fruits of an individual or of a nation prove that without this union by faith spirits can be as godly and human living as harmonious as with it, then faith in the Christ of the Christian is not essential to harmony with God. But certainly Christianity has outlived the day when any one church organization can separate itself on the basis that there can be but one distinct, named, ecclesiastically controlled church body. To call America "pagan" for not being predominantly of one church organization and then praising it as the "land of the free" and the refuge from religious oppression is ridiculously contradictive.

America is a refuge for people seeking religious freedom because it encourages religious freedom. And the much-desired Union of Christendom will be fostered here when we cease to hear such archaic talk as "there is but one church organization." Christian unity is one of spirit not of outward form or of any particular name.

U. D. C. Officer Explains Society's Aims.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: My attention has been called to a communication in your paper of July 7 entitled "An Appeal for Unity," which virtually urges that all history of the War Between the States become a sealed book and that the flag of the Confederacy shall be a forgotten emblem.

Since it is conceded that the conflict was brought about by the belief of the contestants that theirs was each the correct interpretation of the Constitution, and since the same question is still vibrant throughout the land—namely, the rights of the States to regulate their own affairs in matters not expressly delegated by them to the national Government, the Daughters of the Confederacy are performing a continuous service to the country in clarifying the issue and establishing the truth about those times.

Some 25 years ago, on the occasion of the first gathering of the Grand Army of the Republic on Southern soil, the writer, then president of the Georgia Daughters of the Confederacy, sent the following:

Macon, Ga., September, 15, 1913.
Commander Alfred H. Beers, Grand Army Encampment, Chattanooga, Tenn.:

Believing that glory of battlefields of the War Between the States is not unto the North, not unto the South, but to a common American valor, the Daughters of the Confederacy of Georgia welcome the men who wore the blue and mourn with them over the mighty dead at Chickamauga.

MRS. WALTER D. LAMAR,
Pres., Georgia Division, U. D. C.

On July 3, 1938, the same writer sent the following wires, addressing one copy to the President of the United States, one to the commander of the G. A. R. and one to the commander of the U. C. V.:

United Daughters of the Confederacy rejoice in the peace memorial today dedicated, believing that the mounted figures of Gen. Meade and Gen. Lee as they face each other across the fields of Gettysburg will behold arising therefrom the brotherly love that forgives and reunites a nation of 100 per cent Americans.

MRS. WALTER D. LAMAR,
President General U. D. C.

Knowledge of issues comes only through clearer understanding each of the other and it is the primary work of the Daughters of the Confederacy to bring about such results. To this end are they eternally dedicated and they will continue through their various channels the establishment of truth and the upholding of the principles of the founders.

MRS. WALTER D. LAMAR,
President General, United Daughters of the Confederacy.

Prince Gustaf's Visit Here.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your paper deserves thanks of the friends of Sweden and America for the article on Page 1 of The Post of July 13 headlined "Prince in City—Shh!"

Seldom have officials displayed such childish secretiveness as in connection with the visit of H. R. H. Prince Gustaf. I judge not from press reports alone, but from my own connections with those involved.

Any thoughtful person understands that a prince needs to escape from the often disagreeable task of constant public appearances. In this case, after a painful illness, his highness generally was recognized as entitled to special consideration.

That might have been obtained if officials had stated his wish forthrightly and sought it in an honorable way. But instead they tried to sneak the future King of Sweden and his princess into the Capital of a great Nation, and when he arrived they conducted a pretense of uncertainty about him unworthy of gentlemen or the representatives of honorable nations.

Surely this only does harm to our relations with a nation and a royalty whom most of us respect. Certainly, it contradicts the high purpose of his highness' visit, which was good will.

The Post Impressionist

Museum Piece.

IT was not until after my friend had left that I realized the melancholy nature of the news he had brought. It was that Benjamin Vogt was very ill.

We knew, of course, that even Ben could not last forever. Nevertheless it was quite a shock. I suppose one is never really ready for the inevitable. You see lightning, but still the thunder startles you.

It was about a two hours' ride on the new concrete road to the town where Ben lived. There was nothing to do but stop everything and go, for I had known him pretty well; we were what are known as "old friends." And it might be my last chance to see him. I remembered how once I had missed a chance to see Halley's comet and ever after regretted it. And now how proud I shall be to tell my grandchildren that I knew Ben Vogt and saw him the last day he was on this earth.

When I reached his place they were standing in line waiting to get in to see him. There must have been a hundred people there. A nurse would open a door and let one out, and another would go in.

"Is he still alive?" I asked, wondering why they were letting people in if Ben was really bad off.

"Yeah," replied the man in front of me, "the doctor says he can't live anyhow and it will do no harm. Besides, they say the old man wants it."

I finally got to the door myself and was let in. I was surprised to see that Ben was not abed, but was sitting up in an old morris chair and wrapped up in a quilt.

"Well, well, well," he greeted me, "I am glad to see you. But why didn't you let me know you were here?—you needn't have waited. I'll not be here much longer, they say. Better let me do the talking. I hadn't much to say to the others. They've looked at me as they would an antique clock that no longer ticks. I suppose I am rather a curiosity by now."

"We have been good friends, Ben," I said, "so I know you won't mind my asking you this. But I have always wanted to ask it of someone——"

"'Someone who is dying?'," he finished for me. "No I shan't mind. What is it?"

"If you had your life to live over again, what would you have different?"

"Well," he answered with a little twinkle, "I've always been sorry I never learned to play poker, and I've always wanted to go to Tibet. But seriously, if you want a statement, you can take this—the answer is, 'Nothing.' If I know what happiness is, I have been the happiest man on earth. There's nothing I would have had different; and there are some things I have been so content with, or without, that I can hardly contain myself. Maybe I just don't know any better, but that's the way I feel. Take for instance the matter of——"

But the nurse interrupted. "I'm sorry, sir, but I must put Mr. Vogt to bed again."

"Yes, I am tired," said Ben with a slight quaver, "though I wish I might talk on forever. I forget that I am an octogenarian. Perhaps that will be my reward in heaven—to talk on forever. I shall suggest that as a way for the Almighty to kill two birds with one stone—eternal reward for me, eternal punishment for my miserable listeners."

I laughed and arose to go.

"You have always been lucky, Ben," I said, "and there's no reason why your luck should stop now. So I hope you'll get your wish. I won't say good-by, for I am hoping to join your select audience in a few years. It will seem like old times."

"Too bad," he said to me as the nurse helped him up, "that you were never a good talker or a good walker. You have missed a lot. I hope the stars in my crown will be numbered by the times I have said to you: 'I don't give a damn how many miles to the gallon you get!'"

"And in mine," I added as we shook hands, "by the times I have said to you: 'Doggonit, Ben, my feet are beginning to hurt—let's ride home.'"

The next day I learned that Ben had gone, and there is nothing more to tell, except to add what perhaps I should have said at the very start—Ben was the last man on earth never to own an automobile.

"To Moses."

Mayor LaGuardia coined a brand new verb when he promised that Atlantic avenue would be "Mosesed" in two years if the constitutional convention adopted the grade-crossing removal amendment as drafted by his park commissioner. The verb may be described as a natural, yet his honor is entitled to distinction as inventor. "To Moses" something, means that action thereon will be swift, that obstacles in the way will be summarily brushed aside, and that the end will be in all respects satisfactory. We do not see why the verb should not pass into common usage, to win a place in the dictionaries as a memorial alike to the ingenuity of the mayor and the achievements of his park commissioner.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

Speaking Of Yachting.

This is the yachting season, and yachting, depression or not, is on the upswing. Dizziness having become almost compulsory in this country, more and more people think a boat is the place for it. And then again, it gets one away from all those stop-and-go lights.

• • • •

The big point about yachting as opposed to motoring is that you don't have to travel at all to enjoy it. In fact, most boat owners seldom go anywhere. During the first year or two they keep loading supplies aboard, hauling up the anchor and waving good-by to strangers, but they soon get over it.

• • • •

Now and then the club commodore gets into his dinghy and starts offshore. All the other yacht owners follow him. This is called a club cruise.

• • • •

A commodore is a yacht owner who doesn't mind the upkeep of white flannels and who has enough good liquor aboard his boat to entitle him to respect.

• • • •

A yacht club is a building whose mortgage is always a big problem, and it is frequented exclusively by yacht enthusiasts.

• • • •

A yacht enthusiast is a man who is so enthusiastic about yachting that he is willing to go almost any place in some other fellow's yacht.

• • • •

A necessary evil of any yacht club is the Rocking Chair Fleet. The membership here is open to any member whose spear knows no brother. To be a member in high standing you have got to take the position you never saw anybody else handle a boat right and never will.

• • • •

The Rocking Chair Fleet frequently takes a cruise. And when it takes it, is is a cruise up and down somebody's reputation.

• • • •

The members of this gang have boats of their own up the river, but they haven't seen 'em since opening day. They are afraid to leave the porch for fear they'll miss a chance to pan somebody, preferably a friend and neighbor.

• • • •

A Rocking Chair Fleeter has another good reason for never using his boat. He knows what the brothers would say about him as he navigated the old tub past the float.

• • • •

Nevertheless, yachting is having a boom, and this department predicts it will continue. There is no more room left on dry land for purposes of travel, recreation and rest.

• • • •

And it's nice to have the children out where they can't always be yelling: "Mommer, there's another frankfurter stand. I wanna nuther dog."

I could not love a girl who wore
Red flannels in the winter—or
A careless maid whose shoulder straps
Kept peeking out. I think perhaps
That such a maid would, like as not,
Leave stale grounds in the coffeepot
Or come to breakfast all undressed
With hair in curles. I detest
A girl who cannot look at eight
As smart as when she has a date;
So I'll not risk my single bliss
On the most fascinating miss,
Lest, I should find, once I was wed,
I had a slattern in my bed!

Farewell To Ossietzky

By Finn and Inger Lie.

Interview At Berlin.

The following was translated from the Oslo daily Dagbladet, for the Living Age whose editors note that it recounts the last visit of the German pacifist and Nobel prize winner with friends.

OSSIETZKY was pale and emaciated, and when we shook hands we knew instantly how weak he was. But his clear, blue eyes sparkled and were full of joy at our visit. He had had only three or four visitors in his two years at Nordend Hospital. All his friends had disappeared or did not dare to come to see him.

We spoke about problems concerning religion, literature and pacifism. Ossietzky spoke almost incessantly. His conversation revealed how infinitely aloof he was from all violence and that his pacifist views had remained unchanged. It was not hard to understand that he must have made the German potentates feel very uncomfortable. He had not lost his deft irony, but he showed not the slightest trace of bitterness against his torturers. His attitude toward them was merely one of forgiving pity, which, I must admit, moved us to tears.

OSSIETZKY was living with his wife in a tiny, simply furnished room. But he rejected the possibility of moving into a better-equipped hospital. "Here I feel safe. Here they cannot get at me," he said. He had unlimited confidence in Dr. Dosquet, the managing physician of the hospital which he called the "Magic Mountain of the Poor."

When a maid entered the room with toast and tea, we could see how terribly weakened Ossietzky was. Although he held his cup with both hands, it shook so that he could hardly drink. I also noticed that his teeth were completely destroyed, without anything being done for their treatment. He confided that he could not retain any nourishment, and he coughed frequently. After the excitement of the Wannow trial he had had a renewed attack of pleurisy (Wannow, a Germany lawyer, had cheated Ossietzky out of most of the Nobel Prize money and was recently sentenced to a prison term).

IT WAS Ossietzky's burning desire to reach a sanatorium abroad in order to recover his health. Dr. Dosquet, with whom we discussed this question later, felt that his condition would make travel inadvisable at that time, but Ossietzky could leave if he wished. "Ossietzky is a free man," he said.

To our question whether he believed his patient might soon die, Dr. Dosquet answered with a categorical "no." He expressed his willingness to have Ossietzky examined by a Norwegian physician and promised to inform us about his condition every week. Ossietzky himself did not believe that our efforts would be successful. "But even if nothing came of it," he told us comfortingly, while saying goodby, "I still have something to live for for a long time." He died a few days later.

Oklahoma Primary

Administration's Strength Seen Revealed In Victories Of New Deal Candidates In Two Principal Contests.

By Tully Nettleton,

Special Correspondence of The Post.

THE OKLAHOMA PRIMARY on Tuesday settled several matters to the eminent satisfaction of the New Dealers, but it has left one question that may become a kind of Southwestern "Who won the war?" This is the question, "Who got the Grand River Dam?"

President Roosevelt in his "few kind words" for Senator J. Elmer Thomas, later nominated by a large majority, said, "It was due to the persistant efforts of my old friends Senator Thomas and Senator Lee" that provision was made for the Grand River water conservation project in northeastern Oklahoma. A Tulsa newspaper, in the district where the dam is being built, recorded that the President thus "conspicuously ignored" the long efforts of Wesley E. Disney, member of the House of Representatives from that district, who originated and sponsored the project years before either of the State's Senators had occasion to befriend it.

Some who heard the speech probably would not have been greatly surprised to see Mr. Disney—if he were there—rush to the front of the platform as he did once last year when all and sundry were claiming credit for the dam, thump his breast in Tarzan fashion and declaim to the multitude, "If you want to know who is the daddy of the Grand River Dam, you're looking at him right now!"

Question Remains Still Undetermined.

THE QUESTION is left unsettled because while Senator Thomas returns to the Senate Mr. Disney also was renominated in the Tulsa district and is very likely to return to his position on the House Ways and Means Committee, where his enthusiasm for the President and head of the party may not be so warm as it formerly was. Except for a neat Presidential maneuver before the campaign began, Mr. Disney might also have been in the race against Senator Thomas. Shortly after the Tulsa Congressman had visited the White House, Mr. Roosevelt told a press conference he had urged Mr. Disney to run for re-election because he was too valuable to lose from his present position.

Just why the President chose the Grand River Dam for which to commend Senator Thomas may never be known. But one wonders if it may have been because of a suspicion that the dean of the State delegation in the lower house was giving aid and comfort to Gomer Smith, Congressman from the Oklahoma City district and chief threat to the Senator's self-succession.

"Ole Gomer," as he called himself on the stump, is a vigorous campaigner, just as he was a vigorous and unsparing trial lawyer from the time he was filing and winning more personal injury suits against the Oklahoma City traction company than all other attorneys in the city combined. He has run for some office every election year during approximately a decade, with the result of acquiring a substantial minority following. This elected him to the national lower house in a free-for-all field after the death of Congressman R. P. Hill.

Since Oklahoma has repealed its run-off primary law there was great perturbation in the Thomas camp lest Mr. Smith might repeat in the senatorial contest, for the Roosevelt ian following was divided this year between Senator Thomas and Gov. E. W. Marland, a former oil magnate who had tried to outdeal the New Deal in free spending and spoilsmanship. But the solid strength of Senator Thomas' reputation as a serious-minded, honorable, hard-working legislator, it must be acknowledged, pulled him through in greater degree than did the much-advertised and undoubtedly important support of the national Administration. This is illustrated in the fact that W. S. Key, a capable candidate for Democratic nomination for Governor, ran second though the President had commended the work of the WPA, which Key formerly administered in the State and which surely gave him its support.

Two-To-One Majority Counted For New Deal.

THE GUBERNATORIAL nomination went to Leon C. Phillips, another New Dealer, red-headed former speaker of the House and critic of the Marland administration for its patronage extravagance. William H. "Alfalfa Bill" Murray, outspoken adversary of national Administration policies and labeled by Roosevelt as a Republican, ran third. The vote shows incontestably that the New Deal is strong within the Democratic Party in Oklahoma, since it was able to win both major races in spite of splits within its ranks against united opposition. It rolled up nearly a 2-to-1 majority if the combined Thomas-Marland vote is counted against that of Smith, and both of its candidates outran Murray.

The Republican nominee for the United States Senate, Harry O. Glasser, of Enid, is a very able man, a lawyer of high standing and an experienced State legislator. However, since the record heavy vote in the Democratic primary makes its outcome evidently representative and since that vote normally constitutes much the bigger portion of the vote of the State, the prospect does not afford much hope for a Republican victory there in November.

Senator Thomas has made his position by quiet plodding. He went from Indiana to southwestern Oklahoma in 1900 when that section of the State was opened to settlement. He practiced law, pitched semiprofessional baseball and developed a successful summer resort, Medicine Park. He was elected to the State Senate at statehood in 1907 and continued there until 1920, served in the National House of Representatives from 1922 to 1926 and was elected then to the United States Senate. He has abstained from seeking political appointments, on the theory that patronage makes more enemies than friends. His one aberration has been the steady espousal of monetary inflation and a managed currency.

President Hit Smith With "Lunatic Fringe."

SOME HEARERS of Roosevelt's Oklahoma City speech may have caught their breath when the President spoke of a "lunatic fringe" that believed in far-fetched panaceas, since this might in some company have been applied to the Thomas easy-money hobby. But it was directed instead toward Gomer Smith's connection with the Townsend old-age pension plan movement as a national vice president a few years ago and his active advocacy now of the "general welfare" bill which proposes larger pensions through a gross transactions tax.

The more transparent reference to Mr. Smith was in the review by the President—beg pardon, head of the party—of his fireside chat about "yes-but" men. Gomer had voted against several Administration measures, among them the farm bill, for which he was taken to task in a radio speech by the State's junior Senator, Josh Lee—Mr. Lee probably recalling harsh things the former Townsendite had said when running against him for the nomination in 1936 and foreseeing strained relations if the latter should replace Thomas. But Smith continued to protest general fealty to the President, said more in sorrow than in criticism that his advisers about the Grand River Dam must have taken advantage of Mr. Roosevelt's being 1,500 miles from home and observed that this seemed poor thanks for his having risked physical harm to defend President Roosevelt in the tmultuous Townsend-Coughlin third party convention at Cleveland in 1936.

The Administration's treatment of Mr. Smith may indeed be a bit rough, but he has torn about as much skin from opposing candidates in his time as any of his Cherokee forebears. Some who, rightly or wrongly, count "Ole Gomer" as just a bit of a demagogue and look on "Alfalfa Bill" Murray as a boorish eccentric will note also that the ousted former Gov. "Jack" Walton trailed far behind in the Governor's race and may cherish a hope that Oklahoma has politically come of age. For in a State too much known for impeaching its Governors and sending a dead comedian's namesake to Congress it is something to choose a Senator who speaks with dignity and a Governor pledged to needed economy.

Ocean City to Nominate Municipal Candidates

Ocean City, Md., July 14 (AP).—Citizens of this resort town will meet Tuesday night to nominate candidates for mayor and three councilmen for the August 1 election, an election in which debate over site of a new bridge here is expected to play an important part.

Team Bolts, Farmer Hurt.

Hagerstown, Md., July 14 (AP).—George Ziegler, Bridgeport farmer, is recovering from cuts and bruises received when a run-away team of horses dragged him some distance along the Cavetown pike.

The South

By Lewis Gannett.

"A Southerner Discovers The South."

JONATHAN, son of Josephus Daniels, born in Raleigh, N. C., colleged at Chapel Hill, apprenticed to newspaper work in Louisville, and now hereditary editor of the Raleigh News and Observer, set out to see his home country. "A Southerner Discovers the South" (Macmillan, $3), he calls his book; few Southerners (or aliens in the South) have discovered more.

It is characteristic of this people living in the hottest sun ever borne as native by a Northern stock of people, says Mr. Daniels, that it chose Robert E. Lee, a white marble hero, as its idol. Lee or nothing has long been the South's motto; and since Lee was built of an unflecked nobility such as most mortal men cannot attain, the result has generally been nothing.

From Lee's home among the dead in Arlington Mr. Daniels drove south through the mansion country, where rich Yankees carefully preserved the vanished pageantry of the South, to Williamsburg, where another rich Yankee has rebuilt the Southern legend in brick so perfectly historical that it looks "a little like tomorrow morning." Even the tourist cabins seem to Mr. Daniels' roving eyes too much like "unconscious restorations of the disappearing slave quarters."

• • • •

HE DROVE through courthouse squares where poker games are said to have continued without interruption since the War Between the States, dying fathers bequeathing their hands as a legacy to their sons; down that "Gold Avenue" where the factory windows gleam beautiful and blue, being painted to keep the hot Southern sunshine out. There he talked to industrialists, proud of their "model towns," who felt much as the plantation owners felt in 1859, and deemed John Lewis as menacing as John Brown ever seemed. And he looked carefully at the cyclone fences surrounding the model towns, advertising fear.

Over the mountains he rode to the TVA and the Government's model village of Norris. He hates model towns, whether named for Senator Norris, chocolate maker Hershey or plumbing tycoon Kohler. What impressed Mr. Daniels most at Norris was not the mighty dam but the schoolhouse, where the sons of barefoot mountaineers sat side by side with the sons of Yankee engineers, and did as well. That sight proved to him thesis No. 1; the South is poor, and includes a disproportionate number of shoddy individuals, but the stock of the South is not biologically degenerate. Give it a chance and it blooms.

He rode up to the bad lands of Tennessee, where copper mining has left what was once green hemlock country a desert of poisoned mud; he looked at Chattanooga, where George Fort Milton battles for cheap power; at Scottsboro, Ala., capital for a county which has a smaller percentage of Negro population than New York County, New York; he saw the wreck of the boom city (oh, the beauties of undirected private capital!) at Muscle Shoals; he found the garage men at Florence, Ala., more partial to Stribling than to Carmer, but reading both, and he arrived in Memphis in time for the cotton festival.

MEMPHIS, he says, has the prettiest girls in America; they come in from the share-cropper plantations, where fewer than half the houses are close enough to modern plumbing to have a privy. He looked over the finest private plantation in the region, Sherwood Eddy's (he calls it Sam Franklin's) co-operative colony, and the Government's experiment in supplying colonists with 40 acres, a model house and a mule. The co-operative had plenty of missionary ardor, he saw, but not enough familiarity with boll weevils and squash bugs; whereas, 40 acres seemed to him an uneconomic attempt to revive a past that never worked.

Being unafraid of words, this Southerner boldly remarked to himself: "The cotton plantation has always been a collective and its transfer from cotton capitalism to cotton co-operative is far simpler than a transfer from the collective plantation to the collection of little, independent farms." And he went on thinking, and wondering whether the percentage of farmers who fail as independent operators has been greater than the percentage of independent business men who have lost out in the city.

In Mississippi he found the Governor openly offering to subsidize factories. In Georgia a labor-union organizer admitted that factories paying $5 a week might look good to men whose cash family income had rarely topped $200 a year. In Natchez, "where the Old South lives," he chuckled at the schism among the garden clubs; the owners of the biggest old houses wanted a bigger cut on the income from the Garden Club Pilgrimage. He looked vainly for mansions in Alabama, and in Atlanta reflected that all the antebellum mansions of the entire South put together would hardly make such a show as do the Coca-Cola and allied millionaires of Atlanta today. (Atlanta drinks 100 bottles of Coca-Cola a year a head, New York six.) And, gazing affectionately at Charleston and its antique shops, he meditated that millionaires and tourists are the cash crop which has replaced rice.

• • • •

SUMMING IT UP, Mr. Daniels reckons that the Civil War was hardly more than an insignificant detail compared to what went before and what came after. The South today is like what all America was a century ago; it has not changed enough. The clerks in the Northern banking firms have fought more effectively against the South than ever did the blue-clad soldiers. The tariff did "at least as much damage in Dixie as Sherman and Grant together in making the South poor and keeping it poor." Today traveling salesmen are more dangerous than foreign agitators. They are foreign agitators in the South and effectively disruptive.

The South, Mr. Daniels feels, is waking from a narcotic doze; is ceasing to live in legend. What he asks of Northerners is merely that they "recognize the poverty of the South as a part of the same civilization as Harvard, and, in a measure, as the creation of the same people."

You see the South—rutted red soil, lazy courthouses, green Tennessee Valley, Huck Finn's dark, brooding Mississippi, Huey Long's Latin-American land, privyless cabins and Coca-Cola chateaux—in Mr. Daniels' pages. You see and you listen—for Mr. Daniels has a talent for discovering exciting human nature. Editors, governors, plantation owners, sharecroppers all seem to warm at his approach. The living hero of his book is C. T. Carpenter, Virginia-born country lawyer, defender of the tenant farmers' union in Marked Tree, Ark., a true-bred Southern aristocrat, a man of tradition and intelligence and responsibility. One of his dead heroes is James Louis Pettigru, who died and was buried in Charleston in 1863, under a stone which recited that "in the great Civil War he withstood his people for his country, but his people did homage to the man who held his conscience higher than their praise."

I don't often indulge in such superlatives; but I suspect that Jonathan Daniels' "A Southerner Discovers the South" may fitly be described as doing for the South today what James Bryce's "The American Commonwealth" did for the Nation a half century ago.

Turns With A Bookworm

THERE WAS a small cocktail party given last week at the Knopf offices for Kathryn Hulme (pronounced Hume, or Cholmondeley), author of "We Lived as Children" . . . Miss Hulme had a note of mystery about her, too, admitting that she has a business career as well as a literary vocation—not that she put it in such important terms . . . She said she held a job for a living and took some pride in being competent so she could write to please herself without figuring on the cash returns . . . Sometimes she takes leave from business and gives all her time to writing; then she goes back to the job—but she wouldn't say what it is . . . San Francisco is her home town, but she has lived in France and New York . . . The first time she went abroad, she said, she and a chum earned the money by raising prime roasting chickens, which were sold at fancy prices . . . Friends let them use a big barn for the fowl house . . . And they made enough to go to France . . .

EDWARD THOMPSON, author of "The Youngest Disciple," was born in India, and when he was taken back to England at the age of 6 he formed a lasting determination to return to India . . . So he did when he was grown up; but he gets us all turned around by explaining that a jungle is not necessarily jungly . . . Where he lives "it is dry, slightly rolling, more like a heath" . . . Maybe it is infested by Snarks who are really Boojums . . . His book is built around the legends of Buddha . . . Mr. Thompson married an American girl from Cleveland, and now they live in Oxford, England . . .

Text of Speech By Roosevelt in San Francisco

Hints He Wishes Another Nation Would Call a Peace Parley.

By the Associated Press.

San Francisco, Calif., July 14 Text of President Roosevelt's address at the Golden Gate International Exposition grounds here today follows:

Confidence that in the year 1939 the United States and all the Western Hemisphere will be at peace is shown by the fact that in this Nation two great international expositions are about to be held.

It is our hope and our expectation that that confidence is well placed—and that the very fact of holding these two expositions means an added impetus to the cause of peace. Great gatherings of such a nature make for trade, for better understanding and for renewed good-will.

It has been suggested that it was a mistake to hold two expositions the same year, but I cannot agree with this because it seems to me that each is a supplement to the other. Thousands of Americans will plan to visit both of them next year—to see both ends of our wide Nation and perhaps to travel one way by the All-American route via the Panama Canal.

Encourage Travelers.

Furthermore, those who visit us from other countries will be stimulated to cross our country. Too often we are judged by those from other lands who spend a few hurried days or weeks on one seaboard and think they know America.

At New York the other day I suggested, furthermore, that we Americans much wish that many more people from other nations would come to visit us. We have the travel habit and we wish that they would acquire it. The more of them who visit us the happier we shall be.

In the construction of the Golden Gate International Exposition, the Federal Government has been glad to be of material assistance to your plans.

In addition to the allotment by the Congress of $1,500,000, I am told that you have received nearly $5,000,000 in the form of useful work paid for from WPA funds, and nearly another $2,000,000 in equally useful work paid for from public works funds, in other words, total Federal assistance of more than $8,250,000.

Man Over Nature.

I am glad that the Federal Government has been able so greatly to help the fine spirit which throughout the Western States encouraged this undertaking. And I am glad, too, that we have been able to help the State of California and the municipalities around San Francisco Bay in the construction of the two great bridges which I have seen today for the first time. They form a magnificent illustration of the new saying that "what nature has put asunder, man can join together."

In two hours I hope to review the United States fleet, now at anchor in this great harbor. It is not merely a symbol—it is a potent, ever-ready fact in the national defense of the United States.

Every right-thinking man and woman in the United States wishes that it were safe for the Nation to spend less of our national budget on our armed forces. All know that we are faced with a condition and not a theory—and that the condition is not of our choosing.

Hope to Cut Armament.

Money spent on armaments does not create permanent income-producing wealth, and about the only satisfaction we can take out of the present world situation is that the proportion of our national income that we spend on armaments is only a quarter or a third of the proportion that most of the other great nations of the world are spending at this time.

We fervently hope for the day when the other leading nations of the world will realize that their present course must inevitably lead them to disaster. We stand ready to meet them and encourage them in any efforts they may make toward a definite reduction in world armament.

The year 1939 would go down in history not only as the year of the two great American world's fairs, but would be a year of world-wide rejoicing if it could also mark definite steps toward permanent world peace. That is the hope and the prayer of the overwhelming number of men and women and children in all the earth today.

D. C. Heads Accept Street Sign Opinion

The District Commissioners yesterday approved a legal opinion that they have not been infringing on a patent in setting up new transparent street signs throughout the city.

The opinion was rendered by Lloyd H. Sutton, patent attorney, and concurred in by acting Corporation Counsel Vernon E. West, after a complaint had been made by the Visible Night and Day Street Name Signs, Inc., of Chicago.

The Federal Diary

Registered in U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

Federal employes, who come from every State in the Union, have long felt a certain contempt for the poor little District of Columbia, forlorn child that not only has no vote but also has no flag.

However, amidst all the excitement (well, mild interest) over the necessity for a District flag, we'd like to point out that one already exists.

It's not official—but it is hauled out of a closet and used to decorate the ballroom of one of Washington's largest hotels whenever any function is held that has a District flavor.

• • • •

The flag was the winner in a contest held in 1925 by a committee of Washingtonians who were trying to get Congress to legalize a District flag. The committee had a dinner at the hotel (which had just opened)—and, when the United States Government failed to do anything about the matter, the hotel bought the flag and has used it ever since.

It's quite elaborate: Hand painted white diamond (containing the Washington Monument and the American eagle) in the center, dividing the flag into red and blue halves; in each corner is a star representing the four sections of Washington.

P. S. It's used by the same flag-conscious hotel that on July 4 flies the exotic Albanian, Ecuadorean and Venezuelan standards (beside the American) because envoys from those countries live there.

Continuing our Interior notes: Eva Rogers, Park Service, and Betty Taylor, Reclamation, were two of the younger passengers on the Government sponsored cruise that just returned from Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands. Miss Taylor is a Virginian. Miss Rogers, from Chattanooga, is one of the few who ever received 100 per cent on a civil service exam . . . Walter I. Swanton, Reclamation engineer, has returned from his annual jaunt to New England talking about the big State of Maine potatoes.

Government workers, especially those new in Washington, often find difficulty in making contacts with others of similar tastes. Sparred on by recent correspondence in Mary Haworth's column a veteran Treasury employe has begun a service called "You Should Meet." If you want someone with whom to play tennis or go swimming, a card partner or a boating companion, you register (for a small fee) with Miss "Carol Lynn." If she knows another Government worker who has the same tastes, she will arrange to introduce you at her home . . . Miss Lynn emphasizes the point that her service is not a dating bureau; it's an attempt to bring together serious people of congenial interests—and is restricted to Federal employes.

• • • •

State societies to some extent answer this gap in the social life of many a Washingtonian . . . In fact, we received a request the other day for information about the New York State Society. Chairman of its membership committee is Maurice E. Sands, 410 Eleventh street northeast.

Dr. O. O. Magistad, recently chief of the Hawaii experiment station of the Department of Agriculture, will direct a new program investigating damage to farm land in the West caused by salty water used for irrigation purposes. Dr. Magistad's headquarters will be at Riverside, Calif.

• • • •

Dr. John R. Mohler, chief of the Department of Agriculture's Bureau of Animal Industry, will soon be enjoying the lakes and mountains of Switzerland as chairman of the American delegation to the Thirteenth International Veterinary Congress at Zurich and Interlaken, August 21 to 27. Dr. Mohler, president of the Twelfth Congress at New York City in 1934, will open the first session of the 1938 conclave.

He will be accompanied by Dr. George H. Hart and Dr. C. M. Haring, of California; Dr. D. M. Campbell, of Chicago; Dr. Adolph Eichhorn and Dr. Cassius Way, of New York; Dr. W. J. Butler, of Montana, and Dr. R. P. Marsteller, of Texas.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics assures us that American lemon production is increasing to such an extent that the United States has become an exporter of lemons. Maybe that's why the Government restaturants dish out slices of lemon free of charge.

Pere Dutilly Sails For Data in Arctic For Papal Museum

Pere Artheme Dutilly, Canadian research assistant of the Catholic University, sailed yesterday from Montreal for a trip skirting the coast of Labrador into Hudson Bay to obtain a complete collection illustrating natural history of the Canadian Arctic for the Lateran Museum at Vatican City.

At Fort Churchill he will meet the Rev. Maximilian Duman, of St. Vincent's Archabbey, Latrobe, Pa. The two will push west and north among Eskimos to collect samples of plants, soil, weapons and tools of earlier civilizations. Pere Dutilly will sort, classify and study the collection this winter.

Ralph Collins, Jr., Made Lieutenant

Ralph A. Collins, jr., of 5030 Forty-first street northwest, has been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps by President Roosevelt, the Navy announced yesterday.

A graduate of the University of Maryland, Lieut. Collins received a B. S. degree in engineering. At the university he won four A's in the advanced R. O. T. C. course, and was secretary of Scabbard and Blade, honorary military fraternity.

Lieut. Collins is the son of Ralph A. Collins, New York Sun correspondent, and a brother of Lieut. William R. Collins, U. S. M. C.

His grandfather was the first city editor of the Evening Star.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Once Happy Romance of Middle-Aged Couple Comes to Grief; Despondent Woman Asks Reason Why.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am 38 years old and have been going with a man who is 53. We have been very happy together and until recently had enjoyed each other's company always. I love him dearly and I know that he loves me, but lately something is happening to both of us . . . He used to be very attentive and never as interested in anything or anyone else as he was in me. He constantly showed, by his attentions and compliments, that he cared for me. But now, he seems to notice everyone but me.

• • • •

Several of our acquaintances have remarked that he shows more attention to other women than he does to me. Such remarks hurt, for, although it is true to a certain extent, still, I have learned that he is the type of man who naturally prefers the company of women to men, and is instinctively gallant to all ladies. He has few men friends, but makes it a point to go out of his way to make a friend of every woman. He thrives on the compliments of women and it worries me to think that some woman might make a fool of him again—as they have made a fool of him in the past.

• • • •

When he meets women who are older than I, he remarks how young they look; how well preserved they are; and how much he would like to know this woman or that woman. He has told me that my own hard life has robbed me of some femininity, and it may be true. I have had a hard struggle, first, to educate myself, and secondly, to help others when it was vitally necessary for me to do so. I am glad to have been able to do this and have no regret for what I may have lost in process. An early heartbreak denied me the love, home and children I had dreamed of, and would have preferred to loneliness and struggle. This may have left its mark, but I learned long ago to accept what God sends, without complaint. But don't misunderstand me—I have been very happy, as well as very unhappy.

• • • •

I have never lacked for masculine companionship and always managed to have a good time until I fell so completely in love with this man . . . I am very unhappy and wish that he would tell me if he doesn't want to see me any more; or, if he continues to see me, that he wouldn't act as if he were trying in every way to make me feel badly. Nowadays, he never thinks to call me during the day, or to ask me to go riding, or walking, except on Sundays. Then, too, instead of seeing me each Sunday, as formerly, now he wants to change to every other Sunday. For years we had been together on that day; I had grown to look forward to it as our day. Now, the day is spoiled for me even when we are together. Please tell me what is wrong, and why he has changed so.

JESSIE.

Man at Fault.

DEAR JESSIE: You beau is a ridiculously vain, insufferably egotistical ladies' man, a fact which I pointed out to him when his earlier letter, pertaining to this same ailing romance, was answered in this column on June 14. He is, in plain words, an old fool—ad, as has been said before now, there is no fool like an old fool. His own letter told, both on and between the lines, all that one needed to know in order to recognize him for exactly what he is—a man whom the weight of advancing years is making senile rather than wise, particularly in regard to his relationships with women. Your supplementary document merely corroborates the accuracy of my original analysis and indictment of him.

• • • •

As I said to him: "(She) must be a very heart-hungry woman indeed who regards you as much of a find; but (her) lack of choice is your good fortune if only you had a sufficiently saving perspective on yourself to realize it." I warned him that unless he comes to his senses and revises his preposterous opinion of himself to something more nearly approximating the truth, he is bound to become "an increasingly vulnerable target for women who make a game of exploiting men of (his) age and type as suckers and fools."

• • • •

Inasmuch as he admits in his letter that he "enjoys being with (you) and cannot seem to make up (his) mind to cease seeing (you);" since he says that "(he) wants to be with (you), but does not wish to marry (you);" and further says that, "of course, I might not find someone else and then I might marry her"—it seems to me that the time is over-ripe for giving him a richly deserved sock in the ego—a sock that is practically guaranteed to burst the bubble of his conceit and let him see himself, and you, in better perspective.

• • • •

He is a man so unsure of his essential manhood that he constantly seeks approbation in the eyes of women; and I daresay the bottom would fall out of his universe if your present adoration of him, which he takes so smugly for granted (he blandly admits that you love him "desperately"), were suddenly withdrawn. Nothing is so calculated to recall his wandering gaze from other women, and fix it with urgently imploring interest upon yourself, as a sudden decision on your part to have done with the relationship as a burnt-out romance and a mutual waste of time.

• • • •

Tell him that he has, for months, so humiliated, distressed and upset you that your patience, endurance and even your affection for him are worn to shreds. Tell him common sense demands that you safeguard yourself from such vexation of spirit, and that the only remedy for the situation, as you see it, is to stop seeing him altogether and look elsewhere for the answer to your companionship needs. Tell him you have waited far too long already for him to make up his mind whether he wants you or whether he doesn't, and that now the decision is out of his hands. Tell it (for it will be the truth) that you would be a bigger fool than he is—which is saying a great deal—if you were to attempt to continue in a relationship that appears to be a headache to him and certainly has become a heartache to you. Today's HEALTH TALK

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Death of Child Resulted In 'Certified' Milk Idea

Several inquiries, both by mail and in person, seem to indicate that there is some confusion as to what certified milk is. In these summer months, when a good milk supply is so necessary for the health of the family, especially the baby, a recognition of the virtues of certified milk should be common knowledge.

Certified milk represents the pinnacle of art and science in the dairy industry. "Certified" milk means that a long list of exacting conditions have been faithfully carried out, resulting in a milk so good that a county medical society is willing to certify to its qualities.

The idea of certified milk came from the mind of Dr. Henry L. Coit, of Newark, N. J., after he had lost his small daughter in a milk-borne epidemic in 1888. He found, after some difficulties, dairymen who would follow his rules for clean milk production. About 1894 the plan was working in that one locality, and it attracted the attention of doctors all over the country, and soon other medical milk commissions were formed.

The rules which these commissions enforce are many and rigorous. They fill a pamphlet of 16 closely printed pages.

First general principle is a healthy herd and a herd selected for the quality of its milk. The cows are fed rations of vitamins and minerals. In the milking stables each cow must have 600 cubic feet of air space.

Pink and Plum Lace in New Bicolor Effect

IF YOU THINK there is nothing new to be done with lace, try combing it in a bicolor effect and you have the glamorous evening gown shown above. Yards and yards of the plum-colored lace, thin as a cobweb, comprise the main part of the gown, while pink lace is used to drape the decollete. Then there's a third note of color in the gold leather girdle. Notice that the fullness of the skirt begins below the fitted portion over the hips, and thus the slender effect at the waistline is preserved. The gown was designed by Ardanse.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes.

New York, July 14.

AH, WELL, it's a woman's world, after all! We inch and nudge our way in everywhere, these days. The other day I nearly fell off the diving board when I saw a pretty, shapely girl of 18 acting as life guard at a private swimming pool up near Riverside Drive! Thus our sex edges into a picture always hogged by gorgeous men. I had a word or two with this pioneer.

ALICE HUGHES.

Her name is Renee Bebert, and she has been guarding lives in the sunshine for several years, she told me." I've never had to save a life yet," she admitted cheerfully, "but I'd know what to do." Most of the time La Bebert just sits up on her little white stand and looks beautiful—ready to save a life at the drop of a shoulder-strap. She tells me that the young men show-offs who infest such places often pretend they're in trouble so that she'll jump in and save their precious lives. She doesn't mind, though it gets to be a bore. She says that next winter she's going to Miami, and perhaps down there she can live up to her billing by saving a life or two in the Florida surf.

I asked her if the neighborhood cut-ups ever made offside passes.

• • • •

"I'm only 5-feet-6, but I'm all muscle," she replied, and flexed a nice knot of biceps for me. "And anyway," she added significantly and coyly, "My boy friend is one of the life guards here, too!"

Aha, so that's the way it is with Renee! And very nice, too! All that summer sunshine, a nice cool pool, and the heart right on the premises! There probably isn't much money in it, but who couldn't envy Renee a little?.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Do you love your country? Of course, and when you hear this small tale your devotion should increase.

"Foxy" Sondheim, one of our smart clothes-designers, has just come back from England. "I was lunching at the Savoy in London with four business girls," Foxy told me the other day. "And we'd no sooner finished then they all excused themselves. I had hoped for a long chat, and asked why they had to run. 'Sorry,' said one, 'but we have gas-mask drill in half an hour!'" How would you like those vegetables? Of course, the Atlantic Ocean has shrunk, but it is still 3,000 long miles of tempestuous water, thank Heaven! . . .

Yesterday my afternoon revery was disturbed by the sound of the spouse's cracked barytone-singing six verses of "The Mademoiselle from Armentieres," that rough old war ditty. "Why?" I demanded. "This is the French Bastille Day," he replied, "and as an old soldier I'm celebrating it." His voice being what it is, I was almost sorry he had been frightened back from the woods of Yorktown Heights by a garter snake.

• • • •

Poking about the Waldorf roof restaurant the other noon, I caught a flash of Mrs. Joseph E. Davies, wife of the Ambassador to Belgium. She was wearing a wine-red velveteen suit, with a matching turban. And I'll be darned if she wasn't wearing sables. Hetty, just hand me my raccoon coat—I'm going swimming.

Barbara Bennett, daughter of Richard and sister of Joan and Connie, will be a mama for the fifth time late this summer. Her husband is Morton Downey, the bewitching Irish thrush. After that, Barbara insists, she wants to return to the stage. Ah, this trouper blood! . . .

• • • •

I ordered a new set of plush-covered crutches the other day when I heard that Sue Vidor, daughter of the Florence Vidor, who is now Mrs. Jascha Heifetz, was thinking about getting married to a boy named Bud Armstrong. Why, it was only day before yesterday that Florence was one of the most beautiful and popular stars of the silent movies! Help, help, it just can't be true that her little girl is already at the marrying age!

A visiting British doctor, who doubles as inventor, has just shown me his latest gadget—a glove whose thumb and forefinger can be freed by yanking a small zipper, allowing the wearer more scope for the usual handbag fumbling of our sex. Does anything make a man madder?

Alabaster Is Ideal For Those Allergic To 'Dead-White'

Paris (U.P.).—Alabaster, the aristocratic Patou terminology for oyster-white, is the ideal escape this summer for those who shun dead-white for daytime wear.

For the second successive summer collection Patou exploits the off-white shades of pearl gray and oyster. Less conspicuous than glaring white for street wear, the alabaster shade makes many of the smart new silk suits which are quickly replacing woolens.

One of the most practical of the tailleurs is in alabaster soft dull silk. Its straight skirt is given fullness by two short "kick pleats" back and front. Its fitted jacket comes well below the hips; its revers are narrow. With it Patou puts a brilliant blue Irish linen blouse.

Pearl gray, first cousin to oyster white, is sued for another tailored suit. Adding to its effectiveness is the tussah silk blouse of cobalt blue with tiny red polka-dots.

You can even carry the off-white silk tulle gown whose thickly hours. Perhaps the loveliest of Patou's evening creations is the off-white vogue into after-sundown gathered skirt billows over a rustling flesh-colored taffeta slip. Multi-colored bouquets of flowers appear in rich silk embroidery—remindful of Chinese embroidery on a fine mandarin coat—all around the skirt.

'Good Old Summertime' Best Reducing Season

Hot Weather Dishes Low in Calories, High in Vitamins.

By Ida Jean Kain.

IF YOU will watch the little things in summer, the big thing—your weight—will take care of itself, because the dishes that make up the most tempting menus at this season are made to order for the reducer.

Your diet has never been so easy to follow. Hot weather puts a dent in your appetite and you do not want those heavy, rich foods supplying too many calories to burn. You prefer the fruits and vegetables that are low in calories and high in vitamins, and you can help yourself freely to berries, melon, crisp salads of fruits or vegetables, corn on the cob, tomatoes, cucumbers—the entire list of the foods you like best.

There is no restriction on any of these foods, even as to quantity. You couldn't eat enough of them to prevent a loss of weight. But you can spoil everything by forgetting how many calories you get in butter, mayonnaise, cream and sugar, and by using too much salt and drinking quantities of water at the wrong time.

Although they look so insignificant, butter, mayonnaise and cream are fuel foods and should be restricted in hot weather. They easily supply as many calories as some of the heavy dishes you recognize as fattening, heating and unfit for summer consumption. Without thinking, you may spread an excess of butter on "light" sandwiches, or garnish the salad with so much mayonnaise that several hundred calories are added to the day's menu. Keep in mind that one pat of butter and one tablespoon of mayonnaise each contain 100 calories, and that just 200 calories daily above your actual requirements will send the scales up half a pound in a week regardless of your smaller appetite and preference for the lighter foods.

Fruit is excellent in your menu—unless you add too much rich cream. The difference between cream and milk on your fruit is a matter of 100 calories or so. Cling fast to your rule of using milk instead of cream to take advantage of the low calorie content of fruits.

You are unlikely to need extra salt during the hot weather to offset the loss of salt from the body in perspiration, because you are not engaged in heavy physical work. If you are one of those overweights who use salt copiously with the idea that nothing is ever salted enough in cooking and that salt improves the flavor of fruit, you probably should cut down on this mineral. Weather or no, salt remains an important factor in the storage of water in the tissues, and it can interfere with your loss of weight.

You always need eight glasses of water during the day, but never more than eight ounces of any liquid with a meal. There is no surer way of building up an appetite than by taking quantities of water around meal time.

Keep an eye on the small things in weight reduction, and you will find it easy to take your weight down in the summer months.

Movie Star Gives Tips on Sun Tan

Ruby Keeler, movie star, recently spent a week at the beach and acquired a complete coat of sun tan—one that was pale, smooth, flattering. Here are eight rules she evolved for sun-tanners as the result of her experience:

Take a tip from the Roman athletes and anoint your body with oil—or cream or lotion.

Protect your hair or it will become brittle and dry. Try tying on a peasant bonnet to match the dirndl which matches your swim suit. Smart and efficient.

New sunners should begin with three minutes a day, gradually increase to a maximum of one hour.

Your body won't tan evenly without your help. Legs need more sun, shoulders less. And don't forget the inside of your arms.

Don't tan in lines. For sun bathing avoid suits with high halters, odd strap effects, or you'll look peculiar in an evening gown (unless you can match the straps)!

When oiling your body don't forget to include the skin around your nails.

Protect your eyes. Wear dark glasses or eye pads when in direct sun. Use wrinkle cream around eyes. Bathe them early and often.

Change your make-up—powder, rouge, lipstick, mascara, eye shadow—to keep pace with your changing complexion.

Good Manners For the 'Teens

A SOPHISTICATED dress-up dinner date. But Emily's manners tell Bob she's more used to a coffee-and-sinkers treat.

Instead of passing the cream pitcher with the handle toward Bob—she holds tightly to the handle herself. She clutches her fork spear fashion when not eating—instead of laying it across her plate.

You'd think she'd SEE her breaks," Bob moans miserably to himself—aware of the amusement of the other diners.

That's just the trouble. How can Emily see what's wrong and right in etiquette when she's never found out which is which.

The girls in Bob's set have found out. They never hang knife and fork on the edge of a plate—but correctly they lay them across it. They don't push a dish away when they've finished with it—but let it stay put until the waiter removes it.

They aren't fork packers—but take separate forkfuls of meat and vegetables.

Wherever you see these girls—and you see them in the best places—you're aware of their breeding. In theater lobbies they stand graciously aside while their escorts purchase tickets—never hang on a man's arm.

At country clubs—you see them meeting people with a smiling "How do you do?" No flowery, "A pleasure, I'm sure." They don't bounce into cars unassisted—but let men open the car door, assist them.

At dances, restaurants, sports events, everywhere—you can be perfectly poised, too, with pointers from our 40-page booklet, "Etiquette for the Teens." It explains the modern code for girls, young men; gives you confidence wherever you may go.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Etiquete fotr the Teens," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name and address, and the name of booklet.

The GENTLER SEX

By Malvina Lindsay.

Eternal Quandaries.

Shall she make her guests sigh contentedly over her fried chicken and hot biscuits, or shall she set them down to canned salmon and potato chips and enchant them as the rested and scintillating hostess?

Shall she rush downtown to the midseason sales and pick up some "marvelous little values" for next summer, or shall she spend her money on new fall things before they are all picked over?

Shall she economize on everything to save her husband's salary and then lose him to some charmer in a mink coat and two-thread stockings or shall she dress up, go out with him and have a high time and both of them end up on relief?

Shall she reduce to obtain a perfect "suit figure" and get a haggard face and bony neck, or shall she waddle along in her size 20s, keep her complexion and have the assurance of being a knockout in decollete?

Shall she make herself hideous in a new "doll's hat" and arouse that curious look in men's eyes, or shall she don headgear that becomes her and be assured that no one will pause on the street to look at her?

Shall she take her exercises when she is all tired out at night and keep her waistline and hips under control, or shall she roll into bed and wake up with a rested face and a flabby stomach?

Shall she clean the bathroom and have the inner assurance that she is a neat person of character, or shall she take a long beauty nap and wake up to be a jolly good fellow to her children and a fascinating wife to welcome home her husband?

Shall she let the children go to the neighbor's to play, and spend a quiet afternoon in constant expectation of disaster, or shall she turn her own back yard into a community playground and listen to the bedlam with an easy conscience?

Shall she have the Speels over and spend the evening keeping her husband and Sam Speel from fighting about Roosevelt, or shall she have the Gadds and wear herself out listening to Elsie Gadd talk about her suntan and acidity?

Shall she be an easy mark and buy from the fifteenth peddler that comes to her door, or shall she send him crisply away and be hounded by her conscience about the "poor man" the rest of the afternoon?

Shall she encourage her husband in good habits by accepting his offer to run the carpet sweeper over the living room, and then do it herself afterward, or shall she simplify matters by saying "No, don't bother."

Shall she go on exercising and primping and smirking to please men, or shall she just throw everything overboard, be herself, live her own life, and tell them to go jump in the lake?

Dainty Peach Dishes Suggested in Contest

Recipes Offer Variety of Unusual Ways of Preparing Popular Fruit for Summer Desserts; Refrigerator Cake Wins 1st Prize.

"AS PRETTY as a peach" might readily have described many of the ideas set up for the last week's recipe contest. Tasty fresh peach suggestions poured in for approval.

Due to the freedom of range offered contestants, there were "peachy" recipes for 30 different uses of this palatable fruit. Naturally wide variations of ingredients and methods marked individual entries. This was notably true of a certain peach salad which was basically a cool stuffed peach, filled with all sorts of delectable nuts, cheese and fruits. There were numerous suggestions for preparation of this salad.

A few of the many refreshing fresh peach ideas were: Baked, fried, candied and carameled peaches; peach betty, tapioca dumplings, custards, sundaes, turnovers, sponges, upside-down cake, old-fashioned short cake, and deep dish pie. One child of 12 entered her favorite peach tartlet. Honorable mention has been awarded 15 deserving runner-ups.

Sumptuous Dessert

Luscious indeed is the tempting recipe entered by Mrs. B. C. Phillips, 631 Allison street northwest. Its sumptuous yet cooling properties as a summer dessert have won for its creator first prize of $3. Mrs. Phillips has entered a fresh peach confection of unquestionable delicacy and mellowness. Her refrigerator cake combines usually unrelated ingredients in a new and harmonious manner. The flavor of orange juice, ginger ale and fresh fruit is different, especially when combined with cream and marshmallows.

MRS. PHILIPS.

Fresh Peach Refrigerator Cake.

½ pound marshmallows
½ cup orange juice
½ cup ginger ale
1 cup heavy cream, whipped
½ cup chopped crystallized ginger
6 to 8 peaches sliced
Sponge cake or lady fingers

Cut marshmallows in quarters, add to orange juice and stir over hot water until almost melted; cool slightly and add ginger ale. When slightly thickened, fold in ¾ cup of whipped cream. Line a spring pan with waxed paper. Arrange a layer of cake or lady fingers, next a layer of peaches, then a layer of marshmallows; repeat until there are three layers of cake and two of filling. Chill in refrigerator overnight. Unmold; garnish with remaining peaches and cream. Yields six to eight portions.

New Pie Design

Second prize of $2 goes to Mrs. James Jay Lawlor, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, whose frozen peach nut pie is an appetizing combination of fresh fruit, cherries, nuts, marshmallows, fresh orange juice and whipped cream. Frozen pies at this season of the year are more appetizing than the heavy "fresh from the oven" variety.

MRS. LAWLOR.

Frozen Peach Nut Pie.

2 cups sliced peaches
1-3 cup powdered sugar
¼ cup candied cherries
½ pint whipped cream
10 marshmallows
½ cup nuts
¼ cup orange juice
Baked pie shell

Cut marshmallows in quarters and add orange juice. Allow to stand while baking pie shell. A crumb crust is particularly good with this recipe. When shell is cool, fill with the peaches which have been mixed with the powdered sugar. Whip cream stiff, fold in the marshmallow-orange mixture, the cherries and nuts. Pour over peaches and chill several hours before serving.

Dainty Tartlets.

Miss Constance Harris, 13, 2230 California street northwest, has submitted a dainty fruit tartlet. She calls her contribution peace fanchonettes. Her suggestion has been awarded a prize of $1. This recipe is an ideal light dessert for late suppers, bridge parties and summer luncheons. The fanchonettes are dainty in appearance—and possess delicate flavor.

Peach Fanchonettes.

6 halves of peaches
1 egg yolk
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup cream
½ cup sugar

Line 6 tart pans with unbaked pastry. Fill each with half of a large peach with cut side down. Mix the egg yolk, cream, sugar and salt, and pour over the fruit. Bake at 425 degrees for 15 minutes. Spread with a meringue and bake for 15 to 20 minutes.

Meringue.

3 egg whites
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon almond extract
6 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon vanilla

Add the salt to the egg whites and beat until stiff. Fold the sugar gradually into them and add the flavoring.

Summer Life Saver

MRS. SNELLINGS.

Mrs. Walter J. Snellings, 4915 New Hampshire avenue northwest, says her recipe constitutes "delightful and different refreshment" for warm summer evenings. Her remark is apt for fruit fritters are unquestionable hot weather life savers. Although the majority of entrants in this week's contest submitted dessert ideas. Mrs. Snellings' prize-winning fritter recipe may be served as the basis for a whole meal. Fried ham or Canadian bacon and crisp peach fritters with a mellow vanilla sauce would create an agreeable entree.

PEACH FRITTERS.

1 1-3 cups flour
1½ teaspoons baking powder
1-3 teaspoons salt
½ cup milk
2 eggs
1 teaspoon melted butter

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together. Add milk to the well-beaten eggs and combine with dry ingredients. Stir in melted butter and mix thoroughly. (If possible, set aside batter for one hour to ripen.) Cut peaches in halves; dip each piece in batter and fry in deep fat until a golden brown. Serve hot with vanilla sauce.

VANILLA SAUCE.

1½ cups brown sugar
2 tablespoons cornstarch
¾ cup water
2½ teaspoons vanilla

Mix sugar and cornstarch together and add water. Boil 5 minutes, stirring mixture constantly, and cool thoroughly before adding vanilla. Serve cold.

Sizzling Refreshment

MISS G. D. SALE.

Miss Gere Dell Sale, 1428 Whittier street northwest, has been awarded a prize of $1 for her cooling formula for a home-made fizzing soda, topped with sliced peaches. Add to this fresh home-made peach ice cream and you have a tempting summer treat.

PEACH HOME-MADE SODA.

1 quart fresh peach ice cream
2 quarts ginger ale
4 medium, fresh, sliced peaches.

To make ice cream: Make a boiled custard of ½ pint cream, ¼ quart milk, 1 egg and ¼ cup sugar. To this, when cool, add 1 pint soft peaches, mashed and well sweetened. Makes 1 quart of ice cream.

To make finished soda: Fill tall iced-tea glasses two-thirds full of ginger ale. To this add two tablespoons of ice cream, topped with fresh sliced peaches. Stir a little to cause the ginger ale to fizz a bit. Recipe wil serve eight.

Recipe Runners-Up

Miss Gertrude McKee Black, 114 Mount Ida avenue, Alexandria, Va; peach meringue torte.

Miss Mabel Thompson, 639 Quincy street northwest; peach dumplings.

Mrs. Irving L. Wild, Charlotte Hall, Md.; peach turnover.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

WHY do you like to visit one friend above all others? We've been wondering this about Joan C., one of our good friends. We may not be as intimate with her as we are with others, but we always find a gentle pull toward her house whenever we get the wanderlust. We decided that perhaps a little Joan-analysis might be in order.

Summer time is usually visiting time, though we don't hold with the old notion of hospitality. Then relatives and friends used to descend and stay on for months, and brides never thought of going to housekeeping before they had been married at least a year (the first year being spent in protracted visits with relations). But we do believe in the simple gestures that make any home a pleasant place to visit.

Joan is always extremely glad to have you come, and she shows it. She has the knack of remembering that you don't like your morning eggs too hard or too soft. She doesn't have your visit planned to the hilt so that you are exhausted at the end of a week, not only from the sheer physical strain of meeting lots of strange people but from the mental guilt of watching a maidless hostess run her feet off to entertain you.

Joan's guest room is neutral but charming—not too much frou-frou but enough feminine touches to make you feel special. The closet is ample and fulsomely supplied with hangers and the dressing table is barren, ready for your own accessories.

Joan herself is one of these fortunate few who can pass her homemaking off her shoulder easily. She plans simple meals for guests instead of wearing herself out doing fancy dishes. When she has parties for her guests, she does them charmingly, with imagination, but with the least possible effort. Buffet suppers with everything prepared a day in advance—afternoon tea service where confectioner's little cakes and good tea are glamorous and delightful because Joan specializes in having them so. As who wouldn't with as lovely a silver service as Joan possesses?

Joan tells you that she prefers to serve breakfast to you on a tray in bed—and really makes you believe it so that you can sleep your sleep out. Joan claims that getting the children's breakfast and her hearty husband off to business is one hectic moment in the day she would just as well not share with a guest. And when you are with her, she convinces you so thoroughly that you have no qualms about accepting a prettily appointed breakfast tray each morning.

A very smart lady, is Joan!

A Grand Slam Shower.

Try a bridge table shower for the bride-to-be. It's comparatively inexpensive for the guests, but will provide many useful presents. Here are some gift suggestions: Score cards, pencils and tallies, table covers, ash trays, playing cards, serving equipment for four, cocktail napkins, bridge cloth and napkins.

Fruits Best Dessert for Summer

Some women have the feeling that unless they make a special dessert for the family they are not doing right by them. What an unfortunate feeling to have, because many times a made dessert would be too heavy to finish the meal, while simple fruit would be just right.

There are around 20 different kinds of fruits canned and many of them are packed in different styles, which present many changes in service. For instance, peaches and pears may be had in halves or slices; apricots may be whole or in halves; pineapple may be obtained in slices, spears, chunklets.

Instead of always serving the family just one fruit, serve them a dish of mixed fruits. The canned mixed fruits for salads or the cocktail fruits may be chosen, or you can make your own combination. Whole peeled apricots are especially good when combined with white cherries; pear halves blend nicely with plums, either the Green Gage or the purple variety; sliced peaches and grapefruit sections taste good together; while crushed pineapple has an affinity for such berries as raspberries, loganberries and blackberries. This simple method of combining fruits gives an opportunity to blend textures of fruits along with flavors and colors, thus giving unlimited possibilities for desserts.

New Utensils Ease Work of Picnics

Improved Vacuum Jugs and Coolers Keep Drinks Right.

THE HUE and cry these days seem to be "Let's have a picnic." Then someone is sure to add, "Let's make it as little trouble as possible."

Very well, have your picnic and make it as much fun and as little work as modern science and the shopping centers will let you. Today with equipment constantly pointing toward less work for mother, outdoor eating should emerge as a natural aid to lagging appetites. Washington is a natural storehouse of picnic inspiration. Few cities of its size have so many attractive sites. The Mount Vernon vicinity, the Maryland and Virginia countrysides and Rock Creek Park abound in picnic grounds.

Vacuum Jugs Improved.

Local stores are now displaying a wide variety of picnic equipment. All purse ranges are catered to. Whole sections in these shopping centers are turned over to camping equipment and supplies. The most important consideration now is keeping food cool outdoors. For this vacuum jugs are available from $1 up. Improvements in the caps and spouts of these containers have been made recently. There is one chromium and crockery cooler carrying 20 cubes of ice which is a perfect conveyor of lemonade, punch, tomato juice or iced tea.

For the hostess with culinary position to uphold, there are handsome electric roasters and bakers. Modern trends in outdoor eating make necessary one hot dish per meal even in sweltering weather. Some digestive systems rebel at an entire dinner of iced or chilled foods. For a very special picnic dinner, baked beans, chicken legs and wings or a sweet ham butt roasted at home may be carried in its own juices in an electric baker. Vacuum packed in the back of the car, it will remain warm for several hours.

Charcoal Grill Handy.

For $1 a sturdy folding charcoal grill, of durable metal construction, cross-legged with a flat wire tabletop for grilling hamburgers, steaks and frankfurters, is obtainable. This handy appurtenance collapses as neatly as an artist's easel. Three briquets of charcoal come with it.

Gay baskets, hampers, waxed paper and cellophane wrappings, plus little oiled silk bowl coverings are picnic "musts." These bowl covers are practical outside as well as in the kitchen. They come in sets of eight in varying sizes to fit milk bottles, salad bowls, etc. They safeguard transportation of potato salad, sandwiches, fresh pies and cakes. Their price per set is less than $1.

Problems of dishwashing are solved by a dinner outdoors. Enticing new designs for paper service are on display in leading stores. By "service" is meant a complete picnic set of paper plates, cups, dessert dishes, napkins, cloth and cutlery, all done in uniform design. A picnic supper near the Potomac would be additionally gay with a "service" featuring boat designs or cat tails.

Pottery, Steel Available.

For sturdier minded week-end picknickers, pottery dishes and stainless steel equipment are practical. Little wooden salad bowls are attractive for more elaborate picnics. One of the cleverest ideas for particular diners is a novel packet of drinking cup initials. These gold letters, with which you may label your glass or cup are 10 cents a package.

Here is a suggested menu for a hot weather picnic supper featuring deviled eggs.

Hamburger patties or frankfurters with mustard
Potato salad Onion rings
Deviled eggs
Caraway iced rolls, buttered
Hot coffee or lemonade
Preserved jellied fruits

DEVILED EGGS.

Boil 4 eggs 10 minutes. Chill, then remove shells. Cut in half and cut off small piece at bottom of each white so each egg will stand alone. Place yolks in bowl with 2 tablespoons butter, ½ teaspoon paprika, ½ teaspoon salt or celery salt, 1 tablespoon Worchestershire sauce, 2 teaspoons finely minced onion, 2 teaspoons finely chopped stuffed olives, 1 teaspoon finely chopped pimento and small dash of cayenne pepper. Mash thoroughly. Fill whites with this stuffing. As a final fillip crisscross the centers lightly with a fork and sprinkle chopped parsley on top of each egg.

Charcoal Grills, Paper 'Services' Handle Food Cleanly.

Green Beans Ringed With Lemon Gay, Tasty

To prepare green beans in a new and fetching way, tie each serving in a neat little bundle, drop into a saucepan of water, and place in refrigerator. The packet is now ready to be cooked in the same saucepan of water 20 or 25 minutes before serving time. Remove strings and replace with lemon rind before bundle goes to table. The color combination here is gay and, of course, the prerefrigerator chilling makes the green beans hold up well and retain their "shape" even after cooking.

Chicken Crop Is Unusually Large This Season; Scientific Breeding, Feeding Bring Tenderness

Fryers Average 29 Cents a Pound, as Against 35 Cents Last Year.

Price Takes Bird Out of Luxury Class for Ordinary Home.

AN UNUSUALLY large and choice crop of chickens is evident this season. Chickens are more reasonable in price than they have been for some time. This month the average price of fryers per pound is about 29 cents, as against 35 cents for last year's price. This approximate price varies a bit throughout the city, and some days prices are a little higher or lower than others, but any way the chicken picture is looked at, prices are definitely down. This agreeable fact takes the summer chicken dinner out of the luxury class and places it in the category of an accessible weekly entree.

There are many fine brands of chicken obtainable here. These days markings and tags have become so proficient that when a tested fowl is purchased the customer is automatically guaranteed against old age, excessive refrigeration and impurity.

Fryer's Biography.

Raising this pet American fowl has become as standardized as the manufacture of ginger ale or cosmetics. Consider the average life of just one of many aristocratic Washington chickens. We shall call this fowl Golden Label. She is symbolic of all the better things in life which go to make up a handsome Sunday dish. This little fryer was born on the Eastern Shore and was as scientifically reared as the Dionnes. At the tender age of 14 weeks Golden Label was delivered over to her Washington sponsors, where she was painlessly put to sleep. That is her entire biography, but in between those 14 weeks was packed a lifetime of genteel confinement. Nothing but choice, rich foods were served, under ideal conditions. As a result of feeding and prevention of overexercise, increased edible meat has been made possible and muscles are made less tough. Skillful breeding and the "quiet life" have even produced an ultra-modern Golden Label with smaller and fewer bones.

Country Background.

A country or shore-raised bird's existence "is a short life—but a merry one." After arriving here in the big city—chickens are scientifically milk fed. These dainty rations soften the flesh and bones. Any undesirable barnyard odor or flavor vanishes after this treatment. After fowls have been decapitated, they are submitted to stringent ice water cooling to prevent body heat, which impairs quality. Overnight, immediately upon completion of post mortems, the young fryers, stewers and bakers take their last ride in specially refrigerated trucks.

Two species of chicken found popular in Washington are the White Leghorn and Barred Rock. The first is a white meated fowl, and due to its slighter build is a trifle cheaper than the Rock, which is darker in color and possesses rich plump meat and a fat breastbone. Save for fresh coloring and a knowledge of reliable dealers' products, there is no special marketable knowledge necessary in purchasing chickens.

There are numerous ways of preparing chicken and if you don't care for the universally favorite fried chicken there are interesting cold mousses, salads, spices and gelatins.

With beef and smoked meat running higher than usual, chicken buying is a satisfying economy experience. Adding a hint of garlic to this fowl produces a tantalizing flavor. Here is a foolproof method of serving fried chicken—Maryland style.

Chicken a la Maryland.

Clean and disjoint 2 broiling or frying chickens. If small, cut in quarters. Mix together ½ teaspoon salt, ⅛ teaspoon pepper, 1-3 cup flour and roll the chicken in it. Melt fat (butter or margarine) in a heavy good-sized frying pan, add 1 medium sized onion minced and saute until yellow. Then put in the chicken and fry until browned all over. Add 1 cup water, cover and simmer in the oven until the chicken is tender—about 30 minutes longer. Remove the chicken and add 2 tablespoons flour to the drippings in the pan, then stir in 1 cup top milk or light cream or undiluted evaporated milk. When boiling season to taste with salt and pepper. Arrange the pieces of chicken on buttered toast. Strain the gravy and pour it around. Garnish with parsley and serve with or without corn fritters and a further garnish of crisp bacon.

GOLDEN brown fried chicken is a natural Washington summer dish. The above platter, served with corn on the cob and maybe a blackberry pie is the perfect answer to the Sunday dinner. A recipe for chicken a la Maryland is given on this page.

Cold Plate Recipes To Win Prizes in Post Food Contest

Cold cuts and hot weather meats are being featured in Washington at present. Since many appetites balk at the mention of hot heavy foods during July, new ways of presenting cold dishes are constantly being devised.

Recipes for cold platters are the theme of The Post's new contest. Any ideas that pertain to the serving of cold plate arrangements or combinations of meat or fish and salad are eligible. If you have a pet recipe for potato salad, chilled meat loaf, cold combination mold, or anything that goes on a cold platter enter it in the contest.

Clearly write out your recipe and mail to the Post Food Editor before July 23. Five cash awards will be given, one of $3, one of $2 and three of $1 each.

Nut Scarcity.

When you have only a few nuts to place in a mixture it is better to leave them in large pieces.

MENUS FOR TODAY

Curry of fresh shrimp
Baked rice—chutney
Buttered shoe string carrots
GINGER FRUIT TORTE.
Salted nuts
Iced tea—lemon

GINGER FRUIT TORTE.

Combine 1½ cups gingersnap crumbs with ¼ teaspoon salt. Add 3 tablespoons melted shortening and 3 tablespoons cold water. Press into good-sized greased pie tin. Bake 5 minutes in 400-degree oven. Cool, spread with thick, spiced applesauce, sliced bananas or favorite berry. Sweeten fruit mixture with sugar, add lemon juice to taste. Cover with meringue of 3 stiffened egg whites. Add 3 tablespoons powdered sugar and add ½ cup chopped nuts to meringue. Return to 325-degree oven, continue baking until meringue is golden brown. Any left-over cookie crumbs may be used rather than gingersnaps.

Peach Cup Appeals To Eye, Appetite

An unusual and interesting new recipe is peach cup. It is eye-appealing and is adaptable for salad or dessert. Apple butter adds a tang to the other ingredients and makes this "quick to make up" peach cup memorable.

Peach Cup, Salad or Dessert Style.

6 servings of head lettuce
½ cup diced celery
¼ cup chopped nuts
¼ cup seeded raisins
2 or 3 tablespoons apple butter

On bed of lettuce arrange two peach halves for each serving. Fill centers with mixture made by combining the celery, nuts, raisins and apple butter. Garnish with mayonnaise. Serves 6.

To Serve Babies.

In serving new foods to a young child begin with a small portion of each food and arrange it as attractively as possible. Then gradually work up to larger portions.

Scalloped Ham

Miss Mary E. Loudick, 4844 Quebec street northwest: "My favorite method of 'killing two birds with one stone' is serving scalloped ham. This dish is a great time saver, and it is also a life-saver as far as left-overs are concerned. It is a most delicious meal in itself, and can be prepared in a jiffy by my capable cook. Last night's cold baked ham is best for a base, but any left-over meat or fowl can be used. After the meat is ground and mixed with a little dry bread, grease a baking dish, pour in a little cream sauce, then a layer of ham mixture, then thin cuts of hard-boiled egg.

"Continue adding alternate layers until dish is filled. Sprinkle top with bread crumbs, dot with butter and bake. A little onion and pepper may be added to mixture, but no salt, as the ham is sufficiently seasoned.

Remember to alternate layers of ingredients, as the serving is not as flavorful otherwise. I utilize blackberry roll, berry short cakes or ice box desserts in the summer, as they are cooling, satisfying and easy to prepare. These sugared fruits rolled in dough and baked are a favorite hot weather time economy."

Quick Cold Entree.

Mrs. Elsie Abel, 18 Grant avenue, Takoma Park, Md.: "The first and nicest summer 'time-saving dish' that comes to mind is a salad of fish and macaroni. Preparation of this two-fold nourishing entree is quick and easy. I merely boil one package of macaroni and when tender I pour cold water over it to prevent stickiness. I shred one can of fish (tuna, salmon, or mackerel) or any chopped cold meat. I add ½ stalk of cut celery, then mix these with the macaroni and mayonnaise. This salad also can be molded, or a ring made of the macaroni as a circle for the fish. It is faster, however, to mix all ingredients in a big bowl, as it tastes just as good that way.

"When any of my four married children come in unexpectedly for dinner, I serve this salad which can be gotten up while they're taking their hats off.

Another even speedier summer salad is my shredded cabbage bowl of tomatoes, cucumbers, radishes and to which I add carrots—chopped fine. I make a simple dressing of 1 tablespoon of vegetable oil, ½ cup vinegar and 1 teaspoon sugar. The children like this big salad and it is certainly a pleasure to prepare so colorful and cooling a dish."

Mocha Ice Cream.

Mrs. C. B. McCallum, 4410 Fourteenth street northwest:

"I think it will interest you to know what I served last evening for dinner. The dessert happens to be one of my favorites and also one of my pet time-saving dishes. I cannot recall anything sweeter or cooler for a hot-weather appetite than mocha ice cream. My recipe is not as expensive as many fruit and nut ice creams are. To ½ cup sweet milk add 2 tablespoons coffee ground fine, cook 5 minutes in double boiler, strain through cheese cloth, cool; add ½ cup granulated sugar to mixture, cook in double boiler for 15 minutes. Fold in two salted egg whites, and 1 gill of whipped cream. Stir until smooth.

Although this sounds as if it took time, it is comparatively a much swifter and cooler dessert to prepare than pies, cakes and tarts—and to me, much more appealing in appearance and taste."

Tuna Fish Entree.

Mrs. Pauline Gross, 323 Kennedy street northwest:

"At first thought—and last one, too—I'd say that my favorite time-saving dish is creamed tuna fish on toast. This is a splendid entree for any season of the year. I like it especially for summer servings, because it gives me added time away from a warm kitchen. My method is simple, quick and efficient I drain all oil from canned tuna, cut the fish into fair sized cubes and wash with hot water. I make a cream sauce in a double boiler, add fish, seasoning, 2 hard-boiled eggs cut into pieces, and a can of green peas. I can't imagine a speedier or more zestful idea than this combination. served piping hot on toast. Iced drinks, cold salads or aspics and fruit desserts are excellent summer accessories for this main dish.

Pan American Union Entertains at Concert

J. Agustin Hernandez, Mexican Barytone, Gives First Program Here; Turnout Disproves Theory Society Deserts City During Summer.

The Pan American Union, which can be counted on to carry on socially even during the dog days when there's supposed to be "nobody in town," last evening sponsored another in the concert series which it holds annually during the summer.

And anybody who thinks Washington is deserted by society would have had this impression corrected at the concert. There were several hundred present, sitting on the terrace and standing on the lovely curved stairway. The United States Army Band played at the foot of the steps, and the flags of the Pan American nations, massed in the background, added color to the scene.

With his usual graciousness, Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Union, received guests at the entrance of the beautiful white building. He stood just inside the doorway, with a handshake and a pleasant greeting to all.

Mexican Barytone Gives Program

On hand to see their countryman, J. Agustin Hernandez, perform were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera, the latter wearing a trailing gown of green chiffon. Senor Hernandez has been giving concerts in Mexico City and doing radio work for the last three years. He has studied under Corradeti in New York, and last evening gave his first program in Washington.

Among his songs were several Mexican numbers, notably "Lamento Gitano," by Maria Grever; "Tehuantepec," by Pepe Guizar; "Mi Viejo Amor," by A. Esparza Oteo, and "La Boviachita," by I. Fernandus Esperon.

The size of the crowd was in some measure due to the appearance of 180 Cuban school teachers under the guidance of their Envoy to this country, Dr. Pedro Martinez Fraga. Dr. Fraga had previously given a cocktail party in honor of the teachers, who are on a tour of the country.

Other visitors to Washington who helped swell attendance at the concert were the officers and midshipmen of the Argentine training ship Presidente Sarmiento. The commander, Luis S. Malerbo, was unable to attend, having an appointment with the Argentine Ambassador, Felipe Espil.

Many From Diplomatic, Army Sets

Diplomacy and the Army were well represented, however. Both the Dominican Minister and Senora de Pastoriza were present, the latter clad in a light-colored summer evening frock. The Minister of Lithuania came without his wife, who is at Bethany Beach. Also present were Senora La Saigne and her daughter, Senorita La Saigne, mother and sister of the Counselor of the Argentine Embassay, and Senora de Ghiraldo, who are now in Europe.

Coming in a bit on the late side, after attending a dinner, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers looked even prettier than usual in a gown of yellow chiffon, with a cape to match, and a corsage of gardenias. Another "Congress lady," Representative Virginia Jenckes, had with her Mr. and Mrs. Harry Michael, of Washington, and their guests, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Coppage and Mrs. Dumont Kennedy, all of Crawfordsville, Ind.

Gen and Mrs. Dion Williams were saying good-by to many of their friends last evening, as they are off shortly for a stay in Connecticut and Rhode Island. Others present from the Army set were Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, who will take their vacation the end of August, when they will go by train to California for a month.

Miss Meade And Father Sail

Of interest to the Capital was the departure yesterday of Miss Anna Hardman Meade and her father, Hardman Meade, of Birmingham, Ala., from San Francisco for Singapore.

Miss Meade will be married in August to Holdsworth Gordon Minnegerode, the American vice consul at Singapore. He is the son of C. Powell Minnegerode, director of the Corcoran Art Gallery, and Mrs. Minnegerode. Miss Meade is the niece of Dr. and Mrs. Kenneth Bradford, of Staunton, Va.

After the marriage of his daughter, Mr. Meade will continue his travels and will return to his home in November.

Mrs. Gwin Back With Daughters

Mrs. J. Blaine Gwin with her daughters, Misses Florence and Sarah Gwin, have returned to their home in Washington after visiting in Texas. They made the trip by boat and were widely entertained in Austin and Galveston.

Mrs. Gwin and her husband, who is director of personnel of the Red Cross, plan to leave in a few days for Meadeland, their farm in Virginia, where they will make their home for most of the remainder of the summer. Their daughters will go with them.

Mrs. Wright Plans English Trip Soon To Visit Daughter

Mrs. Hamilton Wright will sail soon for England to visit her son-in-law and daughter, Air Commodore and Mrs. G. Ranald Macfarlane Reid.

Air Commodore Reid recently was appointed in command at Aden, Arabia, and with Mrs. Reid will leave for his new post in September.

In Washington for a brief round of shopping and several social engagements, Mrs. Donald McKnew returned yesterday to her summer cottage at Gibson Island.

Her sub-debutante daughter, Miss Patsy McKnew, has been participating in the ladies' skipper races which make up a large part of summer life on the island.

Parrishes Plan Virginia Home

Mr. and Mrs. Harold David Parrish, who were married July 9, will be at home after August 1 at 114 Linden Lane, Falls Church, Va.

The Methodist Episcopal Church at Byrdton, Va., was the scene of their wedding, at which the Rev. O. S. Good officiated. The bride is the former Miss Lucille Mitchell Hurst, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carroll W. Hurst, of Landon Hall, Va. A direct descendant of one of the earliest Virginia Colonial families, she was graduated from William and Mary College. Mr. Parrish, whose home was originally in Center, Tex., is now in business here.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a gown she designed herself of lace over bridal satin. A veil of illusion was attached to a halo of pearls, and she carried lilies of the valley and white roses.

Miss Helen Hurst served as her sister's maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Miss Marjorie Hurst and Mrs. A. E. Sutton. Carroll W. Hurst, jr., was best man, and the ushers were Theodore Johnson and Lee B. Fitch, both of Washington.

Mr. and William Proctor, of Washington, were among the out-of-town guests at the wedding and small reception which followed.

Hail-Farewell Affair Is Given For Army People

Guests Entertained With Supper and Dancing Last Night.

A "hail and farewell" party for several popular members of the Army set was held last night by Miss Elizabeth Dow at her home, 2401 Calvert street.

Guests of honor were Lieut. and Mrs. Gordon Austin, who have just arrived at Bolling Field for duty, and Miss Clarissa Mitchell, daughter of Col. and Mrs. Clarence Mitchell, who will leave shortly for her father's new post at Fort Bliss, Tex.

The guests gathered for a buffet supper, later dancing in the living room. The hostess wore a summer print and was assisted by Mrs. Joseph Duggan.

The guests included Mr. Duggan, Miss Barbara Gillette, of Scranton, Pa., who is visiting Lieut. and Mrs. Austin; Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bresnahan, Lieut. and Mrs. Robert Offer, who recently returned from their wedding trip; the Misses Katherine and Virginia McConnell, Margaret Sampson, Helen Lampe, Cornelia Wadden and Betty Lloyd, Dr. James Manley and Dr. George Sharpe, James Lampe, James Wimsatt, William Donovan and Ford Lovelace.

Katherine Ahalt, Mr. Kimble Wed

In the garden of the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Randolph Ahalt, of Arlington Ridge road, Arlington, Miss Katherine Burdell Ahalt became the bride of Ralph Mitchell Kimble, son of Arthur B. Kimble, of Bayonne, N. J., at 4:30 o'clock yesterday afternoon. The Rev. Peter Marshall, of New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, performed the ceremony in a setting of palms and standards of flowers.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory slipper satin made on princess lines, with an Elizabethan collar of Brussels lace. Her veil of ivory tulle was attached with a tiara of orange blossoms, and she carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley.

Miss Alice Ahalt, who served as maid of honor, wore turquoise blue chiffon, made with short puffed sleeves, and a wreath of yellow roses in her hair. She carried an arm bouquet of yellow roses tied with matching ribbon.

Lucy Ann Springer, the bride's cousin, was flower girl. She was attired in yellow chiffon and carried a basket of rose petals.

Arthur Fridringer was best man for his cousin, and the ushers were Ralph McCoy, Harry O'Neill, Albert Fridlinger and Robert Harper.

A reception followed the ceremony. Mrs. Ahalt wore a frock of peach lace with a corsage of gardenias.

After the reception, the couple left for a wedding trip in the North, the bride wearing a navy-blue and yellow traveling suit, with navy-blue accessories.

Guests from out of town at the wedding included the bridegroom's father; Mr. and Mrs. Paul Adsit, of Avon Lake, Ohio; Mrs. Albert Leaf, William Kimble, Miss Jenny Leaf and Miss Ellen Ardinger, of Williamsport, Md., and Mrs. Joseph Walfinger, of Baltimore.

The bride attended Duke and George Washington universities and is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity. Mr. Kimble attended Geneva College and George Washington University.

Envoy of France Leads New York Bastille Day Fete

The French Ambassador, Count Rene Doynel de Saint Quentin, will return today from New York, where he participated in ceremonies marking Bastille Day. There was a luncheon at the Ritz Carlton and further festivities in the afternoon. The French colony is larger in New York than in any other American city.

In Washington, the Counselor of the embassy, Jacques Truelle, received members of the French colony of Washington, Virginia and Maryland at the embassy in the late afternoon.

Count de Saint Quentin will sail July 28 on the Ile de France for a holiday.

Mary Frances Fort Married to Rowland Lyon in Georgetown

Easter Lilies, Palms and Ferns Were Banked on Altar of Christ Church; Couple Will Live Here After Caribbean Cruise.

CHRIST CHURCH in Georgetown was the scene of the wedding at 8 o'clock last evening of Miss Mary Frances Fort to Rowland Lyon, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Lyon, of Chevy Chase. The bride is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. George Fort, her father having been for several years assistant treasurer of the United States.

Easter lilies, ferns and palms were banked at the altar and adorned the choir stalls. The Rev. Gillespie Armstrong performed the ceremony.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Carter Fort. Her gown of white lace was made on princess lines, and her tulle veil was attached to a cap trimmed with orange blossoms. She carried a bouquet of gardenias and a large single white orchid.

Nieces and Cousin Among Attendants

Mrs. Lem Banks served as the matron of honor, and the other attendants of the bride were her nieces, the Misses Harriet and Anne Fort; Mrs. Russell Shaw, and Miss Sally Fort, a cousin, who was junior bridesmaid.

All were gowned alike in frocks of sea green marquisette, made with full skirts and short puffed sleeves. With the exception of the junior bridesmaid, who wore a little pokebonnet and carried an old-fashioned bouquet, the attendants had chosen large leghorn hats of natural straw and carried mixed bouquets of Johanna Hill and yellow roses and African daisies.

Laurie F. Hess was best man, and the ushers were John A. Plugge, Lieut. Comdr. Alex Macomb, Dr. Alex Preece, John Rodgers, William E. Huntington and Herndon Phillips.

Large Reception Follows Ceremony

Directly from the church the guests went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Carter Fort, with whom the bride has been residing, for a reception. The drawing room and dining room were decorated with masses of talisman roses and ferns. Assisting during the evening were Mrs. Stockton Voorhees, Mrs. Carl Shoemaker and Mrs. Henry Nicholson.

When she left the bride was wearing a navy blue and white figured ensemble of a sheer material, with a wide leghorn hat of the same blue. The couple will sail shortly for a cruise to the Caribbean, making their home in Washington on their return.

Out-of-town guests at the wedding included Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Thompson, of Mansfield, Pa., brother-in-law and sister of Mr. Lyon, and A. M. Kelly, of New York.

The bride attended George Washington University, Mr. Lyon studied at the Corcoran Art School, the Cape Cod Art School, and received his master's degree at George Washington University.

The bride is a granddaughter of the late Judge Arthur Fort, of Georgia.

Dr. Viteri, Wife To Fete Garcias

Dr. Homero Viteri, chairman of the Ecuadorean delegation to the Peru-Ecuador Boundary Conference, and Senora de Viteri, will entertain at a dinner this evening at the Shoreham Terrace in honor of Dr. Arturo Garcia, delegate from Peru to the conference, and Senora de Garcia. Senor Garcia has been appointed general secretary of the forthcoming Pan-American Conference to be held in Peru this fall, and will leave later in the month.

The Garcias were feted at a dinner given last evening at the Shoreham by Jose Trujillo, delegate from Ecuador, and Senora de Trujillo. Other guests were the Ecuadorean Ambassador and Senora de Alfaro; Senor and Senora de Viteri, Dr. and Senora Alenjardro Ponce Borja, Enrique Arroyo, secretary of the commission, and Senora de Arroyo, Dr. and Mrs. Bolivar Lloyd and Nepali Ponce.

The Gibbonses On Bridal Trip

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Gibbons, who were married Tuesday, July 12, will reside in Hughesville, Md., on their return from a wedding trip.

The bride, the former Miss Lucille M. Willett, is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William L. Willett, of Washington. Mr. Gibbons is the son of Mrs. Maude Gibbons, of Hughesville.

They're marriage took place at the home of the bride's parents, the Rev. Roy E. LeMoine officiating. The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a blue lace gown with white accessories and a corsage of tea roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Helen Willett was her sister's only attendant. Ray Wolfe, of Hughesville, was best man. A reception followed the ceremony.

Mrs. Harrison McCready Visiting Parents Here

Mrs. Harrison McCready, the former Miss Bessie May Fillius, of Washington, has arrived from her home in Miami, Fla., to visit her parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Fillius.

After a stay here, Mrs. McCready will go to New York for a few weeks before returning to Miami.

Alaska-Bound.

Mrs. Edgar Jadwin, widow of Lieut. Gen. Edgar Jadwin, has returned from a sojourn at Virginia Beach. Later she will join several friends on a trip to Alaska and will then visit her son-in-law Lieut. Col. T. G. Hearon, at the Presidio, San Francisco.

Alpha Beta Zeta Parley Opened at Gala Supper

300 Delegates Here for 3-Day Convention of Sorority; First Business Session Is Scheduled for This Afternoon.

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Swimming, dancing, a boat trip to Mount Vernon and a few business sessions sandwiched in are on the schedule for the national convention of Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority which opened with a supper last night at Wardman Park Hotel. Three hundred delegates from all parts of the country are here for the three-day meeting, at which Miss Marion Martin, of Alpha Epsilon Chapter, Philadelphia, national president, is presiding.

Miss Clara Dikeman, of Washington, convention chairman, has arranged the program of entertainment for the delegates. It opened with an informal supper and sports dance last evening at which members of Sigma Alpha Epsilon Fraternity were guests. It continues today with a boat trip to Mount Vernon, and luncheon on board the steamer.

The first business session will be held at 2 o'clock this afternoon and this evening will be open for any activities the girls desire to plan for themselves. Nomination and election of national officers takes place tomorrow morning, followed by a sightseeing trip in the afternoon and a model initiation ceremony presented by the national cabinet. A formal banquet and dance will conclude the convention.

Two Candidates Up for President

Miss Martin, although she has served but one year as president, has declined to be a candidate for re-election. Those who have already been nominated by their chapters for the presidency are Mrs. Velma Monroe, sponsored by Alpha XI, of Denver, and Mrs. Leila Lea Crevolin, who is now vice president, sponsored by Beta Eta of El Monte, Calif. Other nominations are expected from the floor, making the outcome of the election anybody's guess until the votes are counted.

Mrs. Dorothy Yonkers, of Alpha Delta Chapter, Camden, N. J., is her chapter's candidate for vice president, but other nominations also are expected. Often the defeated candidates for president are among those presented for this office. Miss Amy Starkweather, of Alpha Alpha, in Camden, is one of two candidates for secretary. The other is Mrs. Wilma Wright, of Alpha Chi, San Diego, Calif.

Mrs. Mil Schlipf, of Omicron Chapter, Toledo, Ohio, who is now serving as treasurer, is unopposed for re-election and there is no indication anyone will be proposed to run against her.

Miss Sylvia Tompkins, of Kappa Chapter, Newburgh, N. Y., is scheduled to succeed Miss Pauline Workman, of Indianapolis as editor of the sorority's national magazine, Opheleo, unless other candidates for the editorship are nominated from the floor.

Miss Dikeman in Race for Chaplain

The office of historian and chaplain is the most sought-after in the list. It often serves as a training ground for future presidential material in the organization. Washington chapters are giving their support to Miss Dikeman, the convention chairman, who is sponsored as a candidate by Beta Chi Chapter. Others whose names will be presented in nomination are Miss Ellen Powers, of Beta Zeta Chapter, Denver; Mrs. Lucille Smith, Alpha Kappa, Long Beach, Calif.; Miss Eileen Sullivan, Pi Chapter, Hornel, N. Y.; Mrs. Thelma Ziegler, Alpha Beta, Baltimore; Mrs. Mary McLane, of Mu Chapter, Philadelphia, who holds seniority over all her sorority sisters in point of length of membership. Mrs. McLane has belonged to Alpha Zeta Beta 25 years and was the first on whom a lifetime membership was conferred—a classification now bestowed on any member who has been active in the organization for 15 years.

Registration for the convention opened at 9 o'clock yesterday morning and continued until 6 in the evening. Delegates arrived singly and in groups, by automobile, plane and train. The girls from Hornel, N. Y., had a real police escort for their trip. Driving three of the cars were officers of the police department who were coming to Washington to take a course of instruction at the F. B. I. One of their "official" escorts was Chief Howard Travis of the Hornel department, and the others were Capt. Ryan, of Buffalo, and Lieut. Nelson, of Jamestown.

The sorority members from Hornel who came in the party were Margaret Gans, Ellen Pixley, Gertrude Mullens, Eileen Sullivan, Mary T. Clancey, Ruth Griffin, Evelyn Cole, Catherine Osman, Genevieve Johnson, Lillian Dahlill, Ruth Cameron, Helen Sullivan, Clara Kramer and Rachel Callahan.

New Jersey Girls Arrive by Plane

A group which flew in late yesterday afternoon from Audibon, N. J., included Clara Potter, Helen Walker, Thelma Boyd and Edna Lindegreen.

Some of the early registrations from Indianapolis, Ind., included Ann Pfortner, Nelda Damm, Dorothea Heiden, Nellie Riley, Alma Quinn and Virginia Crist. From Camden, N. J., there was another large delegation including Almira Vaughn, Ida Marini, Fran Kolecki, Ann McDonald, Betty Sacconman, Pauline Aker and Mildred Walker. Gladys Olson and Elizabeth Fieldhouse were among the early arrivals from Denver.

There was also a large group from California, including the vice president, Leila Lea Crevolin, of El Monte. San Diego is extending an invitation to the sorority for next year's convention.

Eastern Star Chapter To Give Garden Party

Temple Chapter, Order of the Eastern Star, is sponsoring a garden party and lawn fete at the home of the worthy matron, Mrs. Libbye G. Prawde, 7932 Orchid street northwest, next Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m. The worthy grand matron and worthy grand patron of the grand chapter will attend, and children are invited. there will be no admission charge.

Swimming Ranks First in Popularity With Alpha Zeta Betas

Bastille Day Celebrated Here With Montmartre Noctambule

Bridge Party Held by Arts Club in Afternoon, but Most Members Wait for Festivities at Night, With Dinner and Music.

A Montmartre Noctambule was staged in the garden of the Arts Club last night in observanve of Bastille Day. M. and Mme. Felian Garzia, who inaugurated the plan of creating a little corner of Paris in Washington every Saturday night during the winter season for the entertainment of friends, were in charge of the summer version of their Saturday programs.

The Bastille Day observance included a bridge party at the clubhouse in the afternoon, of which Mrs. Frank B. Steele, wife of the club president, was chairman. Most of the members, however, did their celebrating last evening, attending the dinner and entertainment following. Some brought parties of guests and the garden was set with as many tables as it could accommodate.

There was music, including general singing of familiar songs, both in French and English, words for which were thrown on a screen for those who did not know the verses. Miss Marjorie Davis accompanied at the piano, and the singing was led by Charles Tittman and Warren Grimes. Miss Ann Totten also played her accordion and sang. At the beginning of the progam there was a duet by Martha Byrd and Bill Moran, and later Anne Holtzscheiter presented a group of soprano solos, with Mrs. Kay Morrison at the piano.

French Skit Is Presented

One of the features of the program was the presentation of a French skit by M. and Mme. Garzia, Mary Mitchell, Floyd Miller and Charles Tuttle. It was a gay comedy given by request because of its success at one of the spring meetings of Montmatre Noctambule.

M. and Mme. Garzia contributed another French note to the party, both wearing smocks, Mme. Garzia a red one with little dog designs, and a black velvet beret, and M. Garzia, one of bright blue.

A large American flag was hung over the wall on one side of the garden and, on the other side was a large French flag lent by the French Embassy.

One of the parties was that given in honor of the birthday of Mrs. Maud Howell Smith a leader in drama in the Arts Club. Her nieces and nephews were the guests, with the exception of Miss Ann Crawford, Floyd Miller and Mr. and Mrs. Jerry Buckler, who were not members of her family. The others were Miss Martha Byrd, Mrs. Ethel Byrd Kemon, Mr. and Mrs. Reginald Conard, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Kemon, Mr. and Mrs. John Kemon, Mrs. Eddie Landvoight, Harry Ryder and Mrs. Kathryn Morrison.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Brooks had with them Miss Anne Tuohy Gilmer Korner and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Hillyar. Mr. and Mrs Gerritt S. Miller, just back from a month at Nantucket, were accompanied by Mrs. Miller's cousin, Col. Stuart Godfrey.

Miss Polkinhorn Entertains Party

Miss Blanche Polkinhorn had as her guests Dr and Mrs. Cloyd Heck Marvin, Mrs. Hugh Roland Roberts, Mrs. Charles J. Kappler and Mrs. Ryland C. Bryant. Another party was that of Miss Lucy Brickenstein, who entertained Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Howard and Mr. and Mrs. Warren Grimes.

Among others present were Miss Anne Darlington, who will have charge of the program next Tuesday night; Mrs Samuel Kimberly, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Tyler and Mrs. Tyler's uncle. Mr. Holmes, of Philadelphia; Percival Rogers. Bernard Garzia, nephew of M. and Mme. Garzia; Edith Hoffman Kane, who was in charge of the dances for the Bal Boheme last spring, and Miss Ruth Baxter, an artist pupil; Miss Catherine Viehmann, Miss Catherine Caroline Sherman and Mr. and Mrs. William Hepner.

President Club Of P.-T. A. Picks Mrs. Cook in Md.

College Park, Md., July 14.—Mrs. Stanley Cook, of Indianhead, today was elected president of the "Presidents' Club," a newly formed organization of executives of 138 Parent-Teacher Association units throughout Maryland.

The purpose of the club will be to stimulate interest in program planning and to foster co-operation between the local chapters, Mrs. Cook said. A program will be worked out during the coming months and presented at the annual convention.

Delegates to the annual summer conference of the P.-T. A. were urged today by Mrs. G. R. Clements, president of the Maryland Congress of Parents and Teachers, to support the State program "in its entirety," and to plan "progressive and co-operative" programs of their own.

The State program, she said, concentrated on the maintenance of "a good school environment, the right kind of clothes, the right kind of food, and play—the child's health insurance."

"In an ugly, dirty building it is next to impossible to instill in the hearts and minds of children ideals of health and good citizenship, the love of beauty and the desire to create it," she asserted.

Urging each of the State units to conduct clean-up campaigns, Mrs. Clements suggested that they "clean walls and windows, scrub and oil floors, repair desks, make work table and small chairs for primary pupils, build cabinets for books and supplies, make safe the drinking water, see that toilets are clean and sanitary and beautify school grounds."

The other three "musts," which she said were equally important were the providing of "ample clothes, good food, and play."

The delegates attended a reception held by Dr. H. C. Byrd, president of the University of Maryland, and tomorrow 38 of them will receive diplomas for completing one-year course. Dean Willard S. Small, director of the University Summer School, will present the diplomas.

Catholic Daughters Plan Potomac Cruise

This evening, at 8:30, Court District of Columbia, of the Catholic Daughters of America, will hold its annual moonlight cruise down the Potomac on the Wilson Line "City of Washington." The tickets may also be used on the sunset cruise leaving at 5:30 p. m. Tickets are in charge of members of the committee of which Mrs. Irene Ward is chairman.

Miss Katherine Harrington of the speakers bureau for the summer school of Catholic Action addressed the Court last Tuesday in the interest of the work of the conference to be held here August 8 to 13, at the Hotel Washington.

Curley Club Lists Committee Heads For Coming Year

Miss Dorothy E. Barrett, who is serving her second term as president of the Curley Club, last night announced her committee chairmen for the coming year. The club met at the Continental Hotel where a business session was followed by dancing and bridge.

The executive committee is headed by Roland J. Hyland; auditing committee, Miss Gretchen Baden; membership, James Corbett; initiation, Miss Mary Connelly; entertainment, Miss Gertrude Connor; dramatics, Miss Kathryn Bowers; publicity Miss Mary O'Connor; welfare, Miss Agnes Bayer; reception, Miss Mary Bazzuro; Chronicle editor, Miss Edith Connor; honorary membership, Mrs. Roland J. Hyland; religious discussion group, Miss Elizabeth Davis; retreat, Miss A. Luella All; athletics, William Boyd.

The executive committee will meet Thursday to make plans for the fall season at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Roland Hyland.

Madame Chairman

MRS. WALLACE W. CHISWELL, president of the Women's Overseas Service League of Washington, is at Rehoboth Beach, where she went following her return from the annual convention of the national organization last week in Atlanta, Ga. Mrs. Chiswell, Miss Florence Adams, of Baltimore, and Miss Martha Peden were the delegates from the local unit.

Miss Bernice Wilson, of Los Angeles, left the Capital yesterday after spending a few days here following the conclave, and Miss Julia Williamson returned to her home in Philadelphia after a stop here en route from Atlanta.

One of the members of the Washington unit who attended the convention was Mrs. Lucretia Botsford, who now holds a Government position in Juno, Alaska. She went the record distance to attend the meeting and amused her friends by explaining she was obliged to make a trip down to Seattle anyway to get a new pair of glasses and thought she might as well run down to Atlanta for the convention as long as she had come that far.

Miss Faustine Dennis and Miss Lena Hitchcock, both past national presidents, were among others who represented Washington. Still others were Miss Ruth McClelland, editor of the magazine Carry On; Miss Hazel Nielson, national patriotic chairman; Mrs. Fred W. Franke, vice president for the third corps area; Sadie Caughey, local service chairman, who was given credit for the best service report from any unit in the first classification; Ann Gray, Nelle Patterson, Mrs. Nathaniel Steed, Mrs. Keegan and Miss Mittie Birch.

CUPID is robbing the Alpha Zeta Beta Sorority of two of its logical candidates for national office next year. Its president, Marion E. Martin, of Philadelphia, withdrew her name from nomination because she expects to be married October 8 to John K. Helmuth, of Rutledge, Pa., and Pauline Workman, of Indianapolis, is retiring after but one year as editor of the national magazine, Ophello, because she plans to be married in the fall to Leroy Heinrichs.

Incidentally, there are two men attending the convention, Russell J. Adams, better known to the sorority sisters as the husband of Louise Adams, of Indianapolis, and Andrew Crevolin, the husband of Leila Lea Crevolin, of El Monte, Calif. A sorority convention is one place where a man might as well reconcile himself to being introduced as just his wife's husband.

MRS LLOYD A. MORRISON, chairman of American Citizenship for the D. C. Federation of Women's Clubs, will accompany Mrs. Henry Van Arsdale, chairman of the War Veterans committee which functions under her department, to Walter Reed Hospital today to make plans for the committee work for the veterans during the year.

Other division chairmen who will serve under Mrs. Morrison are Mrs. Grattan Kerans, Americanization; Mrs. Leo Kashagen, law observance, and Mrs. Eugene Thompson, patriotism and flag. National representation for the District also comes under this department and this work Mrs. Morrison expects to handle herself.

GOLDEN RULE COUNCIL, Daughters of America, plans to give a shower next Friday in honor of the most recent bride among its members, Mrs. Kermit T. Good (the former Miss Frances Mills). The council, at its installation of officers, July 8, inducted Mrs. Good as inside sentinel and another recent bride, Mrs. Harold L. Schwamp, the former Miss Katherine Hoile, as councilor.

MISS KATHERINE SMITH, grand recorder of the Women of the Moose, is attending a three-day conference of the New York State organization at Saranac Lake.

Bedtime Stories

By Thornton W. Burgess.

The Stoic.

The stoic, governed by his pride,
His feelings always seeks to hide.
—Old Mother Nature.

The Careles One was in trouble. He was in grievous trouble. No other young Fox could get into much worse trouble. You see, the Careless One was trapped. Yes, sir, he was trapped, and it was all because he had been careless. He had not looked before he leaped, which is something the careful never fail to do.

It wasn't one of those horrible steel-jawed traps that heartless men set for the people who wear fur that was holding the Careless One by one hind leg. No, sir, it wasn't one of those. I was just two roots. That was all—just two roots. Not looking where he would land he had jumped in an effort to catch a young Hare and had landed where that foot had forced those two roots tpart so that his leg had gone down between. Then they had sprung back so as to hold that leg in a tight grip that he was helpless to free himself from.

At first he had struggled desperately, trying to free himself. He had tugged and pulled and twisted and turned, but all in vain. The wonder was that he had not broken that leg. Yes, sir, it certainly was a wonder that he had not broken that leg. He had made matters worse, for his struggles had mode that leg swell more than it would had had he not struggled at all.Of course, the swelling made the grip of those roots all the greater. It was all an accident, but it was an accident that might not have happened had he not been careless. Such accidents happen to folk in fur and feathers more often that most people suspect.

Finding that his struggles were in vain, the Careless One became quiet. Then he discovered that the young Hare he had been chasing had returned full of curiosity to see what all that thrashing about had meant. Pop-eyed, he was peering out from under some ferns. The Careless One tried to appear as if nothing had happened. That leg hurt dreadfully but he made no sound. He would not have that long-legged, timid fellow he had been chasing know what had happened to him. So he pretended to be merely resting there and all the time that leg ached so that he wanted to cry out. He didn't. He didn't make a sound. And presently that young Hare, his fear overcoming his curiostiy—for he had not discovered what was wrong with the Careless One—softly stole away.

For a time the Careless One was alone. Then Longbill the Woodcock came that way, boring in the mud for worms. He came within what would have been jumping distance of the young Fox had he not been a prisoner, and not until then did he see the Careless One. Instantly he knew that something was wrong. He was within easy jumping distance, yet that young Fox had not jumped. It must be that he couldn't jump. He walked away a few steps but that Fox made no move. Plainly, something was wrong with him. Longbill went to look for Mrs. Longbill. Together they returned and stared at the Careless One and there was no pity in their stare.

"He probably was hunting us," said Longbill.

"It is the same young Fox who tried to catch me the other day," said Mrs. Longbill.

Somehow the word seemed to have gotten around. Sammy Jay came to scream at him and, of course, this brought others. From all about sharp eyes peered at him. He was in pain. Of course. He was in great pain. And he was terribly frightened, for, you see, he was quite hopeless. But he made no sound. He did his best not to show that he was frightened and in pain, for he was conscious of the eyes peering at him. He just pretended. He pretended that nothing was the matter and that he was lying there only because he wanted to lie there.

It was toward morning that Reddy Fox passed that way and found him. How glad the Careless One was to see his father. Surely he could do something for him. But Reddy couldn't free that leg. All he could do was to drive away any who came to stare at and gloat over the predicament of the young Fox. It looked very, very hopeles for the Careless One. But he bore his pain and fright like the stoic that he was.

City Club Forms Junior Guild at Dinner Session

The Junior Guild of the Woman's City Club last night held an organization meeting following the club night dinner. Miss Carol Cox was appointed secretary by Mrs. Phyllis Wilson Huff, who is organizing the group at the request of the new club president, Miss Marjorie Webster.

Members of the Woman's City Club and nonmembers as well, who would be interested in a junior group, were invited to last night's session. It is Miss Webster's hope that the membership will grow to 200 by the end of the year. Miss Huff, who is sponsor of the new guild, four years ago launched the Junior Woman's Club of Takoma Park, which now is carrying on an active program.

Plans were discussed last night for a series of Sunday teas, dances and other activities beginning in the fall.

Mrs. S. R. Jacobs was hostess at the club night dinner attended by nearly 50 members and guests

Chinese Claim New Victories Near Hankow

21 Japanese Warships Sunk in Fortnight, War Office Says.

By the United Press.

Shanghai, (Friday), July 15.—Chinese today claimed new victories in the defense of their provisional national capital in Hankow and minimized the military effect of new Japanese aerial bombings on the great South China metropolis of Canton, in which more than 300 persons were killed or wounded.

Despite the fact Gen. Chiang was pouring everything he had into the defense of the vital Wu-Han (Wuchang, Hankow and Hanyang) area foreign observers said the provisional national capital was doomed and China's will for continued resistance was weakening.

A spokesman for the Chinese war office in Hankow said heavy fighting was continuing on the south shore of the Yangtze River, east of Hukow and Kinkiang, keys to the southeastern defenses of the capital, and that in the past fortnight Chinese bombing planes have sunk 21 Japanese warships and disabled 19, including light cruisers, destroyers and an aircraft carrier.

On Defensive Again.

"Our counterattacks of Wednesday night and Thursday were successful," the spokesman said, but he admitted Chinese armies late last night were again on the defensive "in same places."

New Japanese efforts to cross the narrow entrance from the Yangtze into Lake Poyang, between Hukow and Kiukiang, were repulsed, the spokesman said, adding Chinese planes yesterday morning again raided Japanese naval and land forces near Anking and shot down one of 12 Japanese planes which intercepted them.

"Our bombers sank one large Japanese planes which intercepted them.

"Our bombers sank one large Japanese warship and three gunboats 15 miles southwest of Anking despite strong Japanese antiaircraft fire," the spokesman said.

Gunboat Sunk.

Only a few Japanese warships thus far have been able to enter Lake Poyang, due to Chinese artillery control of the narrows, the spokesman said, denying Japanese claims their vessels were bombarding Chinese positions on the west shore of the lake preliminary to landing infantry for occupation of Nanchang.

The Japanese said their warships on the lake had sunk the 200-ton Chinese gunboat Kiangning and their mine-sweepers slowly were clearing hundreds of mines from the lake.

Rumors of foreign mediation to arrange an armistice if the Japanese take the Wu-han area increased in Hankow. British Ambassador Sir Archibald Kerr was reported increasingly active and it was understood Japan was inclined to be more lenient than heretofore. Japanese Ambassador-at-large Masayuki Tani was reported in touch with Sir Archibald.

300 Canton Casualties.

Canton, July 14 (U.P.).—Japanese bombing planes raided Canton twice today, devastating additional areas of the city and causing more than 300 casualties.

The second raid began at 8:40 p. m. while workers still were attempting to extricate bodies from the ruins of buildings destroyed in the first attack.

Big Japanese naval bombing planes roared over the railway area for two hours, ignoring the beams of new searchlights installed by the municipal government, and dropped scores of bombs.

Some Chinese officials believed the total casualties would exceed 500.

Voters to Get Rates.

Arrangements are being made for rate reductions for Kentuckians returning for the primaries August 6, by the Kentucky Democratic Club of Washington. Trains on which groups of 25 persons or more traveling together will get reduced fares leave here at 6:01 p. m. and 11 p. m., August 4 and 5. Personal registration is required for vote in the primaries August 6, but Federal employes may register the day of or before the primary.

Early Spring Promised Washington

This groundhog and his mate emerged yesterday from a hole under a building at 1141 Fifteenth street northwest and saw no shadows. So they decided to stay out in the open—all of which means winter is at an end and spring is not so far off. Coatless passersby, including Andrew Jackson Lovegrove, watched them nibble grass. They are pets of a resident of that block.

Franco's Drive To Coast Perils 40,000 in Trap

Fierce Hand-to-Hand Fight Slows Advance From Captured Sarrion.

By the Associated Press.

Hendaye, France, July 14.—Spanish government forces slowed down an insurgent advance toward the coast tonight in fierce hand-to-hand fighting along the Teruel highway.

An insurgent army under Jose Varela, after capturing Sarrion, 23 miles southeast of Teruel, was attempting to wipe out an important government salient north of the highway to the coast.

Gen. Jose Miaja, government commander on the eastern Spanish front, rushed reinforcements to fill the breach before wrecked Sarrion and slowed the insurgent onslaught in the Albentosa area.

Insurgent advices said the drive threatened to trap 40,000 government militiamen in the Mora de Rubielos salient. They said Varela's army had advanced beyond Sarrion, occupying positions dominating roads feeding into the government-held pocket.

The dormant coastal front became active again with government recapture of Cental del Pajar, on the Espadan-Chilches front, about 22 miles north of Valencia.

Insurgent air raiders bombed Valencia twice and struck along the Mediterranean seaboard at Segorbe, Sagunto, Denia and Carcagente.

Train Kills Woman In Montgomery; 4 With Her Escape

A colored woman was killed in Montgomery County yesterday afternoon when a Baltimore & Ohio train, Washington bound, smashed into the garbage truck in which she was riding with her husband and three children.

The woman, Mrs. Helen Sewell, 46, was dragged 150 feet by the train. The others jumped to safety.

Those who escaped were the woman's husband, Frank Sewell, a Rockville garbage collector who lives near Lincoln Park, the couple's two children, James and Lily Sewell, and another child, Charles Moore. The accident occurred when the truck stalled on the railroad tracks. The gasoline-soaked debrs caught fire after the collision.

Italians Aryan, Rome - Backed Survey Finds

Italy

Italians and Scandinavians are the same thing."

However, they go on to state: "the Hebrew represents the sole people which has never been assimilated in Italy because they are non-European racial elements absolutely foreign to the elements which gave rise to the Italians." They conclude that marriages between Italians and Jews are inadmissible: "the purely European characteristics of the Italians would be altered by a crossing with any extra-European race, the inheritors of a civilization foreign to the military Aryan civilization."

This racial question has been kept alive by the extremist press which advocates the elimination of Jews from public and literary life. The patronage of the present inquiry by the ministry of popular culture suggests it is to be given greater countenance.

Bee Sting Asphyxiates Pennsylvania Woman

Ligonier, Pa., July 14 (AP).—The sting of a honey bee today killed Mrs. Nancy Hamlin Shaffer, 52, wife of a councilman, in 20 minutes. She was stung in the throat while working in her garden. Dr. C. D. Ambrose said the resulting swelling strangled her.

Visit to Bonnet Is on Itinerary Of Morgenthau

Secretary Denies Dealings With Britain on Eve of European Trip.

Secretary Morgenthau yesterday emphatically denied reports that the Treasury was carrying on monetary negotiations with Great Britain in connection with the proposed Anglo-American reciprocal trade agreement.

There have been rumors that the trade agreement would include proposals for a reduction in value of the pound sterling to its pre-war parity of $4.8665, and that a new tripartite currency alignment was in the making.

At his press conference Morgenthau was asked: "Can you tell us definitely whether or not there are any currency negotiations going on between the Treasury and British monetary authorities." The Secretary replied: "I can answer that—the answer is a flat no."

On the eve of his departure for a month's vacation in France, Morgenthau disclosed that the United States and China had agreed to an extension of the agreement to purchase Chinese silver. Asked how long the new agreement would be in force, he replied that it would be in force at least until his return from abroad.

Purchases of Chinese silver will be made at the price metal is quoted on the day it arrives in New York or other ports. As in the past, proceeds from such Treasury purchases will be used by the Chinese for either gold purchases or to accumulate dollar balances. A good portion of these dollar balances have gone for materials for the Sino-Japanese war.

The old agreement expires today. The present pact is the culmination of conferences between the secretary and other Treasury authorities and Chinese Ambassador C. T. Wang. Since the first agreement was signed between the United States and China the Treasury has purchased between 275,000,000 and 325,000,000 ounces of the metal.

Morgenthau, asked about his plans in France, said he talked to William C. Bullitt, Ambassador to France, on the transatlantic telephone Wednesday and that he would visit French Finance Minister Georges Bonnet when he arrives in Paris and probably other French cabinet members.

Morgenthau's visit to France raises speculation in view of the fact that the franc again has displayed weakness in recent weeks. The rate now is .0276, more than a cent below last April's devaluation.

Results of the latest French devaluation have not been as happy as were expected. There has been a repatriation of French capital, but this has been somewhat disappointing. Despite this repatriation and comparative stability of the present French government, the currency still is subject to speculative attacks.

32 Nations Vote For Permanent Refugee Office

London Organization Will Arrange for Migration From Germany.

By the Associated Press.

Evian, France, July 14.—The 32-Nation Refugee Conference voted today to establish a permanent organization in London to deal with problems of refugees from greater Germany.

Meeting in an executive session, the delegates unanimously adopted the proposal outlined in a resolution offered by Myron C. Taylor, president of the conference and chief United States delegate.

The conference will close tomorrow and the London organization will hold its first meeting August 3.

It will have four vice chairmen and a paid director who will be authorized to approach governments in connection with the migration of refugees from greater Germany.

The London organization will cooperate with existing League of Nations refugee bodies and deal solely with German refugees. The countries represented at the conference here will send to it details concerning the number of refugees they can accept and the conditions under which they will be received.

Nazis Attack Parley.

Berlin, July 14 (U.P.).—The newspaper Angriff today attacked the intergovernmental conference on political and racial refugees as being organized to form "anti-Fascist currents" and to give President Roosevelt more votes in the coming national elections.

In a front-page editorial, the Angriff said the conference proves that nobody wants Jewish emigrants although the democracies are willing to use them as a means of propaganda.

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Presidential Special,
San Francisco, Calif.
July 14, 1938.

For the secret service men a delicate and yet urgent problem arose yesterday. At the portal of Yosemite Park trains must back up a spur track, but this would place the Presidential car, which is at the rear end, at the front of the train backing.

• • • •

Should the President's private car break the trail with not even a locomotive between the rear platform and nameless perils? ... Or should the President's car be switched to the middle of the train, to draw traffic like Forty-second and Broadway, with newsmen, photographers, radio men galloping through? Secret service went into a huddle, chose the middle of the train.

Elliott Roosevelt . . . Wins $800

• • • •

Elliott Roosevelt may not, as the lurid tales have it, become Governor of Texas because of the President's visit; but he is $800 richer. He bet $1,000 against $800 on Senator Elmer Thomas against Gomer Smith in the Oklahoma primary, with a member of the Presidential entourage and won.

The loser made a little speech in the diner last night, denouncing gambling, as being worse than drink.

"—an ambush in the sagebrush."

We have just passed through a region teeming with dude ranches, divorces, itinerant capitalists and other stigmata of the horse and buggy era . . . Reno is a sort of suburb of economic royalism, and a surprise attack by divorcees and remittance men might have overpowered the 13 G-men who guard the Special.

But the $1,000-a-day men remained hidden in the cactus and chaparral, biding their time.

• • • •

When the Presidential Special stopped at Reno, with more chic creatures along the tracks than in the entire trip thus far, Chip Robert, the poker-faced adornment of the Democratic National Committee, leaped from the train, raced to a nearby gambling hell, and wagered $10 on the red. The red won as the wheel came to a stop, and he raced back, a $10 winner.

• • • •

HALLELUJAH EXPRESS: After being in the dog house all day, the dissident Senator McCarran finally got "befriended" by presenting Mr. Roosevelt with some mountain trout which the President mentioned in a platform speech . . . But the trout won't be elected to anything . . . Apropos of the review of the fleet in San Francisco Bay, the gag-of-the-day is that our naval front line has now been withdrawn inside the Golden Gate . . . Elliott Roosevelt said that he will use the $800 he won in his Oklahoma primary bet to help pay off the mortgage on his Texas ranch.

"—48 hours of scenery."

Truly, the scenery has been magnificent, but 48 solid hours of scenery, with the President at every stop rededicating himself to the capture and harnessing of every drop of water before it flows away to the sea, has given the passengers a mild case of heeby-jeebies.

• • • •

Yesterday Mr. Roosevelt razzed (from the rear platform) those members of the party who remain inside the train and listen to his speeches over the dining car loud speakers. This evoked a protest, alleging that his listeners were virtually waterlogged..

The President laughed uproariously and promptly put the protest in his album.

• • • •

Politics in Kentucky, Oklahoma and Texas seemed screwy enough, but in the Golden State of California they seem screwiest of all. One candidate offering a proposal to pay every elderly person $25 every Monday, and another has countered with a proposal to pay $30 every Thursday.

So far Tuesday, Wednesday and Friday are still open for ambitious patriots who believe in a five-day week.

• • • •

So far the master-minds aboard the train have defined this journey as (1) a complete purge of New Deal indigestibles, (2) a demonstration that the chief can nominate any man he wishes in 1940, and (3) as the beginning of Roosevelt's third-term campaign.

All that's certainly established, of course, is that he's on a fishing trip.

• • • •

At the Golden Gate, F. D. R. got a welcome after his own heart; Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard fired salutes, presented arms and stood at attention. Fireboats in the harbor squirted water, as if aware of the President's emphasis on his water-control program. Even the yachts of the nabobs tooted their horns. It has been a great day for gold braid and cocked hats, with a spicy sauce of signs reading "Quarantine the Aggressors" and "Lift the Spanish Embargo."

Smith Action Calling Loan Hit by Editor

Says Candidate Asked Repayment When Attacked in Paper.

The bitter fight in Virginia's Eighth Congressional District, where William E. Dodd, jr., seeks to wrest a House seat from Representative Howard W. Smith, was further enlivened yesterday by the story of a $500 loan.

Richard McAllister Smith, editor of the Arlington Courier, announced in his newspaper that Representative Smith had loaned him $500 some time ago and, on July 9 last, had asked him to repay it in a letter alluding to the Courier's "unfriendly attitude."

Editor Smith, though a relative of Representative Smith, has been backing young Dodd for the House seat. Announcing in a banner headline that the debt had been "paid in full," the editor made public a facsimile of Representative Smith's letter of July 9. This said:

Comments on Letter.

"Dear Dick:

"As I have opposition in the Democratic primary owing, I believe, largely to the unfriendly attitude of your newspaper, I will be glad if you will return to me the $500 which I loaned you to keep it afloat, as I can use it very well in my campaign."

Commenting on the letter, Editor Smith said in an editorial:

"It was a personal loan, and neither Mr. Smith nor the Courier need be ashamed of it. The Congressman has never before tried to dictate the policies of this newspaper. We cannot have the policy of this newspaper dictated by anyone.

"We believe, first of all, in the liberal policies of President Roosevelt. We believe, furthermore, in the freedom of the American press, and conceive our duty to be the publication of the news of the day without fear or favor."

Dodd Election Urged.

Thereupon the editorial charged that Representative Smith, as a member of the House Rules Committee, had "wielded a reactionary influence," and praised Dodd as a "liberal" who ought to be elected in his place.

In the same issue of the newspaper, Editor Smith replied to a letter from Representative Smith in which the latter commented on a photograph showing Dodd standing on the right-hand of Postmaster General James A. Farley at Charlottesville. Representative Smith said that Dodd got into the picture by "pushing aside" Judge Dabney, of Charlottesville. To that extent, he said, the picture was "a fake."

Editor Smith said that, after investigation, he found that Dodd was invited to attend the Charlottesville ceremonies with Farley by "a Government official closely associated with the White House;" that Dodd talked with Farley for 45 minutes on the train, and that Farley, anticipating photographs, "told Mr. Dodd before leaving the train to stay close by him throughout the ceremonies."

Ganz Is Arriving Here to Rehearse For Two Concerts

Rudolph Ganz, pianist and composer, will arrive in Washington this morning to rehearse with the National Symphony Orchestra for the Sunday and Wednesday concerts of the "Sunset Symphonies" at the Potomac Water Gate, at which he will be guest conductor.

Jan Peerce tenor of Radio City Music Hall, will make his Washington debut as soloist on Sunday night's program. He will sing an aria from Halevy's opera, "La Juive," and a group of songs. Mr. Ganz will conduct the orchestra in Beethoven's First Symphony and compositions by Wagner, Tchaikovsky, Johann Strauss and Massenet.

Making his third guest appearance with the National Symphony, Mr. Ganz comes here from Chicago where he is head of Chicago Musical College. He recently had two honorary doctorates conferred upon him —one from Grinnell College in Iowa, one from the University of Rochester (N. Y.)—for his services in the cause of music.

Tickets for these concerts may be obtained at Julius Garfinckel & Co. every week day except Saturday.

G. W. to Begin Legal Leaders' Talks Tonight

Government Corporation Symposium Will Last a Week.

A symposium on Government corporations will be held at George Washington University Law School this evening through next Friday.

All the meetings, which will be addressed by nationally famous authorities in legal fields, will be held in Stockton Hall from 5:10 until 7 p. m. The symposium is open to all students enrolled in the course on Government corporations, and to persons doing legal work in Government departments.

This evening John Albert McIntire, assistant professor of law, will review the law as it relates to Government corporations. On Monday the speakers will be Burnet Hodges, corporation counsel of the City of Chicago, and Murray Seasongood, chairman of the municipal law section of the American Bar Association and former Mayor of Cincinnati. They will discuss "Frontiers of Municipal Law."

Tuesday's topic will be "Federal-City Relations," and the speakers will be Paul V. Betters, executive director of the United States Conference of Mayors, and E. H. Foley, assistant general counsel of the Treasury.

Coroner Declares Gas Death Suicide

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald yesterday issued a certificate of suicide in the death of John Daniel Short, 39, of 513 Tennessee avenue northeast.

Short, a newspaper pressman, was found yesterday in the kitchen of his home by a cousin, Elizabeth Lanahan. Police said he had placed a hose leading to an open jet on the gas stove in his mouth.

2 Fail to Rescue Man Who Jumped Into Tidal Basin

A man tentatively identified as Herbert Johnson, 23, of 235 G street northwest, was drowned yesterday afternoon when he plunged into the Tidal Basin near Fourteenth street. Identification was made from fingerprints on file at the Department of Justice.

Harbor police recovered the body several hours later. The two men who plunged after the stranger were detained for questioning. Both said the victim was a stranger.

In police custody were Fred Hill, 24, of 416 Third street northwest, and Herman Watson, 28, of Mayden, N. C. Police expect to release them after they get a report.

They said they were passing by the basin when a stranger joined them and began discussing the amount of courage a man would need to jump into the water.

Finally, they said, the stranger jumped from the low bridge at the side of the basin. Watson dove after him, and then Hill went in to save Watson.

Vocational Schools Expected To Be Finished by Mid-Term

New buildings under construction for the Girls Vocational School and the Co-Educational Vocational School will be ready for occupation about the middle of the next school year, Mrs. Henry Grattan Doyle, president of the Board of Education, and a director in the Washington Self-Help Exchange, said yesterday in an address before the participants' assembly of the exchange.

"These new buildings," said she, "will permit us to increase the enrollment in the schools by approximately 50 per cent."

The new school for girls will be located at Allison street and Arkansas avenue northwest, while the one for boys and girls will be between Thirteenth and Fourteenth streets on Potomac avenue southeast.

"In 1936," she asserted, "the status of the vocational schools was raised from elementary to junior high school level.

"The time is not far distannt when it will probably be necessary for us to raise the level to senior high school, since throughout the country the tendency is to put vocational education on par with school education."

Mrs. Doyle added that one of the chief benefits to Washington from the passage of the George-Deen act in 1936, giving Federal aid to vocational education, is the allocation of $20,000 for home economics and $10,000 for distributive occupations.

Postlude

By Ray C. B. Brown.

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra Thursday night in the second concert of the summer series at the Potomac Watergate, with Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt as piano soloist. Program: Toccata (Frescobaldi), Symphony No. 29 in A major (Mozart), "Humoreske" No. 7 (Dvorak), "Hungarian Rhapsody" in C sharp major (Liszt), "Liebesleid" (Kreisler), "Burleske" for piano and orchestra (Richard Strauss), "Pini de Roma" (Respighi), Prelude to Act III "Lohengrin" (Wagner).

Postponed from Wednesday because of threatening rain, the second summer concert of the National Symphony Orchestra drew thousands of auditors to the Potomac Watergate last night, the attendance being almost as large as the throng that welcomed the opening of the series on Sunday. An expert in arithmetical estimates could have computed the difference which showed to the casual eye only as a thinning in the reserved section on the lower terrace. Enthusiasm maintained its crest and the applause expressed the indubitable public appreciation of the opportunity to enjoy excellent music in cool comfort after the sultriness of the day.

Hans Kindler began his program with the sturdy toccata by Frescobaldi which he introduced to the orchestra's regular patrons in Constitution Hall last season. It is a work admirably suited to performance in the open air because of its imposing structural form and its rhythmic momentum. In this case it served as an effective portico through which to pass to the charming A major symphony of Mozart, a work of delicacy and exquisite proportions. Mozart was only 18 when he wrote this symphony, which is one of four composed in Salzburg after his return from a visit to Vienna.

One can surmise that he had heard in the Austrian capital some of the symphonies written by Haydn in 1772, for in this A major symphony one feels an influence quite distinct from the Italianate tendencies shown in his earlier orchestral writing. There is a breadth of form and a range of feeling which had not hitherto appeared in his style. Whether or not it was Haydn who had stimulated his imagination, the youthful genius had discovered some new spring of inspiration.

Dr. Kindler had let it be known that he would include in the program two numbers which were to be announced from the podium as a surprise. But the real surprise was that he did not announce them, allowing the auditors to recognize the familiar themes of Dvorak's "Humoreske" and the second "Hungarian Rhapsody" of Liszt. For good measure he added Fritz Kreisler's lilting "Liebesleid."

After the intermission, the guest artist of the evening, Dorothy Kemp Roosevelt, gave a capable performance of the solo part in Richard Strauss' "Burleske" for piano and orchestra. This work calls for virtuosity and for interpretative romanticism as well, and the soloist met both demands. The title hints at satire, and there are passages which sound suspiciously like a parody of the concerto, but there is too much genuine poetic feeling in the lyric moments for the entire work to be in a jesting vein. Walter Howe handled the tympani part expertly.

The program officially closed with Ottorino Respighi's "Pines of Rome" which Dr. Kindler disclosed with a fine care for pictorial values and brought to a stirring climax with the dynamic crescendo of the march of the ghostly legions along the Appian Way. The audience, lingering to applaud and hoping for an extra number, was rewarded with the prelude to the third act of "Lohengrin."

Insurance Act Reducing Cabs, Licenses Show

2,300 Renewals Issued as Against 3,600 Last Year at This Time.

Indications that the District's new taxicab insurance act is reducing substantially the number of cabs operating in Washington were contained yesterday in a report by Wade Coombs, superintendent of insurance, that only 2,300 renewals had been issued.

With the deadline for old licenses fixed at midnight tonight, District officials expressed the belief that many operators, particularly part-time drivers, will not obtain new permits.

Last year at the corresponding time 3,600 hacking licenses had been issued and the number reached 4,600 before the end of the 12-month period.

Expressing fear that some hackers may try to operate on old licenses until August 29, when the insurance law becomes effective, Coombs asked police to stop drivers and check on their permits, beginning tomorrow.

ARLINGTON, VA.—Extra large room for 2 gentlemen; $15 for one, $20 for two. 1144 North Stuart st., Oxford 0991.

and the first morning this ad appeared in The Post, a Post reader rented the room. Our Miss Reed will be glad to help you rent your room through a Post Ad. Call NAtional 4200.

Dog's Disposition Affected by Heat, Ruhland Warns

A formula for protecting your dog from the effects of these sultry days was issued yesterday by Health Officer George C. Ruhland.

"An increase in the number of dog bites has been noted during the hot weather," he said. "We are now averaging about 100 bites each week. Though the danger of rabies is not great, there is no need for this preventable injury.

"Dogs are affected by the heat just as human beings change in disposition and tend to become more irritable in the hot weather."

He suggested:

"Be especially kind to your dog in hot weather.

"See that his pan of water does not go dry.

"Don't scuffle with him.

"Keep him in a shady place."

$33,000,000 D. C. Housing Projects Sped

Ickes Sees Early Action on Commissioners' Plea for PWA Loans.

Two programs enabling the District to borrow up to $33,000,000 from New Deal agencies for construction sailed smoothly yesterday.

Administrator Ickes predicted early action on additional applications by the District Commissioners for $15,323,000 one day after he had approved PWA loans and grants for $2,800,000.

The District Alley Dwelling Authority met to confirm action it had taken to borrow up to $15,000,000 from the United States Housing Authority.

Ickes acknowledged that the Commissioners had submitted in proper form applications for seven projects, and he expected applications for three more. While predicting early action he said they would "have to wait their turn" with other cities.

When the Commissioners submit applications for the three projects Ickes expects they will have applied for $18,123,200. Legislation at the past session of Congress permitted them to apply for grants and loans totaling $18,150,000 on a parity with the States. Instead of repaying 70 per cent of the loan under previous legislation, the District will have to repay only 55 per cent of the new loans.

The Commissioners will apply for $3,814,375 for 16 schools; $880,000 for an addition to Glenn Dale Tuberculosis Sanitarium, and $300,000 for a sewer and water system at the Lorton Reformatory, 26 miles south in Virginia. These total $4,994,375.

The seven projects totaling $18,328,625, for which the Commissioners have made application, are the start of a municipal center, $2,520,000; sewer projects, $1,483,625, for which detailed plans for $710,725 have been submitted; fire-alarm system, $1,000,000; branch library, $300,000; District Jail modernization, $1,600,000; National Guard Armory, $2,750,000, and extension of Gallinger Hospital, $675,000.

The $2,800,000 granted Wednesday was for new Municipal and Juvenile Court buildings and an addition to Gallinger Hospital.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Washington Will Have to Wait Long for Pulitzer Prize Play

Jed Harris Refuses to Mar 'Our Town' by Assembling 'Second' Troupe for Road Tour; Thanks for Book; 'Talent Quest' at Boro; Notes of Theater.

ALTHOUH "Our Town," the Pulitzer Prize play of 1938, has been tentatively announced as a possible inclusion among the six subscription plays to be offered by the Theater Guild and the American Theater Society of Washington, in the National Theater next season, it begins to look a little as if it might be the last one of the six to reach the Capital. At least, local theatergoers will have a considerable wait before this Broadway hit is seen on a Washington stage.

BELL.

It is that stalwart stentor of the better theatrical wares, Ben H. Atwell, who writes on a Jed Harris, Empire Theater, New York, letterhead, under recent date, to say that Mr. Harris declines to recruit a "road" company for the interpretation of the Thornton Wilder play and that that penetrating analysis of life in a small American town—any small American town—as a result, will not be seen outside of New York until its present run there is completed.

In fact, Mr. Atwell incloses a lengthy brochure from Mr. Harris to that effect. The opening paragraphs of this considerable screed are definitely to the point.

"No 'second' or road companies of 'Our Town,'" it says, "will be sent on tour. Only the original New York company will be seen on the road.

"Despite the play's enormous success and the keen interest with which it is awaited in the major cities of the United States, Mr. Harris believes that it would be impossible to assemble another cast of 'Our Town' so perfectly and harmoniously balanced as the one which, headed by Frank Craven, is performing nightly at the Morosco Theater, New York.

"Hence, Mr. Harris has sent official word to all dramatic desks that until the close of its present metropolitan run, 'Our Town' will not be seen in any American city other than New York. This means that theatergoers in other sections of the country may have to wait a year to satisfy their curiosity about the Thornton Wilder play which—acclaimed one of the truly great plays of our time—is probably more far-reaching in its appeal than any play since 'The Green Pastures.'"

That is what Mr. Harris says. But Mr. Harris may be just a bit optimistic—from his point of view; pessimistic, from ours—when he suggests that we may have to wait a year to see his prize-winner. It is Mr. Atwell's private tip that "Our Town" ought to stand up for a year in New York. We are willing to grant that, on the basis of all authentic reports. However, six months of that year already have passed, leaving only six more to go. That would carry the piece to about the first of the year. Assuming that other cities will have the booking prior to Washington—it happens that way too often—there still remains time for it to be presented on the tag end of the 1938-39 subscription season at the National.

If that is any comfort to you, there it is.

• • • •

Along with Mr. Atwell's letter and Mr. Harris' discouraging announcement came a personally inscribed copy of Mr. Wilder's play from Jed Harris. This 128-page volume, off the presses of Coward McCann, Inc., is dedicated to Alexander Woollcott by the author of "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and should make easy and delightful reading over the week-end. I shall be happy to have it on the shelves with the others. Those dedicatory lines to Mr. Woollcott, by the way, describe him as "of Castleton Township, Rutland County, Vt.," but fail to say anything about his being the town crier!

On the stage of the new Boro Theater, out in Bethesda, Md., tonight at 8, Sidney B. Lust, the "great independent," is staging the first of his "Quest for Talent" contests, featuring a group of the best nonprofessional entertainers to be found in the Bethesda-Chevy Chase area.

This contest will be the first of a series in which performers from Washington and nearby Maryland will be given an opportunity to compete for valuable prizes as well as gain footlight experience before large audiences.

Among those who will participate in tonight's initial program will be Iola Sanders, Chevy Chase, Md., classical vocalist; Anna Mae Kraft and Betty J. Tress, Bethesda, tap and toe dancers; Mary Ann Aitchison, Chevy Chase, pianist; Tom Powell and Tom and Carl Burris, Bethesda, juvenile hillbillies; Julia Taggart, Chevy Chase, Md., song and dance; Edward Nesbitt, Chevy Chase, cowboy songs; Evelyn Clements, Washington, soft-shoe dancer; the Misses June Hartman and Olga Loy, Bethesda, harmony singers, and Paul J. DeMarco, Washington, tap dancer.

This special stage bill will be in addition to the Boro's regular program, featured by "The Barrier."

Every once in a while a bit of promising material for future stage greatness bobs up in one of these amateur performances. It is, therefore, all the more a source of regret that a multiplicity of official duties on Friday evenings of each week precludes the possibility of this desk's serving with others of the local critical fraternity on the official board of judges for Mr. Lust's rodeo. To those of my confreres who do cast a judicial eye over the goings-on, the best of luck and may they get back to town safely with no irate parents hanging on their ears! All those entries can't win.

It has been a matter of remark here before that the newsreel boys work fast. When anything as important as Howard Hughes' landing in New York from his world-circling flight comes along, the lads really "go to town."

For example, my phone is still excited about the tip that just came in from one of Paramount's alert young men that last night Paramount News had a special 125-foot clip on the screens at the Earle, Metropolitan and Trans-Lux theaters, showing the landing of the Hughes flying laboratory in New York. This morning that hurried assemblage of film will be augmented by a 225-foot record of all that happened in New York yesterday afternoon, and tonight a total footage of about 500 feet will recapitulate the whole glorious adventure that smashed every known record in speed and efficiency.

As I say, these newsreel boys work fast. The other downtown screens probably will have their own releases, too, but Paramount happens to be the first to get through to this column with definite information about their own.

Some time ago, curiosity was expressed here as to what film revivals would be played in Washington and at what first-run theaters they would be shown, the question of reissuing old screen hits having become a matter of some importance throughout the motion picture industry. It hasn't taken the managerial gentlemen too long to provide an answer. Beginning today, Rudolf Valentino is being posthumously brought back to the screen at Loew's Columbia Theater in "The Sheik." A week from today, the Metropolitan will exhume the picturization of Alexandre Dumas' "The Count of Monte Cristo," in which Robert Donat and Elissa Landi head the cast. There was an earlier one with the late John Gilbert, Estelle Taylor, George Siegmann and others in the cast, but that isn't the one. Next?

It is the same Elissa Landi, of course, in "Monte Cristo," who will be seen as the first of the visiting stars at Stephen E. Cochran's new Olney Theater, when she opens that summer playhouse the night of Monday, July 25, in "The Lady Has a Heart."

Matching the fortnight's run of the Roadside Theater's production of "Engaged," the Cross Roads Theater, over in Virginia, announces that "The Ghost Train," its current offering, will be continued through a second week, beginning next Monday night. The next production of the Old Dominion hayloft players will be Noel Coward's "Private Lives," scheduled for Monday night, July 25, with Catherine Ryan, Jack Wilson, David Kaigler and Ethel McKeon in the principal roles.

Over-the-Hot-Sands Note.

The Columbia's engagement of "The Sheik" having caused a swell exploitation stunt to begin rumbling around in the posterior recesses of his skull, Ray Bell—no relation—now would walk a good deal more than a mile to get a camel!

Coney Island Remains at Palace

MARGARET SULLAVAN AND JAMES STEWART having themselves a time in the amusement park sequence in "The Shopworn Angel," being held over for a second week at Loew's Palace Theater, beginning today. In Hollywood

With HEDDA HOPPER

Hollywood, Calif., July 14.—Miss Alma Lloyd—her father calls her Jimmy—gave a dinner dance celebrating her parents' twenty-fifth wedding anniversary. It was more than a party—it was a reunion of old friends—a renewal of faith in friendship. The same sort of warm feeling you had while looking at Snow White. Now the Frank Lloyds are going on their honeymoon to England, and Alma in the other direction—Honolulu.

HEDDA HOPPER

Among the guests was Louise Dresser, who used to lend me her clothes. I was too poor to buy any during my first season of stock in Mount Vernon, N. Y. I will always remember her mother's sweet criticism. I was pretty proud of myself in those days. At the end of the summer I asked her which of my parts she liked best. She replied, "The old Indian Squaw in 'Girl of the Golden West.'"

"But, all I did," I protested, "was sit against a wall and grunt."

"That's why I liked it," she said.

Gary Cooper, still the shy, sensitive boy, who played his first important part under Frank's direction in "Children of Divorce." Now he knows how to relax and make it an asset.

The Louis Leightons—been married 18 years—are always so quiet and unassuming you'd scarcely know he's a big shot. He's now working on Kipling's "Kim."

The Basil Rathbones, married 13 years. And the Joe Cawthornes, wed 37. Joe's one of the best comedians in town. Should be working all the time. Queenie Cawthorne twirled with George Marshall like a debutante.

John and Lily MacCormack, 32 years married. John started the singing with "For He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and did everybody join in! We nearly split the rafters. John gave me a new word which I've got to look up before I pass it on.

Then there were the Fred MacMurrays. What a lovely girl she is—looks like Mrs. Rodion Rathbone. They're great friends. Caroline used to go up and read to her when she was so ill.

Introduced my son to his crush. Irene Dunne, who's thin as a whippet. She begins her new picture in September—at present she's breaking golf records.

The Jack Bennys. He told this one—stop me if you've heard it. Two Jewish mothers in the park. One pointed out a boy with an enormous head, almost a deformity, and calling the other woman's attention to it, she said, "Have you ever seen anything like that?"

"That's my son," the second one replied icily.

"But," said the first, "you didn't let me finish—on him, it's becoming."

Ernst Lubitsch was there wearing his naughty twinkle, but I've never heard him tell one of those stories—he saves them for his pictures. His wife was very pretty in flowered chiffon. We're all happy they didn't go to London. Jeanette and Gene Raymond, more in love than ever.

Joel McCrea like bronze mahogany. I was invited down to swim at his beach house. He goes in for one before and after each day's work.

Henry Hathaway there—like a boy just out of college, instead of one of our biggest and best directors. And Ronnie Colman—now out of circulation for two weeks to regrow his beard for more scenes in "If I Were King."

C. E. France, an English actor, brought over for the same picture, has been married 40 years. He has that quality of mercy which his daughter must have inherited. She manages a school for backward children, he told me, and her patience worries him.

The Richard Hagemans, David Selznick—didn't embarrass him by "Wind" chatter. The Ralph Morgans, Boris Morrises, Winnie Sheehan, Henry Kings, Watty Rothackers—they came back for the party. The Theodore Sparkuhls. He photographed me like a human being in my last picture. The Monty Loves and a hundred others.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, July 14.

DIPLOMACY: Last week Ambassador Bullitt was host to the 250 Annapolis midshipmen who had just arrived in Paris . . . Bullitt also invited 250 of the prettiest girls in the city, accompanied by some of the mothers as chaperons . . . "Your Excellency," one of the mothers asked Bullitt, "it was lovely of you to invite our daughters—but why not our sons, too?" . . . Bullitt's diplomatic reply has resulted in his being referred to as "Le Benjamin" by the Parisiennes who considered Benjamin Franklin the best Ambassador America ever had . . . "Madame," he said, "I didn't invite the sons—because I fear the comparison."

• • • •

CELEBRATION: Ambassador Joseph P. Kennedy invited Harry Richman to entertain at the party tendered for his daughter, Katharine . . . Richman, who had just come from singing before the King and Queen, started to tell Kennedy about the celebrities he just had entertained—and then tripped over a young man seated comfortably on the floor . . . "Who's the kid?" Richman asked . . . "That boy you just kicked," Kennedy informed, "is John D. Rockefeller, jr."

• • • •

ROMANCE: In Florida last winter, Richman had told me that he never could marry the wealthy Hazel Forbes "because if I save up $20,000, and give it to her for a Christmas present, she's liable to turn around and call me Cheap Skate" . . . "Well, how'd you ever get around that problem?" Harry was asked last night . . . "It was simple," he explained. "We simply made an agreement—that I don't have to give it to her."

• • • •

CONFLICT: Paul de Kruif, John L. Spivak, William Gropper, George Seldes and 25 other artists and writers who were, or now are, employed by Ken magazine, recently sent a petition to David Smart, the publisher of the magazine . . . The petition deplored the fact that the publishers had departed from the original editorial policy—and to revert to making it a liberal, pro-labor anti-Fascist magazine. It also accused the editors of Red-bating . . . The petition was mailed to Smart one month ago . . . He has made no reply.

• • • •

MYSTERY: Octavus Roy Cohen, the writer, is in Paris now, and has been taking a correspondence course in magic from Russell Swan, the Savoy-Plaza magician . . . "You're magic is too good," Cohen cabled yesterday, "because my last two lessons disappeared even before they reached me."

• • • •

SOLUTION: Rupert Hughes came to the office of the Sandalwood Herald, and played "The Game" with Fulton Oursler and the other guests . . . Hughes was assigned the line "I stood on the bridge at midnight" . . . His team guessed that line in record time. Hughes had conveyed the idea by exhibiting his watch, whose hands had been turned to 12 o'clock—removing the bridge-work from his mouth . . . and then stood on the bridge-work.

• • • •

DEFEAT: Some weeks ago Fanti, who was called the Office-Wife Slayer, was convicted, in Brooklyn, of manslaughter in the second degree . . . Fanti, pending the determination of his appeal, went to Sing Sing . . . This week Fanti will decide whether or not he'll pursue that appeal. He probably will discontinue it and complete his sentence. This is the result of his new friendship with a prisoner named Fred Hull . . . Hull was one of the defendants in the famed Druckman case, who had appealed from the manslaughter sentence, won a new trial—and then was sentenced to death. At the last minute his life was saved, and he is serving a life sentence. "Take a lesson from me," Hull advised, "and don't appeal.

Acting of Director During Production Is Filmed by Star

Two pictures are being made on the set of "Youth Takes a Fling" at Universal studios. Joel McCrea is emoting under Archie Mayo's direction, and Mayo's spontaneous acting is being photographed by McCrea with a 16 mm camera.

"This film that I'm shooting of Archie may not go so well at the box office, but it'll be an A-1 comedy," laughed Joel.

The entire cast, including Andrea Leeds, Frank Jenks and Dorothea Kent, are kept in good spirits by Mayo's constant clowning. When a "take" doesn't meet with his approval he says, "That was very good—up to a point. The point was when the camera began to turn." He refers to the actors as "You lovely things," and when he is ready for a scene, instead of saying "roll 'em" or "turn 'em over," as most directors do, he yells, "Go an and 'twist 'em'."

"You're wasting your time directing," Joel McCrea told Mayo, "you ought to be in pictures, and maybe I'm the man who will put you there with my little camera."

Time Shaver.

Special electric razor plugs installed in both his automobiles enable Errol Flynn to shave on his way to work in "The Sisters."

Naval Program Held Up While 3 Unions Fight

Dispute on Which Shall Move Form Stops Test Basin Work.

Construction work on the new $3,500,000 naval model testing basin at Carderock, Md., has been brought to a standstill pending settlement of a squabble among three unions over the right to move a wood and steel concrete form.

Although the contractor, the Turner Construction Co., of New York City, is far ahead of the building schedule, there is considerable concern over the situation, because the Navy desires to begin using the testing basin as soon as possible in order to speed experiments in the fleet expansion program.

The dispute, now entering its third week, has brought enforced idleness to 300 carpenters, iron workers and laborers.

"The contractor is not a party to the dispute, which is one of jurisdiction among the three unions involved," G. F. Ferris, construction superintendent for the Turner Co., said yesterday. "We will abide by any decision the unions may reach."

The argument arose over the moving of a form used in the erection of the arched concrete roof over the testing basin. The roof will be 118 feet in span by 1,200 feet in length. Use of the form permits casting of 60-foot lengths of the arch at one time, after which the scaffold is moved to the next section.

The Carderock basin is urgently needed by the Navy to test scale models of ships for the fleet or the merchant marine. Such work is now carried on at the old basin in the Navy Yark here, which is too small to handle the large number of tests now in contemplation.

Comment on the situation at Carderock was refused by naval officials on the ground that the Navy has no part in the dispute. The contract calls for completion by August, 1939, it was said.

Escaped School Inmates Fire on Posse, Captured

Livingstone, Mont., July 14 (AP).—A sheriff's posse waged a gun battle in the Crazy Mountains of south central Montana this morning to capture 13 boys and girls. Sheriff Taylor M. Darrouch said the group admitted escaping from the South Dakota Industrial School Sunday night. Two boys and a girl suffered bullet wounds.

Touring Cuban School Teachers Visit Washington

Tumbling out of four chartered buses, 115 Cuban teachers and education officials yesterday discovered Washington.

Sparkling black eyes and the easy flow of Spanish filled the lobby of the Burlington Hotel as the visitors rushed back and forth from sightseeing and a heavy schedule of engagements.

Combining business and pleasure, the party is studying American educational technique—which they describe as "far more advanced than ours"—and exploring the United States where only two dozen of them have ever traveled before.

The group sailed from Havana to Key West four days ago and then came north by bus, stopping at Miami, Jacksonville and Raleigh. Yesterday the assorted teachers, principals, board of education members and government officials were torn between delight with the National Capital and impatience to see the fabled city of New York where they will arrive tonight.

Washingtonians accustomed to foreign reactions to their city have probably heard every answer to the stock questions except the one given by Dr. Tranquilliuo, a pharmacist from Nuevitas who qualified for the trip because his wife teaches school.

"The thing that impresses me most about Washington," he said, "is how very polite your people are."

The party was entertained immediately after their arrival at the Cuban Embassy, and last night attended a concert at the Pan-American Union. Today they will be luncheon guests of Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin, president of George Washington University, and a delegation of eight is to be received at the State Department.

Communists to Meet.

A meeting of the Frederick Douglas Branch of the Communist Party will be held at Tenth and U streets northwest tonight at 7:30 o'clock. Principal business will be a report of a conference members had with Commissioner Hazen concerning alleged police brutality.

G.O.P. Labor Unit Assails Wages Act

Chicago, July 14 (AP).—A regional labor relations sub-committee of the Republican program committee went on record today against fixing of wages and hours by statute.

Judge Oscar F. Nelson, of Chicago, sub-committee chairman, asserted, "The fixing of wages and hours by law compels the fixing of prices of commodities by law and is a direct step toward facism and dictatorship."

The region comprises Indiana, Wisconsin, Ohio, Illinois, Michigan, Kentucky and West Virginia.

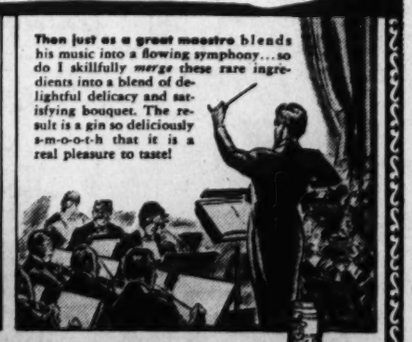
OLD MR. BOSTON SAYS:
"I Blend 17 Rare Flavors to give you a Superb Tom Collins!"

I believe my Dry Gin is great in a Tom Collins—for it harmonizes perfectly with lemon, sugar and seltzer.

Ah-h, that's because I actually use not 1 or 2, but 17 rare flavors—from every corner of the earth—to give my Dry Gin its liqueur-like smoothness and grand aroma!



Then just as a great maestro blends his music into a flowing symphony...so do I skillfully merge these rare ingredients into a blend of delightful delicacy and satisfying bouquet. The result is a gin so deliciously s-m-o-o-t-h that it is a real pleasure to taste!

So s-m-o-o-t-h is my Dry Gin, gentlemen, that you can sip it straight! And in my Tom Collins it's a marvel of velvety taste—a revelation in refreshing enjoyment!

Here's Old Mr. Boston's Famous Recipe for a Superb Tom Collins

As soon as you discover the delicate bouquet of its 17 rare flavors—you'll understand why so many people use nothing but Old Mr. Boston Dry Gin! Squeeze juice of half a lemon in tall glass; Add teaspoon sugar and 2 oz. of Old Mr. Boston Dry Gin; Drop in several pieces of ice; Fill with seltzer.

The Olympics.

We think Japan's withdrawal as host to the 1940 Olympic games will evoke less regret than applause. Even the possibility that the games of 1940 might be entirely abandoned we do not believe to be exactly world-shaking. The cancelation of the Olympics would hardly be a catastrophe.

POVICH.

In recent years, the Olympics have profaned the original theme — promotion of friendship and good will among the nations of the world. When the ancient Greek games were revived in 1896, the revival was a beautiful and noble idea. Athletes of the world were to meet in friendly competition in an aura of international amity.

But the last Olympics—the Berlin games of 1936—were replete with "incidents" that fostered race hatred and nationalistic fury. The very site of the German Olympics was later to be transformed into an army officers' training camp, and even while the athletes were engaging in pre-Olympic practice the rat-a-tat of army machine-gun fire could be heard only a few yards away.

Stooge for Hitler.

In Berlin, in 1936, there was the irrepressible feeling that the Olympics were serving as a mere stooge for Hitler to show off his organized might. Under the guise of sponsoring an international sports carnival, the Nazis paraded their armed legions and the Nazi salute left officials of the games armweary.

In their zest to make it a Nazi show, the Germans forgot all precepts of sportsmanship and their duties as hosts to the games. The victory of the Americans in the track events produced a vitriolic diatribe in the German press which referred to Jesse Owens and other colored stars of the American team as "America's black auxiliaries," with the inference that they were not desirable in Germany.

Hurrah for Nazis.

For each German winner of an event there was demonstration, and the victor was led to the box of Fuehrer Hitler for personal felicitations. Yet Owens, winner of three events in record-breaking time, received not as much as a curt nod from the man who represented Germany.

Far from promoting friendship and will, the Berlin Olympics incited fights among Italian and South American soccer teams and the threat of Canada's winter sports team to withdraw from the games. Three United States boxers were deported on charges of stealing cameras from German barracks.

* * * *

Even before the Olympic games started, Germany in one way betrayed its trust as sponsor of international amity. A bare few weeks before the opening events the Nazis marched into the demilitarized Rhineland zone in violation of treaties to which a score of nations were signatories.

* * * *

Idea Takes a Beating.

And what did the Olympics contribute to Germany's regard for the sacredness of friendship among nations? Not much, apparently, because two years after the Olympic fanfare the Nazis marched into Austria and wiped out the independence of that nation which, if we remember rightly, was a competitor in the Olympics of 1936 and hoped that it was competing among friends.

The theory that the Olympic games is an agent of peace and friendship among nations has taken a pretty bad beating all around. Following the 1936 Olympics the 1940 games were awarded to Japan. Almost immediately the Japanese began to cement their world friendships by making war on China, blowing Chinese civilians to bits with their aerial bombs and otherwise making friends.

Long before the Japanese abandoned the plan to stage the 1940 Olympics, there was in this country organized opposition to sending an American team to Tokyo. Elements which recognized the delicacies of state diplomacy were willing to grant that the United States officially could not act to keep American athletes at home, but that private athletic organizations could.

They were aware of the humbug of it all—the supposed promotion of friendship on one hand and the continued destruction of humanity on the other. And for America to send a team to Japan could be tantamount to tacit indorsement of the Japanese way. The American Olympic Committee would have found it difficult to raise by popular subscription the funds to send an American team to Tokyo.

* * * *

It's a Good Thing!

The very nature of Japan's withdrawal as host to the 1940 game is a severe indictment of the award of the games to Japan in the first place. Because it was officially announced yesterday that Japan was abandoning the games because of an unwillingness to spare materials and money for the Olympics at a time when the Nipponese were on a war basis.

It's just as well that Tokyo tossed the Olympics back into the laps of the badge-wearing Olympic officials. One of these days they might come up with the bright idea of awarding the games to a country where the starter's gun won't be confused with the activities of the firing squad.

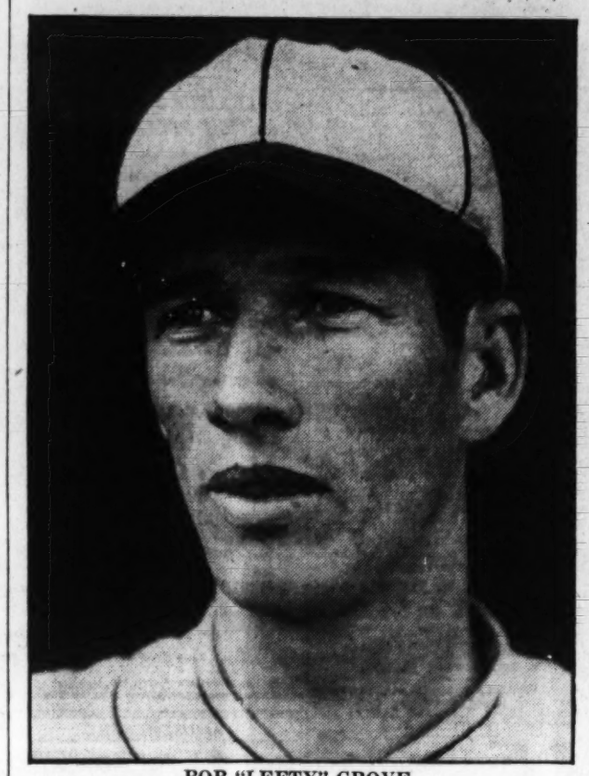
Lefty Grove's Arm Goes Dead; Career Believed in Balance



BOB "LEFTY" GROVE.

Physician Says Lengthy Examination Required Before Red Sox Will Know Star's Future.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 14.—The once-mighty "fireball" arm of lanky Bob (Lefty) Grove lay limp tonight—and the career of one of baseball's greatest pitchers awaited a doctor's diagnosis of a strange ailment that cut him down on the mound today.

Dr. Edward J. O'Brien, Red Sox team physician, said long diagnosis and extensive X-rays lay ahead before he could determine whether the Red Sox would lose their 38-year-old star hurler.

That veteran star was forced to quit in the fifth inning today when he gained his fourteenth victory of the season at the expense of the Detroit Tigers.

"There is no pulse in Grove's left arm and he is unable to grip firmly with his hand," Dr. O'Brien said. "I have never encountered a similar case, but I judged from my initial examination that it was not a recurrence of the bicep muscle trouble he had back in 1934.

"The fact that Grove has circulation in his arm and is not suffering any pain is encouraging. But we will not know just how serious the injury is until tomorrow, at least. He is being held at the hospital for observation, and nothing definite will be known until after a thorough diagnosis has been made and X-rays taken."

"My arm started to trouble me when I fielded Gehringer's bunt in the first inning," Grove said.

"It didn't pain me, but it gradually lost its power and I told Joe Cronin about it in the fourth inning. In the fifth I couldn't even get a grip on the ball. I've never had such an experience before, and the only case I know about that appears similiar is the injury Ed Linke suffered when he was with Washington.

"I've been having electric heat treatments every hour," he said. "I'm not worried about it, but I am disappointed that it has happened while I have been going so well."

Hershey Ace Wins Match By 3 and 2

Beats Sarazen in P. G. A. Championship Play at Shawnee.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Shawnee-on-Delaware, Pa., July 14.—A man whose golfing record needs only a national title to rank him with the all-time greats, one of the finest shot makers and highest money winners over the past ten years, handsome Henry Picard, reached the semifinal round of the twenty-first annual P. G. A. championship here today at Shawnee by conquering a three-time former champion, Gene Sarazen.

By a 3-and-2 margin, his third triumph by the same score in four matches, Picard won with a 5-under-par exhibition and was joined in the round-of-four by his opponent of tomorrow, dapper Paul Runyan, 1934 titleholder; Jimmy Hines, the Long Island larruper, and Slammin' Sammy Snead, who has yet to be extended in his second bid for this title.

With a gallery doubling the total of the other three matches, Picard and Sarazen battled through the morning round, 7 under par between them, as Sarazen rounded 1 up, but in the afternoon Picard evened the match on the first hole with a birdie and from there on was the class of the field.

Hines Ousts Nelson.

Hines, winner over Champion Denny Shute on Wednesday, had two great rallies that enabled him to oust Byron Nelson, Reading, Pa., 2 and 1, while Snead, who has yet to see the sixteenth green in match competition, made short work of the last dark horse contender, Jim Foulis, of Chicago, by a decisive 8 and 7 margin. Horton Smith could not match the afternoon pace of Runyan and dropped out to the tune of a 4 and 3 defeat.

Three of the four semifinalists are newcomers to this late round in P. G. A. competition, but they include Snead, who is tops among the year's money winners; Picard, who is fourth; Runyan, seventh, and Hines, eleventh. Today's winners are assured of $350 the share of the losing semifinalists. Today's losers received $250.

The semifinal encounters leave little to choose, but the "smart money" will back Snead to trounce Hines and Picard over Runyan. Today's battles ran true to form.

Foulis Bows to Snead.

"Silent Jim" Foulis, son of the inventor of the mashie-niblick, Dave Foulis, and nephew of former national Open champion Jim Foulis, was not the same man who upset Willie Goggin, Jimmy Thomson and Marvin Stahl, and was a helpless figure as he stalked through the 29 holes against Snead, always too many down.

The White Sulphur Springs stroker was four up at the end of the five holes, lost two by the sixteenth, but regained the margin at the half-way mark and boosted it to an eight-and-seven triumph. Snead was five under par for the day and ran his sub-par string to 14 under for 111 holes. Hines has not yet shown a brand of golf capable of beating that.

Hines saved his punch for the two crucial moments, however, as he stopped Nelson. Even after 14 holes Jimmy won four in a row, with two birdies and as many pars, to turn four up. Byron charged back in 36, one under, and cut two holes off, and then started the back nine birdie—birdie, to even it up. They were all square through the fifteenth, but Hines downed a 16-footer for a deuce and won the match via the stymie route on the next hole.

Horton Smith, the "Joplin ghost," played the first nine in one over Budge and his partner, Gene Mako, who lost to the Puncec-Kukuljevic combination yesterday, won from Kukuljevic and Drage Mitic today, 6—8, 6—4, 6—3.

He's Out? No, He's Safe!

At this moment, Lary (left) Cleveland is out, as the umpire indicates. But a moment later Lary was safe. This strange bit of action took place yesterday in the fifth inning of the game at the stadium. Nat Catcher Rick Ferrell tossed to First Baseman Jimmie Wasdell (right) in an effort to catch Lary off the base. Wasdell tagged Lary (as shown above) and Umpire Rue calls it out. But then Wasdell dropped the ball and the umpire reversed his ruling, calling Lary safe.

Reds Blank Giants, 1 to 0

Terrymen Drop 3d Tilt in Row on Errors.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, July 14.—The Reds took advantage of a crack in the usually reliable defenses of the New York Giants in the first inning today to shove across the only run of the ball game for a 1-to-0 victory over the National League champions.

It was the third straight defeat for the New Yorkers, and dropped them half a game behind the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates.

The run was a tough break for Harry Gumbert, who pitched four-hit ball, only to lose. Bucky Walters allowed five hits in winning.

Wally Berger scored the lone run. He beat out a hit, and went to second when Jojo Moore, recently returned from the injured list, stumbled and muffed Ival Goodman's fly. Gumbert then took Buck McCormick's easy bounder and threw wildly into centerfield for the second error of the frame, allowing the run to cross.

Yanks Whip Browns, 5-4

Henrich Hits Home Run; Newsom Loses Game.

New York, July 14 (AP).—The Yankees made it four straight over the St. Louis Browns and retained their half-game lead in the American League race today with a 5-to-4 victory in another wierd exhibition of baseball.

The game was halted by rain with the Yankees at bat in the last of the seventh.

The Brownies collected ten hits to the Yanks' seven, but a homer by Tommy Henrich with a mate on base in the first inning, a double by Joe DiMaggio with two aboard in the fifth, and a triple by George Selkirk in the sixth proved the extra-base margin which meant victory.

Buck Newsom was charged with his seventh defeat of the year, against nine victories. Monte Pearson was the winner, his sixth victory of the season.

Newsom had a big hand in losing his own game. With two out in the sixth, after Selkirk tripled and Joe Gordon walked, he threw wild trying to catch the latter off first and Selkirk raced home. A moment later, Red Rolfe singled Gordon across with what proved the winning run.

Henrich's tenth four-bagger of the year started the Yanks off in front by two runs in the opening frame. The Brownies tied it up on four hits in the fourth, but the Yanks again took the lead in the fifth when DiMaggio's double brought one run across. After the Yanks went out in front to stay in the sixth, the Brownies came back with two more in the seventh on two hits and an error.

Harder Lets Griffs Down With 8 Hits

Heath's Circuit Drive in 1st Inning Wins Tilt; Simmons Homers.

By Shirley Povich.

Washington's six-game winning streak expired yesterday. The end came peaceably. The Cleveland Indians administered an overdose of Mel Harder's pitching and the Nats lapsed into a batting coma. They didn't make a run until the ninth. By that time the Indians had five runs and won the ball game, 5 to 1.

It later developed that the Indians had won the ball game in the first inning. That was when Dutch Leonard pitched a home run ball to Jeff Heath with a man on base. The runs the Indians scored after that were entirely superfluous, what with Harder pitching the next thing to a shutout.

The veteran right-hander was so completely the master of the Nats that in the first seven innings his outfielders had only one chance for a putout. The Nats were beating his curve ball into the dirt, popping up or striking out. Harder yielded eight scattered hits, and the Nats succeeded in advancing only one runner past first base.

Simmons Hits Homer.

The Nats could produce no ninth-inning rally yesterday, but they did manage to avert the ignominy of a shutout in the ninth. That was when Al Simmons, after upbraiding Umpire Steve Basil for his decision on a second strike, spat on his hands, went back to the batter's box and slugged a home run far into the centerfield bleachers.

That was the extent of the Nats' ninth-inning uprising.

Leonard and his knuckle ball held no terrors for the Indians yesterday. Against him they banged out 6 of their 13 hits and forced his retirement at the end of the sixth inning. Joe Krakauskas took over the job in the seventh and gave up the Indians' fourth run in the eighth. Pete Appleton escaped the ninth undamaged despite the fact he allowed three hits.

Heath Accounts for Two.

Little Roy Weatherly started Leonard's downfall when, with one out in the first inning, he beat out a bunt to Buddy Lewis. Leonard wild-pitched him to second base and then, tightening, struck out the dangerous Odell Hale. But he didn't strike out Heath. That guy walloped a ball over the high right field wall and the Indians had a 2-0 lead.

In the fourth inning, the Indians knocked Leonard loose from another run. Earl Averill, the league's leading hitter, who had not as yet hit safely in the three-game series, awoke from his slump with a bang—a three-base bang over Sammy West's head. Hal Trosky singled to center and the Indians had a 3-0 lead.

They had a 4-0 lead by the time the sixth ended. Hale began that inning by bouncing a long two-bagger off the shallow screen atop the leftfield wall, took third on a sacrifice and scored while Trosky was hitting into a force play at second.

Krakauskas escaped the seventh inning undamaged, but three straight singles with two out in the eighth—by Heath, Averill and Trosky—produced the fifth Cleveland run.

All of this time the Nats were having a horrible time of it against Harder. Buddy Lewis' single in the first inning was wasted, and Myer's single in the second was nullified when Wasdell hit into a double play. Again in the fourth Lewis singled, but the Nats couldn't get him past first base. Again in the sixth Lewis singled, but to no avail.

In the seventh, the Nats fumbled their first decent opportunity for a big inning. Simmons launched the seventh by beating out a hit to Lary and Myer singled to right. But Wasdell, Bluege and Rick Ferrell couldn't get the ball out of the infield.

That was rather typical of the Nats yesterday.

Street Suspended For Tiff With Ump.

New York, July 14 (AP).—President Will Harridge of the American League has suspended Gabby Street, St. Louis Browns' manager, for three days as the result of an argument Street had with Umpire Eddie Rommel in a game with the Yankees Tuesday.

The suspension began today, Street watching the game with the Yankees from a box seat, while Coach Oscar Melillo ran the club.

The argument with Rommel occurred in the first inning of the second game of Tuesday's doubleheader. Rommel called Lou Gehrig safe at first on a close play and Street protested. He continued to object and finally he and Pitcher Buck Newsom of the Browns, who entered the argument, were banished from the game.

A's Lose Early Lead in Free Hitting Contest.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 14.—The Chicago White Sox won a free-hitting game from the Athletics, 9 to 8, here today.

Bill Werber's double and Bob Johnson's seventeenth homer of the season with one on gave the A's a 3-run lead in the first, but four hits, coupled with three errors, put the Sox ahead, 5 to 3, in the second.

They added 3 more in the third on four hits and a walk and scored what proved to be the winning run in the fifth off Edgar Smith on doubles by Gabler and Steinbacher.

Chisox May Lose Hayes Indefinitely

Philadelphia, July 14 (AP).—Minter (Jack) Hayes, second baseman of the Chicago White Sox, may be lost to the team for the remainder of the season as a result of a first base collision with Lou Finney in yesterday's game with the Athletics.

Hayes was the last batter in the ninth inning. He grounded to Ace Parker at second base and Parker's low throw caused Finney to stoop and back into the speeding White Sox.

'Orphaned' Olympics May Shift to Finland

By Alan Gould.
Associated Press Sports Editor.

New York, July 14.—The sudden collapse of Japan's plans to stage the 1940 Olympics automatically removes current causes of dissension, notably in the United States, and likewise paves the way for Finland, if it desires, to take over conduct of the next international games in an atmosphere of "Spartan simplicity."

Confirmation of belief that Helsingfors, capital of Finland, would have first call as alternative site came from Count Henri de Baillet Latour, of Belgium, president of the International Olympic Committee, less than 24 hours after Tokyo's decision to withdraw.

Count Baillet Latour, in England, told the Associated Press: "I have no doubt Finland will accept. The Olympics might be on a smaller scale but they certainly will be held."

The I. O. C. executive committee, of which Avery Brundage, of Chicago, is the American member, probably will be called together to switch 1940 plans, as soon as formal notice of Tokyo's withdrawal is received. London is understood to be second choice to Helsingfors, for the summer games. Oslo, Norway, probably will bid for the winter Olympics, which had been awarded to Sapporo, Japan. Canada also may be a bidder.

The Finns made a bold bid to get the 1940 games when the I. O. C. met at Berlin on the eve of the 1936 competition. The issue of a return to "Spartan simplicity" versus "nationalistic extravaganza" was sharply debated. Tokyo won over Helsingfors in the voting, 36 to 27, after London withdrew its bid and served notice of its desire to hold the 1944 games.

There is no chance that the 1940 games will come to the United States, notwithstanding suggestions that New York, as well as Philadelphia and Chicago, would be willing to take over the orphaned athletic show. Not only have the European capitals filed prior bids, but the economics of the situation make the choice of a European site more practical.

Grover Whalen, president of New York's World's Fair, put forward the idea of shifting the games here. John B. Kelly, former Olympic rowing champion, proposed Philadelphia for the rowing events as an adjunct to holding the main show in New York.

American athletic leaders, however, conceded there was not the remotest chance of the games coming back to this country, especially since they were held in Los Angeles in 1932. Some expressed regret in behalf of Japan, which had labored long and ardently to bring the games to the Orient for the first time. Others accepted the shift, to Europe, as a solution of 1940 problems as well as irritations.

Despite United States' objections, the Tokyo games had been scheduled for September 21-October 6, two months later than usual and at a time of year when participation by American college athletes would be handicapped. It is now considered likely the original early August dates will be restored.

Boycott movements in England as well as the United States, growing out of Japan's conflict with China, now seem likely to be dissolved. Samuel K. Maccabee, of New York, national chairman of the "move-the-Olympics committee," said today:

"We are temporarily relieved. The move-the-Olympics committee was preparing to oppose the Tokyo Olympics even more vigorously than it did those in Berlin. I agree with William J. Bingham (of Harvard) that international contests should not be awarded to aggressor nations."

Bingham, who managed the 1936 American Olympic track team and field team, recently resigned from membership on the American Olympic Committee.

The Olympic program, which many believe has become top-heavy, may be sharply curtailed if the games are held in Helsingfors. They probably would more closely resemble the 1928 games, in Amsterdam, than either the Los Angeles or Berlin spectacles. So-called "demonstration sports," including baseball, may be affected and perhaps eliminated entirely.

With Bill Ackerman

Fisherman's Diary.

Ocean City, Md., July 14. Reports from Ocean City since last Thursday were more than we could take. Telephoned messages excited us far more than the anglers who were catching the fish. After four days, stories of record-breaking catches broke the camel's back and we were on our way with Larry Richey, George Huber, the mate of The Joann and with the hope of picking Bill Briggs up at Bethany Beach.

ACKERMAN.

Hardly on the bridge before we met the sight of returning boats with marlin flags flying in greater numbers than we had ever before seen. an don the dock a fish for every flag. At Magee's Basin were 27, while on the dock above the number was set at 20. Something to think about, when the catch last year of 31 in one day was news around the world.

* * * *

Capt. Lev Raymond, skipper of The Levlou, was waiting for us with Bill Briggs with a surf rod, which wasn't a bit of good where we were headed, Comeday Light.

Excited crowds of vacationists, the meeting of many friends, dinner with Sinepuxent soft crabs, plus white marlin steaks, which, if you have never tried is a must item on your list. Stories around the dock in the evening, the prize, the one of Capt. Jim Lombard having his lunch inadvertantly left on the dock, delivered to him on the Jack Spot in a sealed can. Talk among the captains to too many marlin being taken until with but an hour or two until daylight we turned in on the comfortable Levlou.

* * * *

Breakfast at four, and on the way out by daylight, one of a string of some 50 odd sport fishermen, everyone with but one idea in mind—to get one of the craziest, jumpingest fish it has been our experience to meet up with on the business end of a fishing line.

Two hours off, with the outriggers down and but two baits over, Bill Briggs half asleep, and missing the first strike, which came up from right under boat.

Another hour before Louise Raymond has a strike on the teaser bait just under the stern of the Levlou. Twelve jumps, and it is off, but from no fault of hers. Then several hours before the slightest sign of fish, if you except blues and hard to believe passing them up as if they were no more than the smallest hardheads. We finally hit them northeast of the Jacks Spot, one right after another hitting the baits. Bill missed four straight.

George Huber misses one, and right under the stern a big one takes the teaser bait. We are fishing with a jump that throws the hook a strike and a miss on Larry's line. Another on Bill's. Still another, but this time he connects one jump after another and he throws the hook but the line immediately tightens, and it is thought he has another on but up to the boat it is found to be the same fish, only foul hooked far down the tail.

* * * *

Several more threw the hooks, almost as soon as they were set, and again it is Bill Briggs, this time with one that, from his size, should easily hit 90 pounds. Almost 20 jumps, before Bill has him slowed down and fighting under water, then almost up the boat, and the hook pulls out of the hard mouth.

Tomorrow is another day, and if it must run entirely to Bill Briggs, the consensus is he better raise his batting average.

Hardheads Biting in Bay

Big Catches Reported; the Gooses Best Spot.

By Bill Ackerman.

Hardheads continue plentiful at almost every point on the bay, with the Gooses as the probable number one spot. St. Jeromes Creek boats fishing the steamboat channel from Point No Point to Point Lookout have been getting more than their share, with many small sea trout in the catches; a few small bluefish and, some days, catches of rockfish that run as high as 40 to the boat.

In the upper bay, best fishing is still under the Eastern Shore. Midday catches have been small at the "Hilltop," the lump in the mouth of Eastern Bay, but not so with those of the early morning and late evening. Some trout here too, but seldom heavier than 2 or 3 pounds. Catches of rock continue in the early morning hours right after daylight.

Solomons stepped into the bluefish reports this past week with several caught on one of Capt. Vince Langley's boats. Norfolk spot continue as the best inside fishing—within a few weeks the sea trout should be consorting with them.

On the lower Virginia shore, the bluefish have sifted up as far as Westland, for this week brings our first report of them from Capt. Richard Selph—with them a few small cabio. From Gloucester Point and Yorktown—catches of small blues, and plenty of hardheads and sea trout.

At Chincoteague and Wachpreague they have been catching small channel bass. The same is true of North Beach and Fox Hill Levels, but the best fishing is for snapper blues and kingfish.

Farther below, at Cape Charles, the channel bass are running larger, and the boats are taking from 4 to 10 or 12 daily. Plenty of big cabio and sea trout.

Florida Race Group Will Not Help Meade

Jacksonville, Fla., July 14 (AP).—The Florida Racing Commission today declined to reinstate Jockey Don Meade, suspended March 4, 1936, for betting on horses which ran against his own mount.

The commission, which heard pleas in Meade's behalf yesterday, announced its decision without comment.

Meade, top-ranking jockey who rode Broker's Tip to victory in the 1933 Kentucky Derby, was Col. E. R. Bradley's ace rider at the time of his suspension.

He has not ridden on any track since the State commission disqualified him.

Pirates Nose Out Dodgers by 3 to 2 Count

Fitzsimmons Is Beaten in Tough Game

Allows But 2 Hits to 9th; Loses in 11th Frame; Grimes Chased.

By the Associated Press

Pittsburgh, July 14.—The Pirates won a "heartbreaker" 3-to-2 victory over Fat Freddy Fitzsimmons and the Brooklyn Dodgers in 11 innings today to climb half a game in front in the National League pennant race.

Blanked with three hits for eight innings by Freddy's knuckler, the Bucs shoved two runs over in the ninth on a wild pitch, and then won out in the second extra frame when Lee Handley tripled and Lloyd Waner came through with his third single.

Young Jim Tobin, who took over the pitching chores in the ninth after Cy Blanton had been relieved for a pinch-hitter, pitched hitless ball through the final three frames and received credit for his seventh win against three setbacks for the season.

Blanton allowed six hits in his eight-inning trick, but was tagged for both the Dodger runs in the second frame. Lloyd Waner's error, a walk and Lippy Leo Durocher's two-base smash to center produced the tallies.

Brooklyn Manager Burleigh Grimes was given the "heav-o" from a ball game for the fourth time this season when he protested too vigorously a decision by Umpire Bill Klem on a double-play ball in the eighth.

Sandlot Pick-ups

Columbian League slants: Matt Christopher, second baseman; Paul Sapawn, first baseman, and Jack Burke, catcher, each got three hits in three trips to the plate as the Wizard Lock nine defeated the Capital Trash Removers for the peewee title in the sixth annual Columbian League tournament . . . After we had informed you that Natie Brown's Cafe Bombers had captured the insect crown, and that the junior midget championship tilt was to be played during the early part of the week, it was learned that an ineligible player caused a postponement of the junior midget engagement . . . But officials have solved the difficulty, and today at 1 p. m., on the East Ellipse diamond, the Capital Trash Removers and the Cavaliers battle for the junior midget laurels.

* * * *

Perhaps you would like to know the names of the lads, the batting order, the positions and the hitting ability of the players on the championship teams . . . Here they are: Peewee Champs, Wizard Lock . . . Paul Sapawn, first base, .587; Leonard Citrenbaum, shortstop, .587; Matt Christopher, second base, .502; Billy Morris, third base, .473; Jack Burke, catcher, .600; Mike Condor, leftfield, .718; Warren Harris, centerfield, .423; Billy "Bo" Wright, rightfield, .298; Cookie Sperling, pitcher, .280; Junior Hughes, pitcher, .305 . . . No wonder they are champs . . . And incidentally, both of the hurlers are undefeated this season.

Danning Suspended For Breaking Training.

Cincinnati, July 14 (AP).—Harry Danning, first-string catcher of the New York Giants, today was suspended indefinitely without pay for breaking training rules.

Manager Bill Terry of the National League champions announced the suspension, and it was believed he would order Danning back to New York from the Giants' current Western trip. Danning has not caught for the last four games.

The Giants probably will seek to obtain another experienced catcher to assist the veteran Gus Mancuso, only available receiver on the roster at present.

Danning had been one of the mainstays of the Giants' offense this year, batting .317 in 66 games.

Travis Jackson Loses Job at Jersey City

Montreal, July 14 (AP).—Travis Jackson's term as manager of the Jersey City International League Giants ended tonight as the club's parent New York Giants replaced him with Hank Deberry, who has been a scout for the big leaguers.

Jackson, veteran infielder with the New Yorkers until he became manager of the Jersey farm at the start of 1937 season, will confer with Bill Terry, Giants' pilot, over the disposition of his three-year contract, which still has a year and a half to run.

Thomas to Lookouts.

Chattanooga, Tenn., July 14 (AP). Rogers Hornsby, manager of the Chattanooga Lookouts, of the Southern Association, said today Tommy Thomas, veteran pitcher who was with the Boston Red Sox last year, is working out with the Lookouts in an effort to condition himself.

Man of the Month

By Arch McDonald.

(WJSV-Wheaties Baseball Commentator.)

(Each day, Arch McDonald distributes 10 points among the Nats whose play was most helpful to the Washington Club. At the end of each month The Washington Post will award to the leading player a gift in token of the honor of being The Post-Wheaties "Man of the Month.")

To Buddy Lewis, four points, because he made three of the Nats' eight hits against the Indians yesterday and attempted valiantly to put the Nats in the ball game.

To Al Simmons, three points, because his home run in the ninth, one of his two hits, saved the Nats the ignominy of a shut-out.

To Buddy Myer, two points, because he made two of the Nats' hits and played errorless ball in the field despite a badly injured ankle.

To George Case, one point, because his single in the eighth gave the Nats a final chance to start a rally against Mel Harder.

The Score.

2 Horses Killed, 3 Riders Hurt, Long Shot Wins Hagerstown Feature

Miss Adeline, GlowingCoal Die in Crash

Jockeys Root, Machado and Gaither Injured; Wahcoo Pays $33.90.

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Fair Grounds, Hagerstown, Md., July 14.—Two horses were killed, three jockeys were slightly injured, a winner was disqualified, a jockey was suspended for the remainder of the meeting and the feature race was won by the longest shot in the field. All this happened in a day at the races that could not have been more spectacular were it the dream of a Walkathon press agent.

Jockeys Buddy Root, Lou Machado and Alfred Gaither narrowly escaped serious injury in the second race which caused the death of J. E. Crider's Miss Adeline and Mrs. H. R. Jenkins' Glowing Coal.

Root, riding Miss Adeline, had the filly in close quarters soon after the start of the 6½-furlong race. Miss Adeline stumbled and fell, tossing Root among the flying hooves. Root was carried off the track and Miss Adeline arose and galloped the wrong way of the track.

As the horses went around the first time, the riderless Miss Adeline kept near the outside fence and missed the field. The loose filly went around a second time and came into the field as the horses were nearing the wire. Jockey Skeets Holland, riding Small Change in front, swung his mount out of the way but Machado, on Glowing Coal, was unable to do so and Miss Adeline and the Jenkins mare crashed head on.

Machado was thrown several yards down the stretch. Gaither, aboard Acute which was moving up fast, was unable to swing his mount out of the way of the falling pair and Acute tripped and fell.

Miss Adeline's neck was broken and she died instantly. Glowing Coal was destroyed after efforts to revive her failed.

The fourth race, the Hagerstown Handicap, was the feature race and it provided chills for the favorite players and thrills for those who invested in the chances of Wahcoo, a gelding shipped here after a poor showing at Delaware Park. At a $33.90 mutuel, Wahcoo came from behind to win by a head in a photo finish from Baldy. Third money in the field of six went to Caidon. Jockey W. Cook gave the winner a good ride.

†Won but was disqualified.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUSTA JIMMIE, $5.40, $3.70, $2.40; PACKAWAY, $5.30, $3.00; KENNER, $3.20.

CAUTIOUS BO disposed of KENNER to get to front and carried JUSTA JIMMIE to outside fence at final turn for which he was disqualified. JUSTA JIMMIE was rushed up on inside to get to leaders, was rated off pace after a quarter, came to outside of CAUTIOUS BO with good energy and weakened after being fouled. PACKAWAY saved ground while rated and closed with rush. KENNER weakened after being forward factor for three furlongs.

SECOND RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 2:53. Off 2:56. Winner, Bernard Bond's b. g. †Fell.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMALL CHANGE, $4.40, $3.30, $7.40; BEST POLICY, $6.00, $4.10; SHAGGY ANN, $2.90.

SMALL CHANGE, sent to front at once, drew out gradually and won easily. BEST POLICY raced on outside from start and closed gamely. SHAGGY ANN was rushed up on inside, attempted to run out at first turn and was held safe thereafter. MISS ADELINE fell when in close quarters at first turn, ran loose wrong way of track and collided head on with GLOWING COAL in stretch. GLOWING COAL was tiring and second when knocked down. ACUTE was moving up strongly when he tripped over MISS ADELINE and fell.

Daily Double, Justa Jimmie and Small Change, Paid $16.50.

THIRD RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:31. Off 3:33½. Winner, Mrs. T. H. Andrews' br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WAHCOO, $33.90, $22.90, $9.80; BALDY, $4.60, $3.40; CAIDON, $3.40.

WAHCOO, slow to begin and taken to outside for racing room, circled field and was up in concluding strides. BALDY raced RUTH LERNER into defeat and followed close to pace of CAIDON to come gamely for final test, but could not resist winner. CAIDON took command after a quarter, saved ground, but weakened.

FIFTH RACE—About 6½ furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall gates. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:38. Off 4:40. Winner, E. K. Hillman's b. f. †E. Johnston-P. C. Randolph entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MISS EPE, $10.80, $5.80, out; GEMWICK, $4.40, out; DUN LUCKY (entry), out. No show mutuels sold.

MISS EPE, first away, was rated for half and responded to driving tactics to hold GEMWICK safe in closing test. GEMWICK, closest to winner from start, came willingly in closing stages. DUN LUCKY ran along rail in deepest going throughout and closed with good energy under intermittent punishment.

SEVENTH RACE—About 1⅛ miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:35½. Off 5:36½. Winner, Garner Fye's b. g. (7), by J. Fred A—Betsy Brown. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $275; second, $75; third, $35; fourth, $15. Time, 2:01 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JIM BROWN, $5.90, $3.90, $3.10; THE SWAGMAN, $6.10, $3.90; CANYNGE, $4.50.

JIM BROWN, forwardly placed from start, took command when asked, shook off THE SWAGMAN and drew out in closing test. THE SWAGMAN went to front with bold rush and weakened slightly nearing end. CANYNGE, hard ridden, closed gamely. COUNTER PASS moved up with rush in closing quarter, but was held safe.

4 Stars Beaten in Parks Net Play

Upsets Mark Third Round Singles Card

Terpley and Sherbourne Among Casualties; Simmons Loses.

Upsets reigned supreme in the third round of the men's singles division in the Public Parks tennis tournament yesterday at Rock Creek Courts.

No less than four seeded players were upset in yesterday's dizzy developments.

Mel Tarpley, seeded No. 2, was most unexpectedly defeated by Hugh Shelton, 6—4, 6—3. This upset the plans of the tournament authorities, who had eagerly anticipated a Tarpley-Ritzenberg match in the finals. Shelton had complete command of the situation as he stroked his way into the quarter-finals.

In another distinct upset, Bill Burns, unseeded midget netman, trounced Capt. Tom Sherbourne, fourth seeded Fort Myer, Va., Army officer, 8—6, 6—1. Although extended somewhat before he was able to win the first set, Burns rallied in the second set, executing brilliant shots to capture the match.

Perhaps the most thrilling match of the day was played by top-ranking Allie Ritzenberg and Art Simmons, which was won by the former, 8—6, 10—8. Ritzenberg, visibly exhausted after his gruelling match with John Smith, had a difficult time stemming the rapier-like service of Simmons. Many times during the course of the match, after failing to capitalize on a set-up shot, Ritzenberg smashed his racket against the net in disgust.

The women's singles division, which has made rapid strides in progress throughout the week, will be concluded tomorrow at 5 p. m. when Willie O'Steen faces Charlotte Decker. Miss O'Steen earned her place in the finals yesterday by defeating Miss Edith McCulloch, 6—0, 6—2. Miss O'Steen is seeded second and Miss Decker, third, and on the strength of this rating alone, Miss O'Steen will probably be installed as the slight favorite.

The quarterfinals of the men's doubles division were held yesterday with Hy Ritzenberg and Stan Heney teaming to defeat Pat Deck and John Smith, 6—3, 6—3. The other match found Deane Judd and Bob Bradley disposing of Joe Baker and Tait Doyle.

YESTERDAY'S RESULTS.
Men's Singles.

Cubs Win 2 From Phils

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—The Chicago Cubs broke their six-game losing streak today with fine pitching by Clay Bryant and Bill Lee to defeat the Philadelphia Phillies, 3 to 0 and 5 to 1, in both ends of a double-header before 9,581. Bryant allowed three hits in the opener and Lee five in the nightcap.

Busy Links Card Seen

A couple of handicap events, a sweepstakes and a mixed Scotch foursome besides various other club cups events are listed so far on the local golf card over the week-end.

Congressional has scheduled a handicap event for men tomorrow and will follow up with a mixed Scotch foursome on Sunday. Beaver Dam will stage an 18-hole handicap for women tomorrow and one for men on Sunday.

Yesterday's only activity at Washington Golf and Country Club found I. B. Munsan trimming Col. C. L. Pinker, 4 and 3, in a second round Horton Cup match.

The Cosmopolitan Club golfers saw A. Hamilton Wilson pocket low net prize with an 81-13—68, at Kenwood Club yesterday, while Robert W. McChesney snatched low gross honors with an 86.

John Reilly, Dr. Francis Murray and Maurice A. Colbert shared blind bogey prizes three ways with net 73s.

Shhh, Don't Tell O'Mahoney— But Ernie Dusek's a Nice Guy

'It Don't Pay to Be a Gentleman in the Ring!' the Wrestler Tells Us—Maybe He's Right.

By Lewis F. Atchison.

We knocked out a piece of the sports department wall last night and admitted Ernie Dusek, a senior partner in the riot-provoking firm of Dusek, Dusek, Dusek & Dusek, who was touring the town with Promoter Joe Turner after his scheduled match with Danno O'Mahoney was postponed until tonight because of an unfavorable weather report.

At first glance Ernie gives you the impression of being as broad as tall, and a swell citizen in private life. A second glance confirms your suspicions. The guy you've secretly wanted to dissect with a meat cleaver isn't bad at all, personally. But he gives you to understand politeness doesn't pay in the ring, and for that reason he's the snarling, vicious character you know.

"My brother Rudy was a clean wrestler when he started out," Ernie said, with Turner vouching for the statement. "And what happened? Why, he almost got his brains beat out by them other guys. They kneed, gouged, choked and punched him so much he had to do something to protect himself. So he started giving them their own medicine, and when he does the fans start yelling, 'Dirty Dusek, dirty Dusek.' It was all right for the other guys to do it, but not Rudy—he was just supposed to take it.

Started Out "Clean."

"All my brothers and myself started out as clean wrestlers, and we'd still be clean if the others didn't try to take advantage of us. Look at me, d'ya think I got this cauliflower ear answering telephones? That's from those mugs beatin' on it, grabbing it and trying to twist it off. And my nose is in worse condition inside than the ear. It's been mashed like a potato, and it's really in bad shape."

We felt his ear and can vouch for its condition. It feels like it got caught in a washing-machine wringer one Monday when his mother wasn't looking. We would not, of course, investigate his nose, but judged from the thrashing machine-like sounds emitting therefrom, that it wasn't exactly all it should be. There's no doubt about it, Ernie has absorbed more than a few hard knocks during his career.

Modern Sport's Tough.

Modern wrestling, in his opinion—and here again Joe Turner, who should know, concurs—is much harder on a man than the old sport. He points to the sudden demise of a few wrestlers—Mike Romano and Ed Browning, to name two—as proof that it taxes the body to the extreme.

Yes, Ernie would like to start all over again and be a good, clean wrestler. It's easier, for one thing, and a lot safer.

"I'd like to try it again," he admitted, "but I can't because the fans would think I was quitting on them. I did it one night and after booing about 15 minutes they walked out on me. No, I can't go back to that. I've got to be rough and tough and bounce 'em around, because if the fans don't object the other guy's sure to give me the works. They've got you going and coming."

About O'Mahoney? Why, he's just a kid. Ernie promises to throw him up into the leftfield bleachers for a home run tonight. See if he doesn't.

Miss Bishopp Out of Play

Favorite Defaults in Playground Net.

A surprise default yesterday by Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, of Takoma Playground, stripped the Department of Playgrounds' annual girls singles tennis tournament of its favorite and left the field to a handful of experienced players and a flock of unknowns.

Miss Bishopp, University of Maryland co-ed, gave "other tournaments" as the reason for her failure to appear for a match with Margaret Duffy, of Chevy Chase. She was beaten Wednesday in a Public Parks match.

Last year she was defeated in the finals by Lucille McDowell, of Burroughs, who was prevented from defending her laurels by the 19-year age limit. Miss Bishopp's withdrawal left Miss Duffy, George Washington University sophomore, among the top ranking players as the field moved into the fourth round of play.

The latter faces Annette Goldman, of Park View. Lane Hart, of Raymond, gave Miss Goldman a stubborn fight yesterday before bowing, 7—5, 6—4.

The day's other feature match pits pretty Shirley Combs, of Happy Hollow, against Viola Collins, of Georgetown. Miss Combs and Miss Duffy, along with Betty Jacobs, of Montrose, and Harriett Williams, of Chevy Chase, are given about an even chance of taking Miss McDowell's vaunted championship.

Anna Liegus (Georgetown) defeated Genevieve Herbert (Hamilton), 6—2, 6—3.
Eleanor Yoder (Raymond) defeated Vernice Groiman (Park View), 6—0, 6—0.
Nancy Roeice (Montrose) defeated Betty Love (Chevy Chase), 6—2, 6—1.
Viola Collins (Georgetown) defeated Ann Oakley (Palisades), 6—0, 6—0.
Shirley Combs (Happy Hollow) defeated Harriet Gordon (Montrose), 8—6, 8—6.
Margaret Duffy (Chevy Chase) defeated Hazel Bishopp (Takoma), by default.
Edith Goodwin (Raymond) defeated Mary Gra/ (Twin Oaks), by default.
Dorothy Keady (Georgetown) defeated Martha Lanaham (Hamilton), 6—0, 6—0.
Alba Wainwright (Park View) defeated Betty Rowley (Takoma), 6—1, 6—1.
Winnie Lake (Twin Oaks) defeated Toola Groves (Raymond), 6—2, 6—1.
Helen McDaniel (Georgetown) defeated Rosemary Taylor (Palisades), 6—2, 6—2.
Irma Dean (Garfield) defeated Dorothy McCauley (Burroughs), 6—0, 6—0.
Helen Espey (McMillan) defeated Mary Adriani (Sherwood), 6—0, 6—0.
Dorothy Kibler (Burroughs) defeated Phillis Davis (Va. Ave.), 6—3, 6—4.
Marjorie O'Connor (Rosedale) defeated Mary Francis Lohr (Garfield), 4—6, 6—0, 6—4.

Cal Cagney Signed for Preliminary

Meets Mamakos Monday in Eight-Round Bout at the Ball Park.

Cal Cagney, a sharp-shooting welterweight who began life as Emil Calcagni and has carved an enviable reputation for himself during his youthful career, has been added to the card for Monday night's ring show featuring Pete Scalzo and Tony Dupre at Griffith Stadium.

His opponent will be the popular Steve Mamakos, southwest Washington's Golden Greek, and at one time considered a great prospect. It will be an eight-round, "special attraction," and from any angle it looks like a good scrap.

Cagney, who campaigned on the Pacific Coast with marked success and came East to accumulate a string of victories, has recently come from under the management of astute Al Weill. The short, chunky pilot believes his newest protege may be his next champion, and has ample reason for such confidence in the lad.

Cagney fights like Mamakos and hits harder than the Greek, who appears to have lost the punch he once possessed as an amateur. Cagney keeps both mittens going fan-fashion, just as Steve does, and is as rugged as the Southwest boy. Which would indicate that their bout may take a little play away from the top attraction.

Scalzo, meanwhile, has joined Lew Ambers at Madam Bey's Camp, while Dupre is putting the finishing licks to his preparations at Stillman's Gym, New York.

Joey Archibald and Mike Belloise have been tentatively rematched for a 15-round bout at Dyckman's Oval, New York City, August 1. Glowing reports of their battle here last Monday night, plus Al Weill's effort to have his boy ranked as the No. 1 challenger, are responsible for the return meeting.

Bees Wallop Cards, 10-5

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 14.—The Boston Bees swarmed on four Cardinal hurlers today for their second 10-to-5 victory in as many days over the remnants of the once mighty Gas House Gang.

Lou Fette showed flashes of his old form in holding the Cardinals to two hits for the first five innings and then eased up after his mates had established a 4-run lead.

The Rainbow Room's Dance Orchestra

Capital Night Clubs

By Mary Harris

After destroying innumerable pencil points, marking up the backs of too many drink lists, losing our tempers twice, Milton Davis, leader of the Rainbow Room orchestra, and your columnist figured out that anyone who trips every number at the Rainbow supper dance travels 3¼ miles. We figured on 1,920 steps of 1½ feet to each of the six dance groups, reduced it to yards, rods, miles, cubic feet and liters, and if your correspondent never sees another figure it will be too soon.

Fritz Maile (violinist-arranger for Johnny Slaughter's Metronome Room outfit) who we reported as passing his bar exam, has just landed his first case—a divorce matter. He's trying to patch the rift. Fritz, your heart's in the right place, but we fear you're making an error in judgment.

That high wire act of Diaz and Powers on the Shoreham Terrace is just as dangerous as it looks. The boy of the pair, Powers, spent a couple of months in a plaster cast last year after a fall. There's nerve for you.

Note.—That wasn't Commissioner Melvin Hazen with George Marshall and Maj. Perry Heath on the Terrace the other eve, as we reported. It was Jesse Jones, head of the RFC. Commissioner Hazen was with his attractive young niece. How can we do such things?

Recent thrill in the Mayflower Lounge was the appearance of Maria Grever, composer of "Ti-Pi-Tin." She sang her new and yet unpublished Spanish song, "Te Amare Siempre" with the Sidney Orchestra.

Marty Emerson, slick trombonist with Bill Strickland's Dixieland Swingers at the Lotus, used to play with Gene Krupa and Tommy Dorsey. But he's now under contract to Mr. Strickland who knows a good thing when he sees (hears) it.

Our last word on "Flat Foot Flugie" is that "Tiny" Meeker is doing it as a flat foot dance on the Powhatan Roof.

Hi-Hat has taken "Miss Hi-Hat" (Maxine Moore) to its bosom again after that terrible 24 hours when her age was in doubt. Her parents settled that by producing a birth certificate proving that she is a full 18 with a coupla months to spare. Maxine's the coolleen type, but streamlined. carols sweetly, pianos neatly, tap dances impishly, has that "come hither" in her eyes—but that last doesn't mean a thing.

Seen at Hi-Hat: Radio Announcer Gordon Hittenmark, Newsman Jay Franklin, Mr. and Mrs. Morris Cafritz, she swathed in white fox.

Evelyn Knight, now singing both in French and Espanol at the King Cole Room, says that Spanish comes easy but the proper intoning of those French vowels leaves her dizzy, not to say breathless.

Probably the most unusual graphophone record of the year has just been made by Johnny Shaw and the Madrillon orchestra. The platter was done for the American Friends of Spanish Democracy and one side has the Madrilloners playing "Hymn de Riego," preceded by a short speech by Peter Borras, head of the local A. S. F. D. the reverse being given over to a speech by the Spanish Ambassador, Senor Fernando de los Rios.

Mayfair patrons are calling for light classics on the piano, says Frances Gill, one customer bringing in a list of a dozen for her to play. Pets are Kreisler's "Caprice Viennois" and the "Valse Bluette" so often played by Heifetz. They also like trick pieces like "Kitten on the Keys."

A level-headed kid is Howard Beck, whose "Parade of Youth" band has been pulling customers to Glen Echo these ten days. "We use swing, but try to generally stick on the sweet side," says Howard, "because I notice that type of band lasts longest in popularity and commercial value." Wise boy.

Herbie Holmes and his orchestra will debut at Echo on Monday. Herbie hails from the black bottoms of the Mississippi Delta. His music should be Deep South, and definitely.

Jack Torry has just added maracas, gourds and clavelitos to his orchestra equipment at Brinkley's. This means not only more tangos, but that maraca beat in hot swing music.

Only Chinese palmist in the country is Prof. Pango, holding forth at Bamboo Gardens. He's won our eternal gratitude by prophesying that we'll not pass off this mortal coil until we reach a ripe 70. (Providing, the Professor amended, that we survive attacks of fits, paralysis, what-nots, that we'll have at five-year intervals, beginning at age 50. Well, what's life without a few fits?) The professor was born on the West Coast, studied his palmistry in South China, where Indian mysticism has penetrated. He's not interested in your giving him leads on your life. The palm tells all to the Professor, well—practically all.

Gaily pretty, pleasantly cool is the "Good Time Room" at Show Boat. It's done in blue and the palest yellow with chromium furnishings. Scattered silver stars glitter back of the bandstand. The floor is covered with black and copper-colored composition, except for the dancing space of polish hardwood.

Manuel Bofill, leader of the Filipino orchestra at Griffith Farms, can play a steel guitar with one hand. But you'll need both hands to handle one of those monumental duck dinners offered by Tom O'Donnell.

Sunstroke Is Fatal.

Danville, Va., July 14.—The first death from the heat in this section this year was reported today from Henry County. Uriah Gillians at work on a rural subdivision was taken ill suddenly and died three hours later of a sunstroke.

Wheat Drops 3½ Cents in Selling Flood

Loan Plans at First Result in 2-Cent Rise.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 14.—Overwhelmed by waves of selling after Government-loan plans had been studied, wheat tumbled 3½ cents here today and more than 4 cents at Winnipeg.

The fall came when the Chicago market had temporarily jumped about 2 cents from earlier moderate declines that preceded announcement of the Government's proposals. At first, the loan plans were generally construed as likely to be a stimulus to higher prices. Later, the complexities of the Government plans became more and more apparent, and selling rushes ensued, with the day's bottom prices current just before trading was ended.

At the close, Chicago wheat futures were ⅞ to 2 cents lower than yesterday's finish; July, 71⅝@71¾; September, 72@72⅛. Corn, 1⅜ to 2 cents down; July, 58⅞; September, 60⅜@60½. Oats, ¼ to ⅜ off. Rye showing 1 cent drop, and provisions unchanged to 17 cents setback.

Odd-Lot Sales Exceed Buying

Selling orders of small traders on the New York Stock Exchange exceeded buying orders by a small margin in the week ended July 9.

The Securities Commission reported yesterday that customers' odd-lot orders to sell during that week totaled 47,424, involving 1,276,041 shares valued at $37,328,116. This compared with 46,514 buying orders involving 1,291,952 shares valued at $38,641,326.

Gold and Silver Imports Unchanged

The United States imported $55,438,042 of gold and $19,185,719 or silver in June.

Imports were about the same as in previous months. Gold shipments included $11,520,000 from Sweden, $20,598,807 from England and $5,261,811 from Japan. Silver imports included $12,900,000 from China and $3,246,235 from Mexico.

Idle Funds Rise Over 3 Billion

Federal Reserve Board announced yesterday idle money in banks had passed $3,000,000,000 for the first time in two years.

In the week ended July 13, excess reserves increased $160,000,000 to $3,150,0000.

The increase was attributed to a $70,000,000 decrease in money in circulation and a disbursement by the Treasury of $142,000,000 of its Federal Reserve deposits.

Brokers' Loans Drop $41,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that last week's loans to brokers and dealers on securities held by reporting member banks in New York City totaled $496,000,000. The week ended Wednesday and the total represented a decrease of $41,000,000 when compared with the previous week.

Loans for the corresponding week a year ago totaled $1,147,000,000.

Bank Clearings Drop 14.1% Under Year Ago

Decline From Previous Week Is 16.1 Per Cent.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 14.—Volume of bank clearings for 22 leading cities for the week July 13 as reported to Dun & Bradstreet, amounted to $4,996,659,000, against $5,816,126,000 for the same 1937 week, a decrease of 14.1 per cent.

In a similar comparison for the July 6 week the drop was 16.1 per cent. New York clearings fell to $3,074,878,000 from $3,553,789,000 a year ago, or a difference of 13.5 per cent.

With the exception of Seattle, which advanced 13.5 per cent, all outside cities reported declines from a year ago, the more important being: Detroit, 33.5 per cent; Pittsburgh, 31.2 per cent; Kansas City, 26.1 per cent; Buffalo, 19.1 per cent; Cleveland, 17.7 per cent; St. Louis, 16.9 per cent; Boston, 15.2 per cent, and Chicago, 14.9 per cent.

The Washington Clearing House reported total clearings of $23,963,051.58 for the week ended Wednesday, which compares with $25,323,268.38 for the corresponding period a year ago, a decrease of 5.4 per cent. Compared with a total of $23,586,659.44 for the previous week clearings increased $376,392.14.

Cigarette Industry Employment Gains

The Commerce Department yesterday reported an increase in both production and employment in the cigarette industry. Production in 1937 was valued at $968,857,634, a 20.1 per cent gain over the $806,690,052 reported in 1935.

The number of wage earners employed by the industry increased 6.9 per cent from 24,447 in 1935 to 26,146 in 1937, while their earnings increased 32 per cent from $18,314,976 in 1935 to $24,175,759.

Associated Output.

New York, July 14.—A decline of 4,857,807 units, or 5.9 per cent, brought net electric output of Associated Gas & Electric System to 78,063,711 units for the week ended July 8, 1938. Gross output, including sales to other utilities, amounted to 83,270,657 units for the week.

Stocks Opened Weak With Mid-Day Rally Fading at the Close and Shares Close Lower.

New York, July 14.—The precipitate drop of share prices in the final hour Wednesday had the effect of making traders and operators more cautious today, particularly on the long side. A weak opening was followed by a series of backing and filling movements, a rally around noon petered out in due order and the close found most of the favorites quite a bit lower.

Volume dried up drastically as quotations were marked down, the turnover of 1,150,970 shares being around 56 per cent less than transfers the day before, and the lowest big board total in some weeks.

Wheat Steals the Show.

Wheat markets stole the show from the Stock Exchange with spectacular price movements up and down. Prior to announcement of the Federal loan figures, speculative buying had boosted values 2 cents a bushel. While the 59 to 60 cent loan rate was what the markets had been expecting, selling developed promptly after the news came out. This was in part explained by lack of definite knowledge of official base prices at seaboard, but more by the London advices that the world is being faced with a grave overproduction crisis.

Conference Report.

The wheat committee conference, attended by 13 nations and presided over by Joseph P. Kennedy, the United States Ambassador, estimated world yield of 5,049,000,000 bushels, with probable world consumption of 4,755,000,000 bushels. Out of the same conference came the opinion that 250,000,000 bushels of wheat may be left on the hands of the Federal Government.

No doubt the thought that industrial workers of the country as well as busines interests will ultimately have to foot the bill of aid to the farm population, not only by payment of higher domestic prices for food, but in higher taxes necessitated by the huge agricultural appropriations, may have been a damper on the urge to acquire securities.

Foreign exchange dealings slowed down to a snail's pace, with changes in quotations of a negative character.

Active Stocks.

Some fair-sized blocks of stock changed hands at the opening, including 2,500 shares of U. S. Steel at 56, off ⅛, and 1,500 shares of Bethlehem, off a point. Steel common made a slight recovery before the end of the session. Chrysler, again the most active, slipped a point to 65 and U. S. Rubber, Anaconda, General Motors, New York Central, Montgomery Ward and Republic Steel, other actives, were down fractions or more.

Sharper dips occurred in Allied Chemical, Woolworth, Westingmoh Chemical, Woolworth, Westinghouse, Johns Manville, National Steel, Du Pont, Atchison and a number of others. The composite of the 100 stocks was 0.46 point lower.

Bonds Drift Downward.

Listed bonds turned downward today in a quiet market. United States Treasury and other money market issues were hardly affected, but liquidaton in the more speculative securities continued gently, and caused some sizable losses in the absence of any buying interest. Hudson & Manhattan bonds gained in response to the permission for increase of the fare to New Jersey. Secondary and default rails drifted lower. Turnover was only $6,950,000, against $8,730,000 the previous day.

Treasury Issues Steady.

Treasury bonds hovered around previous levels, and the guaranteed issues of the Farm and Home corporations also were idle and unchanged. Among best utility, railroad and industrial bonds small fractional losses were the rule, although some bonds held their ground. Bankers were immersed in the distribution of the new issue of Southwestern Bell Telephone bonds, which went exceedingly well.

Hudson & Manhattan bonds were active and 2 to 4 points up on the fare incident. Interborough issues held well, but B. M. T. 4½s fell 2 points. Among the speculative rails declines ranged from fractions to 2 points. Rail and utility holding company securities were soft, and commodity issues also tumbled in the general downswing. Industrial convertibles lost some of the ground gained in the week.

Foreigns Irregular.

European and Latin-American default bonds were irregular, with changes small in all cases. Japanese and Italian issues held around previous levels, while Polish bonds rallied. High-grade foreigns were dull and unchanged.

Westinghouse Contract.

Pittsburgh, July 14 (AP).—The Westinghouse Electric & Manufacturing Co. said today it had received contracts, totaling approximately $1,7000,000, for the construction of electrical equipment for ten new 100-mile-an-hour passenger locomotives on the Pennsylvania Railroad between Harrisburg, Pa., New York and Washington.

"The Timid Soul" by Webster Appears in Sunday's Post.

Bob Burns Says—

Some people have an idea that us natives from Arkansas are easy prey for "gold brick salesmen" and other confidence men. That might've been true in the old days, but we have gotten preyed on so much that we have gotten to be the most skeptical people in the world and when those fast talkin' salesmen fellas start workin' on us we freeze up on 'em.

I have an uncle who had a chronic case of chills and when he was out here he went to see a specialist about it. When the specialist got enthusiastic and said that for a certain sum he could cure my uncle's chills over night, my uncle says: "No, I've been shakin' with the chills for 40 years and I'm afraid a sudden change wouldn't be good for me."

Driver Seized After Cyclist Dies in Crash

Victim Hurled 43 Feet; 7 Hurt in Accident in Maryland.

A motorcycle which skidded 78 feet after throwing its rider caused the city's forty-third traffic death yesterday. There were 57 deaths this date last year.

Willie Biggs, 26, colored of 1119 O street northwest, was thrown 43 feet through the air after his motorcycle collided with a truck at Eighteenth and Kalorama road northwest. He died in Garfield Hospital five hours later.

Police said they would hold John H. Fortune, 28, colored, of 1319 Corcoran street northwest, driver of the truck with which Biggs collided, for action of a coroner's jury.

Seven persons were injured, three seriously, in another accident when their car ran off the road, dropped over an embankment and crashed against a telegraph pole on the Largo road, near the Marlboro pike.

Two Inquests Scheduled.

Meanwhile, Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald scheduled inquests for today in the traffic deaths of Mrs. Fay Robertson Roeca, 54, of Covington, Ky., who died Tuesday at Georgetown Hospital, and Mrs. Bessie Goldman, 80, 4120 Fourteenth street northwest, who died June 27.

Injured in the Maryland accident were Edward H. Halkamp, 49, and his son, Edward H. Halkamp, jr., of 1361 Euclid street northwest; Edwin R. Newton, 45, and his son, Randolph R. Newton, 7, 39 U street northeast; Robert B. Lord, 45, 2012 Fourth street northeast; John Mitchell, 14, 3923 Seventh street northwest, and Aloysuis Steele, 10, Arlington, Va.

Police reported the seven left Washington yesterday for a fishing party at Shady Side, Md. At a point where repairs were being made on the Largo road, police said, Lord, driver of the car, swerved to avoid hitting a "Men Working" sign. The car dropped off the shoulder, overturned several times down a 25-foot embankment and broke the telegraph pole off at the base. The car was demolished.

Three Hurt Seriously.

All were brought to Washington by the Marlboro Rescue Squad and admitted to Casualty Hospital after treatment by Dr. J. R. Young. Dr. Young said the most seriously injured were the Newton boy, who suffered a fractured skull and injuries to his chest; Halkamp, who suffered fractures of the skull and pelvis, and his son, who suffered internal injuries.

Halkamp is chief of the communications section at the Bureau of Internal Revenue, while both Lord and Newton are employed in the section.

Six-year-old Wayne Waugh, 1200 Twelfth street northwest, narrowly escaped injury when he fell in front of a truck driven by Robert S. Myers, colored, 32, of 1760 Oregon avenue northwest. He suffered only scratches as the truck swung to avoid him.

WPA Will Hire 118 For Census Bureau

Two WPA projects in the Capital which will give jobs to 118 white collar workers were announced yesterday by Otto Cas, deputy WPA administrator. Both projects are for the Census Bureau and will continue for a year.

One amounts to $89,500 and will provide 98 jobs in map measuring, while the other amounts to $18,100 and sets up 20 jobs in indexing Census Bureau publications.

Snail Couple Awaits Parenthood at Zoo

The female giant snail at the Washington Zoo laid about 50 eggs—in right-hand corner—but Zoo officials are doubtful they will hatch. She and her mate are shown nonchalantly nibbling at their lunch.

Giant Snails at D. C. Zoo Show Little Interest in Coming Event

The Washington Zoo soon may have its first baby giant snails.

Roy Jennier was a much surprised reptile house keeper yesterday when he discovered approximately 50 "navy beans" beneath a log in the giant snails' cage.

They weren't beans at all, of course, but eggs, first of their kind ever to be laid here.

Pure white and with hard shells, the eggs are much smaller than the label on the exhibit says they should be. Jennier admitted that, in view of developments, something will have to be done about that phrase which says giant snail eggs are nearly an inch long.

The parents of the potential infants weren't paying much attention to the "beans" yesterday. Certainly they were far less solicitous than were Mollie and Moe, the penguins, when they were expecting a brood.

Jennier said he doubts very much that the eggs will hatch.

Papa and mama giant snail are from West Africa. Their fancy name is Achatina variegata and each is about the size of a cantaloupe.

The stork may be only tantalizing them but he meant business yesterday in the case of Mr. and Mrs. Blue Sheep. A baby was born to them about 9:50 a. m. This particular variety of sheep is rare in captivity, the parents having been brought to the United States last September in the National Geographic-Smithsonian expedition to the Orient.

Owner Is Burned As Blaze Destroys Suburban Home

An oil stove explosion and resulting fire yesterday destroyed the home of L. E. Johnston, River road, near Wilson lane, Maryland.

Flames from the blast spread quickly through the two-story frame house and before firemen arrived the blaze was beyond control. Johnston, who lived in the house with his daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Brazerner, was in the front yard when the explosion occurred.

He rushed into the blazing kitchen to rescue personal belongings, but was forced to retreat because of the intense heat. He suffered minor burns of the face and hands. His daughter and her husband were away.

Firemen from Bethesda, Glen Echo and Cabin John battled the flames for several hours. Johnston estimated his loss at $8,000. He carried no insurance.

George Riley Here Before World Trip

George V. Riley, former manager of the Wardman Park and Carlton Hotels here, returned to the city yesterday to make farewells before starting a world tour of 28 countries boosting the New York World's Fair.

After being fingerprinted by J. Edgar Hoover, chief of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, he said he was going to make his trip "the hard way" and take five months.

Riley is now manager of the Hotel New Yorker in New York City. In foreign countries he will express in behalf of George Davis, president of the United States Chamber of Commerce, "optimism on business conditions which are definitely on the upgrade." He sails from Vancouver, B. C., for the Orient.

2 'Dangerous' Patients Recaptured by Hospital

Two mental patients, who escaped Walter Reed Hospital yesterday, were back in their ward last night after a few minutes of freedom.

Described as "dangerous," the fugitives escaped by using benches to scale the wall. Metropolitan police were asked to aid in a search for them. But they were captured less than 15 minutes after their escape.

Hearing Scheduled On Gas Rate Cuts

A public hearing to determine whether any excess profits are available for gas rate reductions was scheduled yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission for next Tuesday, beginning at 10 a. m.

Commission accountants have not completed their examination of the books of the Washington Gas Light Company, but indications are that there will be little or no money available for rate cuts.
